Panzers Drive Beyond Minsk; U. S. to Draft 900,000 More; FBI Rounds Up 29 as Spies

Both Houses Must Work Overtime On Fund Bills

End of Fiscal Year Finds Over 3 Billion To Be Appropriated For Many Purposes

Racing against a midnight deadline at the end of the fiscal year, both Houses of Congress will work overtime today in an effort to complete action providing nearly $3,250,000,000 of funds and authority for various Government agencies in the next 12 months.

Afterward, both Houses will take a long holiday for the Fourth of July, in contrast with Government employes, restricted by President Roosevelt to one day off on the Nation's anniversary.

The Senate is expected to recess this evening until Thursday, then immediately take another recess until Monday, in effect a six-day holiday. The House, also postponing consideration of controversial measures, plans to recess Thursday until Monday, giving members four days off.

Facing the legislators today, however, are the $1,340,000,000 Agriculture Department bill, the $936,390,000 relief measure, the District of Columbia's $54,795,000 appropriation bill, a $24,567,000 legislative money measure, the $894,221,000 deficiency defense bill including funds for 2,336 new Navy planes and a measure extending the life of the Commodity Credit Corporation.

Session Starts Early

Both Houses will convene an hour early, at 11 a. m., and may sit until after nightfall.

A Senate-House deadlock over a $50,000,000 fund for the food stamp plan was threatening to block final approval of the farm and relief bill. Acting Senate Majority Leader Byrnes, of South Carolina, told the Associated Press that unless a compromise can be worked out Congress might adopt resolutions permitting the Agriculture Department and the Relief Administration to continue expenditures temporarily at the rate fixed in this year's supply bills.

Senators are insisting on an increase of at least $35,000,000 in the sum voted by the House for disposal of surplus farm commodities, including operation of the food stamp plan. The Senate also wrote a $50,000,000 increase for the same purpose into the relief bill. It now must induce the House to accept one of the increases and the two Houses must decide in which bill the increase shall remain.

Strike, Power Fight Off

House consideration of the Selective Service Act amendments, which include proposals to broaden the Administration's powers in dealing with strike bottlenecks in defense production, has been definitely postponed until July 8. This measure has aroused vigorous opposition from all major factions of organized labor.

The Senate likewise has put off until the beginning of next week debate on the bill to enable the Administration to requisition real and personal property for defense purposes. Despite modification to which the Administration has assented since this proposal was advanced in sweeping form by the War Department, the measure is expected to arouse controversy.

Platter Chatter Series About Men

The Post food editor says: "A woman usually must plan meals to please a man. To make her job easier, I am going to get the men to tell me what they like best and how they like it cooked." She found the men welcomed the opportunity — even busy ones, like the Secretary of Agriculture, who heads the list in this interesting series. Turn to page 13.

New York, June 29.—Eighty-year-old Ignace Jan Paderewski, dean of pianists and a founder of the Polish government which was created at the end of the World War, died tonight in his hotel suite, an exile from his again dismembered native land.

Death was due to pneumonia and came after he had been ill four days.

DiMaggio Sets Consecutive Hitting Mark

A crowd of 31,000 packed Griffith Stadium to see Joe DiMaggio make baseball history as the New York Yankees defeated the Nats in a double-header, 9-4 and 7-5, yesterday.

DiMaggio's bit consisted of hitting safely in his forty-first and forty-second consecutive games, the first tying a record set by George Sisler, of the St. Louis Browns in 1922, and the second setting a new mark.

Johnson Leads, O'Daniel 2d In Texas Race

Representative Lyndon Johnson maintained a 4,500 lead through Sunday's vote counting in the Texas election to name a successor to the late Senator Morris Sheppard.

Gov. Lee O'Daniel still was running second, more than 25,000 ahead of Attorney General Gerald C. Mann, while Representative Martin Dies was a poor fourth in the count. All of the State's 254 counties had been heard from and the count in 118 of them was complete.

New Suspect In Sex Cases Is Captured

Colored Captive Will Be Quizzed in Strieff Slaying; Seized After Annoying Women

Police captured a suspected sex maniac yesterday after three women who were accosted drove him off with their screams.

The suspect, a 26-year-old colored man, was caught by a motorcycle policeman after a chase through Judiciary Square.

The arrest took place after two youths informed a policeman they had seen the accused man elude a pursuer, and later attempt to molest women in downtown Washington.

Faces Quiz in Strieff Case

Detectives who questioned the suspect said that he lived in the 1500 block of Corcoran Street Northwest, two blocks from the alley behind the 1700 block of Corcoran Street, where the body of Miss Jessie Elizabeth Strieff was found two weeks ago today. Miss Strieff, pretty, 21-year-old War Department employe, was the victim of a sex fiend.

Steps were taken immediately to check the suspect's record and fingerprints, and to determine whether he had any connection with the slaying of Miss Strieff. He faces a thorough questioning today by members of the extraordinary detective squad still seeking the Strieff killer.

At about 3:15 p. m. the suspect attempted to seize a young woman asleep on the grass at Seventh Street and Constitution Avenue. Her screams aroused her boy friend, who was nearby, and he unsuccessfully chased the man around the Archives Building.

Two Join Chase

Two other young men, Ernest Pier, 1007 Monroe Street Northwest, and Dallas Acres, 516 Sixth Street Northwest, who witnessed the chase, took up the trail on learning what was afoot.

A few minutes later, the suspect accosted four girls in front of the Archives Building, again breaking into a run when one girl screamed as he grabbed at her arm.

The two youths were still behind, they told police, when the accoster lunged at a girl on the streetcar loading platform at Seventh Street and Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest. When she too screamed, the colored man ran up Indiana Avenue, and as he raced past Police Headquarters at Fourth and Indiana, Pier and Acres, still in pursuit, encountered Traffic Policeman A. S. Yowaiski just getting off his cycle. He took up the chase and captured the suspect in Judiciary Square, a block away.

Police last night urged that the women communicate with headquarters, so that they may appear tonight when the suspect is placed in a lineup. The suspect, police asserted, admitted molesting the three.

The partially decomposed body of a 16-year-old colored girl was found yesterday under a locker room mattress in the basement of Trinity Towers, 3023 Fourteenth Street Northwest. She was later identified as Mabel Everett, of 421 Columbia Road Northwest, who had been reported as missing last week.

A colored man, who at one time was janitor in the apartment house and who is alleged to have been the girl's boy friend, is being sought for questioning.

Two New Decorations

By George Bookman
Post Staff Writer

Hyde Park, N. Y., June 29.—President Roosevelt today ordered that 900,000 men, the maximum allowed by law, be inducted into Selective Service in the next 12 months.

White House aides said the order meant that most of the 650,000 now in training will be released when their one-year term is over, unless Congress changes the Selective Service law to permit more than 900,000 selectives to be under arms at any one time.

Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff, said recently that the Army plans to retain under arms only a few specialists among the trainees.

The Presidential decision to maintain the Selective Service system at full strength was taken as an indication that he foresees no early relaxation of the war crisis.

Two New Decorations

At the same time Mr. Roosevelt, who is weekending at his Hudson Valley family home here, took these other steps to spur the American defense effort:

1. He created two military decorations, an American Defense Service Medal and a Good Conduct Medal, to be awarded to deserving members of the armed forces during the current emergency.

2. He signed a bill providing $150,000,000 for construction of such public services as schools, water works, hospitals, roads and recreation facilities near the national defense "boom towns" that have mushroomed in every section of the country during the last year.

3. He created a new Office of Scientific Research and Development, within the structure of the Office of Emergency Management, and named Dr. Vannevar

22 Espionage Suspects Are German-Born, Hoover Says

Copyright by New York Times

New York, June 29.—The arrest of 26 men and 3 women, 22 of them German, on charges of conspiracy to undermine national defense by acting as spies, was announced here tonight by J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

The roundup, described by Hoover as "the greatest of its kind in the Nation's history," was made on the instructions of Francis Biddle, acting United States Attorney General. Eighteen were arrested in the New York area and will be arraigned this morning before a United States Commissioner in Brooklyn, where most of the activities of the ring were said to have been concentrated. Four were taken into custody in New Jersey, one in Michigan and one in Wisconsin. All will be brought to Brooklyn for arraignment. The remaining five are already in prison for other crimes.

The arrests, made by Government agents in quick raids Saturday and yesterday, climaxed more than two years of work on the case.

Germany Not Named

Hoover charged that confidential information that concerned many phases of national defense, including factories that produced munitions, planes, tanks and defense materials as well as latest military devices, was sought by members of the spy ring. He said they were "extremely" alert in obtaining information concerning shipment of cargoes to Great Britain and the departure time of the vessels carrying war supplies.

The Government agents saw to it that much of the information was of no value to those who were transmitting it abroad. Hoover did not name Germany as the foreign power for which the information was intended but said the ring members were in communication "with representatives of a foreign country."

Some of the ring, Hoover said, acted as couriers and traveled to and from belligerent countries on transatlantic planes of the Italian airline operating to South America, as well as on United States flag steamships and on ships of other neutral countries.

Hoover asserted that the ring used a short-wave radio and messages written in secret inks. The FBI reported that a complete short-wave radio set was found in the Bronx apartment of Alex Wheeler-Hill, one of those arrested, who is a brother of James Wheeler-Hill, spokesman for and confidant of Fritz Kuhn, former leader of the German-American Bund.

The members of the spy ring, according to Hoover, were paid with

4,107 Red Planes And 2,233 Tanks Blasted in Week, Germans Claim

(Communiques on Page 2.)

By the Associated Press

Berlin (Monday), June 30.—Strong German panzer units thrusting across the old Soviet Russian-Polish border have swept beyond Minsk, capital of White Russia, and reached the road to Moscow, almost 450 miles distant by air, it was reported tonight.

Shortly after the German high command had reported successes over the Russians in a series of communiques, D. N. B., official German news agency, declared the panzer units were at the "beginning of the motor road from Minsk to Moscow."

[German troops have occupied Minsk, according to an official German wireless report recorded today by C. B. S. in New York, a United Press dispatch said. N. B. C. quoted the German radio as saying the Nazis had occupied Luck.]

[The Russians declare German Panzer units have been isolated in the Minsk sector and are imperiled under a constant rain of Russian bombs.]

Farther north, D. N. B. continued, the Russians were fleeing and added the Soviet troops were disbanding in the Baltic sector.

The news agency said the panzer troops beyond Minsk, which is 20 miles inside the old Russian border, side-stepped encircled Red armies at Bialystok to get around their rear.

The German high command asserted that 40,000 prisoners were captured, 4,107 Soviet Russian planes were destroyed and 2,233 tanks wrecked or captured in Nazi drives which it said had swept through Lithuania well into neighboring Latvia, trapped two Soviet armies and reached the region of Minsk.

[Declaring the German claims are false, the Russians say that actually they have lost 850 planes and 900 tanks and that 15,000 Red soldiers are missing or captured. On the other hand, they assert that the Germans have lost 2,100 tanks, 1,500 planes and 30,000 troops.]

"New and great success is in preparation," the high command said in loosing its delayed review of the Nazi drive to the east on the eighth day of the campaign.

A series of 12 special communiques, released over a period of five hours, told the official story.

One by one they painted the picture of a vast campaign over a 500-mile front that ruptured Russian fortifications south of the Pinsk marshes, battered back de-

The Significance of Omission

By Herbert L. Matthews

Rome, June 29.—Pope Pius XII today upset Axis hopes that he would support an "anti-Bolshevik crusade" by making a long and important discourse on the ways of Providence in a world-wide broadcast without giving a single word of encouragement to the self-styled crusaders.

Indeed, there is only one passage that could have referred to the Russian campaign and there is little comfort indeed in it for the exponents of the crusade theory.

Nothing the Pontiff said in this weighty and carefully-reasoned religious exposition was so important as his silence on the burning question of communism. It can now be revealed that the Holy See has been under heavy political pressure all week to take a stand in favor of Germany's campaign.

Indeed, this pressure even took the specific form of urging the pontiff to issue a letter to all Catholic bishops throughout the world that they should approve the formation of volunteer battalions which would go to fight the Reds.

This is particularly true of Spain, where the political authorities, according to Vatican information, have asked the Episcopate to take a stand in favor of the war against Russia. Thus far the Spanish bishops have maintained a strict reserve, for they have been waiting direction from the Holy See.

The answer came in part today with the Pope's refusal to give the slightest encouragement to the crusade idea. It is understood that this negative attitude will be quickly supplemented by private instructions to bishops throughout the world. One cannot say what those instructions will be, but sources close to the Papal Secretariat of State today were certain that the Holy See will have nothing to do with interests which it

Girl in Theater Hurt as Man Falls Out of Balcony

Dorothy Bell, colored, of 1843 Eleventh Street Northwest, was watching George O'Brien perform in "Road to China" in the Dunbar Theater yesterday afternoon. Something hit her. It was Sandy Jackson, colored, of 1406 Corcoran Street Northeast, who had fallen asleep in the balcony and fallen over the railing. Miss Bell was treated at Freedman's Hospital for possible fractures of the left shoulder and arm.

Police finally managed to wake Jackson up in the lobby. He said he had slept through it all and didn't remember a thing.

—But Not a Drop to Drink

Milk for D. C. Undernourished Now Waits Congress' Action

Plans for supplying milk to the District's undernourished adults and children are waiting on the action of Congress.

Until the Surplus Marketing Administration knows what its appropriation will be for the fiscal year beginning July 1, it was stated yesterday, no decision can be rendered on two badly needed milk programs.

One program is for extension of 5 cents a quart surplus milk to families whose head is working on the WPA, and to families that are on private relief. At present such milk is available only to those certified to WPA, but not working, and to those on public relief.

The other program is for establishment of 1-cent-a-half-pint milk service to undernourished school children, similar to that in effect in New York and several other cities.

All data indicating the need for these programs have been put before the SMA by Washington school officials, and those in charge of public welfare here. This "data" have been supplemented by many stories showing the effect on the health and efficiency of District families and of their inability to procure milk. The price to those able to buy in the regular market is beyond the reach of thousands who would be able to procure this vital food if regulations covering distribution of surplus milk from the farms were liberalized only slightly.

While the concurrence of the producers and their officials cannot be taken for granted, the pressure upon public officials to do all they can to build up public defense by insuring adequate nourishment and safeguards to health for the population, is believed to be of concern to the officials of the Department of Agriculture who will be faced with the final decision.

At the moment, however, it is pointed out, no decision can be effective without the aid of Congress. For unless the department has the necessary funds to underwrite the surplus milk distribution program, and the 1-cent school milk program, nothing can be done.

2 Drown as Heat Drives Capitalites To Beaches

A former Washington man was drowned in the Potomac River near Colonial Beach, Va., yesterday and two District women were injured in highway traffic made heavy by thousands of townsmen trying to escape temperatures that reached a high of 93 degrees.

Francis S. Roussean was drowned at Classic Shore while bathing in the Potomac. He had been living with his sister, Mrs. Floyd Young at her Colonial Beach cottage.

Mrs. Ellis E. Johnson, 37, of 5821 Colorado Avenue Northwest, was drowned late Saturday night when she fell off a fishing boat in Chesapeake Bay. She and her husband, Frank, had left with a fishing party from Deal, Md., at about 6:30 p. m.

Injured in traffic were Mrs. Edith Coverly, 5204 Sheriff Road, and Mrs. H. Hunter, of 1010 Florida Avenue Northeast. They were treated at Freedmen's Hospital after the car in which they were riding was involved in an accident on the Colesville Road near White Oak in Montgomery County, Md.

The United States Weather Bureau last night forecast little relief from the humid heat. Continued cloudy and warm, with brief afternoon showers is predicted for today and tomorrow.

Ship Bearing 10 U. S. Marines Reported Sunk

By the Associated Press

An authoritative source said yesterday that a ship carrying a detachment of 10 American Marines to England had been torpedoed and sunk in the Atlantic.

Advices on the sinking, this source said, reported that one American was missing, leading to the presumption that the others had been rescued.

The ship was said to be the Maarsden, a former Dutch vessel now in the service of the British.

At the Navy Department there was no immediate confirmation of the report.

The department announced Saturday that three officers and 60 men of the Marine Corps were being dispatched to London "to facilitate communications between the various United States offices located there."

It was explained that "due to the great expansion of work of the embassy and establishment of separate offices there this service has been greatly needed for sometime."

It was intended, too, the Navy said, that the Marines would serve as fire watchers and thus "serve to relieve the already overburdened embassy staff."

Redoubling War Effort

Beaverbrook Is Supply Chief As Churchill Shuffles Cabinet

By the Associated Press

London (Monday), June 30.—Prime Minister Churchill, shuffling his cabinet for the second time in two months to take swift advantage of Adolf Hitler's Russian campaign, today appointed Lord Beaverbrook minister of supply, with responsibility for one of the most important posts in the British war machine.

Simultaneously, Churchill abolished the post of minister of state, which Lord Beaverbrook was given in the cabinet changes of May 2 and in which "the Beaver" had been called vice prime minister.

Beaverbrook replaced Sir Andrew Rae Duncan as minister of supply. Sir Andrew went back to his former post as president of the Board of Trade, replacing Capt. Oliver Lyttleton, who was selected as chairman of the import authority.

The eight-member war cabinet previously had not included the minister of supply, but the Canadian-born peer, who quadrupled Britain's plane output as minister of air production, retains his important post in the war cabinet under the new setup.

He was given wide responsibility for making war goods in all of Britain's factories.

The Prime Minister's action was interpreted almost unanimously by informed circles as meaning Churchill was placing a new and greater emphasis upon increasing the speed of production of war materials to take the fullest advantage of Germany's engagement against Russia.

Well-posted circles said Lord Beaverbrook had not lost stature in the shake-up; that he had been assigned to the new post because Churchill felt he would be most useful there.

"The ministry of supply now is certainly one of the most important posts in the British Empire," one source said.

4,107 Russian Planes, 2,233 Red Tanks Destroyed, High Command Says

By the Associated Press

Berlin, June 29.—The following are the texts of the series of special communiques issued today by the German high command in review of one week of war with Russia:

NUMBER ONE

As a defense against the danger threatening from the east, German forces at 3 a. m. June 22 charged into a mighty mobilization of enemy forces. At dawn, formations of the German air force attacked the Soviet Russian foe. Despite being greatly outnumbered the air force already on June 22 won air mastery in the east and administered a destructive defeat to the Soviet Russian air force.

In air battles, 322 Red planes were shot down, partly by chasers and partly by antiaircraft. With machines destroyed on the ground, the number of planes lost to the Russian air force up to the evening of June 22 was raised to 1,811.

German losses this day were 35 planes.

NUMBER TWO

The German eastern army early June 22 crossed the border on a wide front. It smashed into the midst of the Soviet Russian army, which had completed its mobilization. Strong border fortifications of the enemy were partly penetrated the first day.

Powerful counterattacks by the Soviet Russian army collapsed with the heaviest losses.

In these battles, the German air force took a glorious part.

NUMBER THREE

On June 23 the enemy directed a powerful counterattack against our advance assault columns. In the matching of powers German soldiers were victorious.

All Soviet Russian attempts were repulsed. Some assaults collapsed in bloody, bitter, hand-to-hand conflict.

The fortification at Grodno was attacked and taken in a hard-fought battle.

The enemy this day again suffered most serious losses in the air, and the count of destroyed Soviet Russian planes up to evening of June 23 increased to 2,582.

NUMBER FOUR

Brest-Litovsk was subjected to a severe artillery attack and this fortification fell into our hands. On June 24, the citadel, last stronghold of the enemy, was taken by storm.

The German advance reached Vilna and Kaunas. Both these cities were taken the same day.

NUMBER FIVE

The Soviet Russian army, with countless armored cars, attempted to hold up our advance, cut our communications to the rear or break through in an encirclement action. But the German air force, cooperating with our armored formations, took effective counter measures.

The armored formations were supported by antiaircraft artillery and fliers. Also the giant new Russian tanks here proved unequal to the bravery of the German soldiers and the quality of German arms. In the first four days of fighting, 1,200 Soviet Russian armored cars were destroyed by units of the land army and 97 by the air force.

NUMBER SIX

Our forces operating in the Baltic region reached the Daugava (River) June 26 in a bold assault. The stream was crossed in several places.

The City of Dvinsk fell into German hands. All efforts of the enemy to hold up this advance with desperate counterattacks were frustrated by the bravery of our soldiers.

NUMBER SEVEN

Surface and submarine forces of the German navy carried out numerous undertakings against the Soviet fleet with bold iniative.

In the east Baltic, a Soviet destroyer was sunk by a mine and the cruiser Maxim Gorki seriously damaged.

German submarines destroyed two Soviet Russian submarines. German speedboats sank two destroyers, one torpedo boat and one submarine of the enemy.

An effort by two Soviet destroyers to attack the harbor at Constanta was frustrated by coastal artillery. After brief firing, one exploded and the other ran off swiftly.

NUMBER EIGHT

German tanks on June 26 were victorious in a great tank battle north of Kaunas. Several divisions were surrounded and destroyed. More than 200 Soviet Russian tanks, including 29 of the heaviest type, more than 130 cannon, as well as hundreds of motor vehicles fell into our hands.

NUMBER NINE

A battle south of the Pripet (Pinsk) marshes took place against an elite formation of the Soviet army.

The strongest modern fortifications were seized in a heroic attack west of Lemberg (Lwow). Our troops are now victoriously approaching Lemberg itself.

North of this region, German armored divisions are fighting eastward above Luck.

As on other sectors, the Luftwaffe by reconnaissance and courageous attack against the ever-oncoming enemy forces also here contributed greatly to the advance of our army.

The bloody losses of our opponent are huge. Numerous enemy tanks were destroyed. In battle about Dubno alone, 250 tanks and many cannon, including 42 of the heaviest type, were captured.

NUMBER TEN

In the progress of operations in the region east of Bialystok, two Soviet Russian armies are now surrounded. Despite a desperate, day's-long effort to break through, the ring of the German armies is drawing closer hour to hour.

In a few days the surrounded armies either will capitulate or be destroyed. Thereby, the fate will be sealed of numerous Soviet divisions which had been intended for a central thrust against Germany.

Infantry divisions and units of the militarized SS (Schutzstaffel Elite Guard) here are carrying on ground fighting. The air force contributes the irreplaceable aid with smashing attacks.

NUMBER ELEVEN

Thrusting forward on both sides of the basin of Bialystok, our armored and motorized divisions have reached the region of Minsk. New and great success is in preparation.

NUMBER TWELVE

The opening of operations against Soviet Russia has brought tremendous results, although it is presently impossible to come even close to estimating the booty.

In addition to bloody losses suffered by the enemy in the first days, more than 40,000 prisoners have fallen into our hands, and more than 600 cannon so far have been counted among the booty.

Two thousand two hundred and thirty-three tanks, including 46 of the heaviest type, weighing 52 tons, were destroyed or captured.

To this mass of material, there are added vast quantities of anti-tank and antiaircraft guns, as well as machine guns, rifles, motor cars, etc. These figures are increasing hourly. But they will grow by leaps after the capitulation or destruction of surrounded armies.

The German air force administered to the Russians the most destructive defeats of this war. In seven days, 4,107 Soviet planes have been destroyed by pursuit and battle planes and antiaircraft artillery in the air and on the ground.

In comparison, our losses were held within moderate limits. In the same period, our air force lost 150 planes. German fliers, as well as German materials, demonstrated a towering superiority.

These mighty numbers of planes, tanks and other materials, for destruction or capture of which the German army must be thanked, give an impressive and surprising picture of the gravity of the menace which had grown on the east frontier of the Reich.

It is likely that, at the last minute, middle Europe was spared an invasion, the consequences of which cannot be conceived. The German people truly is duty bound to give deepest thanks to its brave soldiers.

Panzers in Minsk Sector Cut Off, Reds Say; Call Nazi Victory Report 'a Manifest Lie'

By the Associated Press

Moscow (Monday) June 30.—Strong German tank forces which thrust into the Minsk sector of white Russia have been isolated and are imperiled under a constant rain of Russian bombs, the Soviet information bureau declared today, and emphatically denied Nazi claim of gigantic losses of men and equipment.

It countered with these claims of its own:

Since the war began June 22, "the Germans have lost no less than 2,500 tanks, about 1,500 airplanes and more than 30,000 prisoners of war.

Noting German claims to have captured 40,000 Red army men, captured or destroyed more than 2,000 Soviet tanks and 600 cannon and destroyed more than 4,000 Soviet planes, the Soviet communique called this a "manifest lie" and said actually the Red army had lost 850 planes, 900 tanks and 15,000 men missing or captured.

Finns Open Offensive

Simultaneously, it was announced that combined Finnish-German forces Sunday made a sudden stab at the Russian frontier all along the Finnish border from the Arctic Sea to the Gulf of Finland, only to be hurled back with hundreds of dead into their own fortifications.

(Dispatches from Helsinki said the whole Finnish border blazed with artillery duels as the Finns suddenly went on the offensive after a week of passiveness.)

But it was on the Polish front and in the Minsk sector of White Russia that the Russian communique placed the heaviest fighting.

It acknowledged a retreat by the Red Army in the Vilna-Dvinsk area of former Lithuania, but said the Germans had failed in flank and rear attacks on these troops.

Infantry Fighting Fiercely

"Covering infantry which carried out the retreat from the state frontier are engaged in violent fighting and are stopping the advance of the enemy's motorized troops and of his infantry along the Lida-Wolkowysk line," the communique stated.

Lida is in the Russian part of Poland, about 60 miles south of Vilna, while Wolkowysk is about 60 miles southwest of Lida.

(Wolkowysk is about 50 miles east of Bialystok, and it is in that exact area where the German high command claimed to have trapped two entire Russian armies—possibly 400,000 men.)

An entire German tank division was annihilated in the fighting near Lida, according to Nazi prisoners, the Russian communique stated.

In the Luck area of southern Poland, where the Russians said yesterday 4,000 tanks were battering at one another in a battle of the greatest proportions, the Germans Sunday threw in new tank units but were unable to gain, the Russians said.

Holding Road to Ukraine

"All attempts by the enemy to penetrate in the direction of Novograd-Volynski and Shepetovka (all in the Ukraine near the old Russian-Polish border) were not only repelled but our tank units and aircraft succeeded through a series of attacks in annihilating a great part of the enemy tank units and motorized troops," the Russian announcement went on.

The work of the Red air force came in for repeated praise, the communique indicating it was one of the strongest factors in combating the incessant push of German tanks.

Telling a story of prideful defense against the heaviest sort of attacks all up and down the lengthened line, the Russian communique took this notice of Sunday's long-heralded German victory claims:

"Hitler and his generals, accustomed to easy victories during the second imperialist war, broadcast that in seven days of hostilities they captured or destroyed over 2,000 Soviet tanks and 600 guns, destroyed over 4,000 Soviet planes and took prisoner over 40,000 Red army men, while in the same period the Germans declare that they have lost only 150 planes and pass in silence their own losses in tanks, guns and prisoners of war.

"This Manifest Lie

"We find it embarrassing even to deny this manifest lie and boastful humbug."

The communique asserted that at the start of the war Germany had 170 divisions (possibly 2,500,000 men) on the frontier, a third of them being tank and motorized divisions.

(In announcing the war June 22, Adolf Hitler said the Russians had 180 divisions on the frontier.)

Against this force, which attacked without a declaration of war, the Russians said, they had only their frontier guards, who were without tanks or artillery.

"By the end of the first day of war and throughout the second day, only the advance units of our regular troops were able to participate in the fighting, and only on the third day and in some places on the fourth day did our regular troops come into contact with the enemy.

"It is for this very reason that the Germans succeeded in occupying Bialystok, Grodno, Brest Litovsk, Vilna and Kaunas."

Main Blows Thwarted

The main lightning German blows intended to take strategic Kiev in the Ukraine and Smolensk on the road to Moscow, with the last week were nevertheless thwarted, the Russian communique said.

Now, in seven to eight days of fierce fighting, it went on, "the Germans lost no less than 2,500 tanks, about 1,500 airplanes and over 30,000 prisoners of war.

"During the same period we lost 850 airplanes, up to 900 tanks and up to 15,000 men missing or taken prisoner."

Hinting that the Russian strategy was to force the Germans to wear themselves out in assaults, the communique asserted, "Soviet troops, despite their late deployment, continue defending Soviet land and dealing to the enemy severe blows, exhausting him."

In its Sunday communique, the Russian information bureau had told approximately the same story of stubborn defense and heavy German losses.

The army organ, Red Star, in a leading editorial, said: "Stalinist falcons: fulfill your duty to your fatherland with honor.

"Despite great losses, the Fascists, feeling that this is their last stand, are throwing new masses of machines and men into battle. The Red army is repulsing the pressure of the enemy hordes with the greatest stubbornness."

The idea of disaffection among German fliers was conveyed in the Russian communique's quotation of a statement purporting to be by a captured German flier, Corp. Paul Hoffbauer, calling upon Nazi soldiers to "turn bayonets upon Hitler and fascism" and asking Luftwaffe fliers not to bomb "peaceful Russian cities."

At sea it was said that a German submarine was sunk in Riga Bay, off the coast of Latvia.

Prayers for Victory

In the Russian Orthodox Church, prayers were offered today for a Soviet victory over Germany.

A message to churches from acting Patriarch Sergi, metropolitan of Moscow, said "the Church of Christ blesses all members of the Russian Orthodox Church for defense of the holy frontiers of our fatherland. Let God bring us victory."

(The London radio reported hearing a Tass, Russian news agency, message from Moscow saying that a British economic mission headed by Lawrence Cadberry had conferred today with the Soviet commissar for foreign trade. The broadcast was heard in New York by N. B. C.)

New York, June 29 (AP).—The London radio reported today that Soviet bombers had destroyed the Danube Bridge between the Rumanian Danube port of Giurgiu and the Bulgarian port of Ruschuk. This is the part of Rumania furthest from Russia. The broadcast was heard by N. B. C.

fenders across Sovietized Poland and pushed 350 miles northeastward from Warsaw along the railroad toward Leningrad.

The German short wave radio transmitted the communique in succession and, in every interlude, the station played the song "We March Against England."

Beginning with a terse account of the onslaught at 3 a. m., June 22 "as a defense against the danger threatening from the east," the communiques swelled to a crescendo with these details of the Russian toll:

2,233 tanks destroyed or captured.

1,237 armored cars destroyed.

600 heavy guns captured.

"Vast quantities" of motor cars, anti-aircraft and anti-tank guns, machine guns and rifles seized.

Four destroyers, three submarines and a torpedo boat sunk.

The 8,800-ton cruiser Maxim Gorky "seriously damaged."

"In comparison," the final communique said, "our losses were held within moderate limits. In the same period, our air force lost 150 planes. German fliers, as well as German materials, demonstrated a towering superiority."

The two Russian armies surrounded were reported to be within a German ring "drawing closer" east of the Polish city of Bialystok, and the high command said that "thereby, the fate will be sealed of numerous Russian divisions which had been intended for a central thrust against Germany."

(The size of the two Russian armies was not announced. Such forces vary widely in numerical strength. They might represent 150,000 to 500,000 men. Military circles in Vichy said 400,000 Russians make up the two armies.)

Destruction or capitulation of these trapped Soviet armies is a foregone conclusion and merely a matter of days or hours, in the opinion of the high command.

The French observers, however, pointed out that the armies might have been cut off only by advanced armored elements and could fight as long as their munitions and other supplies lasted.

(They were given even a good chance of breaking through the German lines.)

Captured Cities Listed

Of objectives which fell before German attacks, these were listed:

The fortifications at Grodno, Poland.

Brest-Litovsk, Poland, and its citadel.

The cities of Vilna and Kaunas, Lithuania.

Fortifications west of Lwow (Lemberg).

Dubno, Polish town 30 miles southeast of Luck.

There seemed to be distinct thrusts, aimed for the Baltic lands, for Moscow, for Kiev in the Ukraine and the Black Sea.

One week was enough, the communiques indicated, for the Germans to push the Russians out of almost all of the Polish territory they had seized at the conclusion of Germany's Polish campaign in 1939.

One remaining Russian stronghold in Poland was Lwow, where stubborn detachments were standing up against the German storm.

"But our troops are now victoriously approaching Lwow itself," the high command said.

For the first time from authoritative German sources, the eastern fighting areas were outlined, but the cautious high command, which lays high value on secrecy in tactics, was still vague in its delineation.

Dvinsk, in German hands to the north, seemed still relatively close to the fighting. Southward from this point, the front appeared to be somewhat eastward of the captured cities.

The thrust at Minsk apparently had started as a bold sortie of German mechanized units far ahead of the actual battle lines. Motorized infantrymen were reported following up the panzer thrust.

In relation to the millions of troops engaged, the 40,000 Russian prisoners claimed is comparatively small. Germans expected this number to increase greatly after the capitulation or destruction of the two armies trapped east of Bialystok.

Destruction of more than 4,100 planes, more than the total air forces of some well-armed nations, was described as a feat understandably challenging credence. It was explained that the greater number were smashed on the ground; that once more German bombers had pounced upon a foe before it could get a reasonable number of its planes into the air.

The high command released its dozen communiques at intervals of 20 minutes to half an hour, time being given to let the import of each make its impression. It was an arrangement to get German citizens at their radios for hours, contemplating dreams of ultimate victory.

New Zealand Expects Major U. S. Arms Aid

United States war aid will be extended to New Zealand, it was understood last night.

J. G. Coates, former Prime Minister of New Zealand and co-leader of a supplies purchasing commission, revealed that his country expected substantial help from the United States. He said that he and his colleagues have inspected tanks, airplanes, automatic guns and other weapons in America and Canada with a view to purchases.

"The increasing production and the effect of our representations here should be to secure supplies at a rate and in quantities which would materially help New Zealand in her war effort," he said.

He did not identify the type of weapons immediately available for his country.

U. S. Plane Output To Clip Nazi Wings

Will Provide More, Better Aircraft by Fall; One Plant Will Outdo All of Hitler's

By W. W. Chaplin
By International News Service

New York, June 29.—Rising figures of American warplane production indicate, in the belief of most defense industry leaders today, that unless Germany wins the battle of the skies before late autumn all chance of such a victory will be gone.

By the first of the year, barring acute shortage of such materials as aluminum or major delays due to new strikes, the American warplane industry will have achieved such mass output that one American company will virtually be matching the entire German production of combat planes.

The German warplane production today is officially estimated as being between 1,500 and 2,000 combat ships a month. The highest announced monthly output of American military planes was just over 1,400, and approximately 400 of those were trainers.

Curve Rising Sharply

But the American production curve is sharply upward, and new manufacturing and assembly plants are coming into operation almost daily. Mass production of a dozen models of bombers, fighters and divers will be in full mass production by the end of the year, unless bottlenecks choke the flow.

Several of these new models, which I have seen put through their paces in final tests, make the Messerschmitts, Stukas, junkers, and even the new German Focke-Wulfes seem reminiscent of the days of the Wright brothers.

American aviation got a black eye in the first year of the war because the planes it was able to furnish did not meet all the requirements of a type of conflict for which they were never intended. The wonder in military circles today is that those makeshift models did well enough to have made an enviable record against planes built for just the purpose to which they were put.

The Curtiss P-40 was a stopgap model, powered by an engine for which is was not designed. The Allison engine crowded into its nose took up so much room that the oil tank had to be put "out on the back porch," causing occasional mechanical trouble. And yet that plane on many occasions outmaneuvered Messerschmitts and held its own beside the Hurricanes and Spitfires.

Lockheed-Hudson Did Well

The Lockheed-Hudson was a commercial passenger plane transformed into a bomber overnight, and yet it performed yeoman service in the British coastal command for reconnaissance duty, and on occasion doubled in fighting and even dive-bombing. It hasn't been relegated to the scrap head or even the training field yet.

Then the planes really designed for modern war began to come trundling off the assembly lines. England got some of the Consolidated PBY's and they helped her trap the battleship Bismarck. She got some Martin 167's and began increasing her thunderous pressure on the Ruhr and the French invasion coast.

But that was just a beginning. Consolidated, Boeing, Douglas and others began to produce some really long-range bombers. Curtiss-Wright, Bell, Grumman and others began to put speed into fighting planes hitherto believed impossible.

The United States Army won't give top speeds of the new planes any more, but it will say "more than 400 miles an hour" about half a dozen. And there isn't a pursuit ship of foreign make in the European skies that can do 400 miles an hour in level flight. The Spitfires, Hurricanes and Messerschmitts do from 360 to 370, and the old Curtiss P40's can keep up to that.

Well Armed, Too

Among the "more than 400" American planes are the Curtiss P46 with ten guns in the wings, the Bell Airocobra with an automatic cannon spouting through the propeller hub in addition to machine guns, and the Vought-Sikorsky shipboard fighter being made for the Navy. All these are ready for mass production.

There also is the new 187 Martin medium bomber, another "more than 400" model, built to British designs and capable of flying the Atlantic. Curtiss has successfully tested the XSB2C-1, a dive bomber capable of diving speed 100 miles an hour faster than any other plane in the world, or double the range and double the bomb carrying capacity of any other diver. Douglas has built the biggest land bomber in the world and Martin is building the biggest flying boat bomber.

Perhaps the most important new plane of all, because there is nothing like it in the world for so many purposes, is the Bell Airocobra, now in quantity production to fill an initial British order for 800 and an American Army order for a like number any percentage of which may also go to England under lease-lend authority.

This is the only single seater fighter in the world that carries an automatic cannon and it is designed to destroy anything it encounters—other fighting planes, bombers, ships at sea, tanks, troops or factories. Larry Bell, president of the company that makes it, believes the airocobra may be the perfect defense against tanks, using armor piercing projectiles in its automatic cannon and striking the metal monsters on the top, their most vulnerable point.

The new American planes have all the characteristics which were missing in the first planes sent to fight against the Luftwaffe. They are armored in essential places, they have heavy wing armament, self-sealing tanks, secret American bomb sights and equally secret American developments of the British power-driven gun turrets.

Aircraft production has A1A priority rating and barring unforeseen obstacles American production should leave the German rate hopelessly behind by autumn.

Maj. C. G. Parker Named Assistant Deputy Draft Head

Maj. Chauncey G. Parker, jr., U. S. M. C., Washington banker and civic leader, has been appointed assistant deputy director of the Selective Service System, it was announced yesterday by Brig. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, Selective Service deputy director.

PARKER

The same administrative order appointed Lieut. Col. Carlton S. Dargusch, U. S. A., of Columbus, Ohio, as an assistant deputy director. Maj. Edward S. Shattuck, of Los Angeles, Calif., chief of the Legal Division of National Headquarters, was appointed general counsel of the system.

The posts had been vacant at the headquarters but increasing activities necessitated the appointments, Gen. Hershey stated. Maj. Parker has been administration executive; Col. Dargusch has been serving as operations executive at national headquarters.

Maj. Parker is a general partner in the investment banking firm of Auchincloss, Parker and Redpath and has been active in Community Chest work for many years. He was general chairman of the campaign committee in 1939-40. During the World War he served in the A. E. F. in the battles of the Argonne and Somme and later in the Army of Occupation. Transferring to the Marines in 1932 as a reserve captain, he was promoted to rank of major in 1933.

As assistant deputy director, Maj. Parker will supervise and direct activities pertaining to the appointment of personnel, procurement of material and organization and maintenance of the national headquarters. Besides, he will serve as a member of the executive council.

Finn, Soviet Big Guns Duel On North Front

By the Associated Press

Helsinki, June 29.—Artillery duels shook the Russian-Finnish border for more than 600 miles today as the Northern front suddenly blazed into full fury.

From the Baltic to the Arctic, Field Marshal Mannerheim's midnight order of the day, calling on Finns to follow him in a "holy war" against the Russians, was the signal for the end of Finland's previous passive resistance to the U. S. S. R.

Full details of the fighting were not disclosed, but in declaring the Finns had taken the initiative an army spokesman declared, "After all, Finns are not the kind to sit with hands folded while their land is laid waste and women and children massacred."

The distant rumble of heavy gunfire was heard in the streets of this capital all day. Occasionally nearer explosions were heard with a sharper note as harbor forts fired at targets offshore, where Russian warships are believed on patrol. Bursts of smoke could be seen at sea.

Helsinki's taste of the day's fighting was topped off by air raid alarms, although no Russian planes reached the city. Defending fighters patrolled the skies constantly.

A government spokesman said the Finns had watched the Russians mobilize along the Finnish border for many weeks past. He added:

"We had no choice but to strike back before we were overwhelmed."

He asserted that Finnish protests against Russian bombings were answered only by more and worse air attacks.

An army report today laconically related that the Russians were seen Saturday destroying the industrial works at Enso, just across the border in territory which Finland was forced to cede to Russia in the peace of March, 1940.

All the Karelian area which was ceded has been systematically devastated, the Finns said. Lookouts at frontier points reported they watched the Russians raze villages and farm buildings and even set fire to great forests, apparently to keep anything of value from falling back into Finnish hands.

Hoover Offers Plan to Deny Aid to Russia While Helping British and Staying Out of War

By the Associated Press

Chicago, June 29.—Former President Herbert Hoover pleaded for continued American peace tonight and offered a seven-point course of action which he described as "neither defeatist, nor isolationist nor interventionist."

He said in an address, "A Call to American Reason," prepared for broadcast over the N. B. C., that the Nation had moved nearer war in the last six weeks, but that "President Roosevelt has held steadfast to his promises not to send 'our Army, Navy or Air Forces to fight in foreign lands outside America except in case of attack.'"

The former President prefaced his seven-point program by asserting "no man can see what the future may bring."

"Whatever that future may be, only one defeat can come to America," he said. "We have no need to fear military defeat if we are prepared. Our only defeat would be if we lost our own national freedoms and our potency for good in the world."

Hoover listed first on his program all aid to Britain and China without putting American troops in the war zones.

Then:

Arm for defense of the Western Hemisphere without provoking war meanwhile.

Uphold Congress in assuming the responsibility to determine peace or war.

Abandon the notion of an ideological war to impose the four freedoms on other nations.

Devote ourselves to improving the four freedoms here so they may inspire other peoples to adopt them.

Go to the peace table with unexhausted reserves to promote a just and permanent peace and the exhausted nations will listen.

Abandon hates at the peace conference and prepare a new concept of human relations that will give the world some hope of permanent peace.

Assails Russia

Hoover said "no doubt, we will make good our promise to aid Russia, but the ideological war to bring freedoms to the world died spiritually when we made that promise."

He reviewed Russia's "destruction of the independence" of Latvia, Lithuania and Estonia and her attack upon Finland and added, "Stalin has taken advantage of the very freedoms of democracy to destroy them with the most potent Fifth Column in all history. He contributed to the destruction of France. He has daily implanted class hate in America and a stealthy war against our institutions."

"If we go further and join the war and we win, then we have won for Stalin the grin of communism on Russia and more opportunity for it to extend to the world," he declared. "We should at least cease to tell our sons that they would be giving their lives to restore democracy and freedom to the world."

He said that America should not go to war now, because "we are not prepared," and added:

"If we prepare, America can not be brought to subjection by any combination of military powers."

He said that Maritime Commission figures and other statistics showed that less than 4 per cent of American supplies to British had been sunk, and he argued that in this and other respects America was a more potent factor out of the war than in it.

"There is the problem of Japan," he said. "We must not forget that she is under contract to Hitler to attack us if we join in this war. For her to enter would be a disaster to Britain in two ways. She would cover the seven seas with raiders, sinking more British supplies. And we would need at once to retain all the air power and ships we can produce to protect our own coasts and to drive her off the seas."

Hoover said that it would require 10 years for either Germany or America to muster transports and an armada sufficient to carry an effective striking force across the Atlantic.

He urged the appointment of some person to take responsibility for the entire armament program and charged that "we are still confused in a mass of committees, boards and commissions."

Old Clothes and Bare Legs Now Fashionable in London

By Eddy Gilmore
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, June 29.—Rationing, raids and realism are altering Britain's sartorial scheme, which for years has been regarded as the most conservatively correct of the world.

The Briton who wouldn't step off Bond Street for a suit is now digging in the attic for something abandoned to the moths years ago, and the most proper of proper ladies are tripping bare-legged down Regent Street.

Starch officially disappeared from shirts when the old lady of Threadneedle Street—The Bank of England—pontifically proclaimed that its clerks could wear brighter clothes.

No longer are new clothes officially connected with smartness. The government, in fact, is launching a campaign with the slogan, "Old Clothes Are the Smartest."

Lots of people are then in style.

A man in his middle 40's in gray flannels topped by a once severe black morning coat walking with a pretty woman in slacks, her blonde hair tied back with a turban.

Formal striped pants worn with a pullover sweater and a tweed coat by another stroller.

With laundry prices what they are and short rationing in effect, British shorts are being put to a severe test. Many are getting a rest only on weekends.

Shirts with the collars attached, a style which never fully caught on anyhow, are as scarce as lemons in this summer of the war.

Straw hats, likewise, are seldom seen. Hats are not rationed, but they are regarded generally as a luxury.

Conclusion: The most popular garbs of all are the uniforms of the fighting forces.

30,000,000 Women Aiding Red Army

Moscow, June 29 (AP).—More than 30,000,000 women are working behind Soviet Russian lines to bolster the Soviet war effort against Germany, Pravda (Communist Party newspaper) declared today. The newspaper said 19,000,000 women were toiling in the fields and 11,000,000 in factories and offices, besides the thousands who had gone to the front in medical services.

"Women are useful in military units and military offices," Pravda said, "but the main task now is work in the rear."

Text of Pope's World Broadcast on War

Catholics Advised to Trust in God Who Will 'Restore Peace' After Having 'Let the Hurricane Loose for a Moment'

By the Associated Press

Vatican City, June 29.—The text of Pope Pius XII's radio broadcast to the world today:

Some considerations on Divine Providence in human events:

My dear children of the whole Catholic Church, your thoughts on this Feast of the Holy Apostles Peter and Paul turn with affection to Rome in terms of the triumphal hymn: "O Happy Rome! Who in the Martyr Prince's blood—a two-fold stream, art washed and doubly sanctified."

But the happiness of Rome, which is a happiness of blood and faith is your happiness too; for the faith of Rome sealed here with the blood of the princes of the apostles on the right and on the left bank of the Tiber, is the faith that was preached to you; it is the faith that will be preached to the whole world. You are exultant at the thought of greeting Rome because you feel, within you, the thrill of the all embracing Romanism of your faith.

Nineteen centuries ago, the Rome of the Caesars was baptized in the blood of the first Vicar of Christ and of the Apostle of the Gentiles and was named the Rome of Christ It was to be an enduring token of the indefectible supremacy of the Church's sacred authority, a token of the infallible teaching of her faith; and in that blood were written the first pages of a grand new story of the sacred battles and victories of Rome.

Recalls Trials of Martyrs

Have you ever asked yourself what must have been the thoughts, the fears of the little handful of Christians scattered over the great pagan city when, having given hasty burial to the bodies of the two great martyrs—the one at the foot of the Vatican Hill and the other on the road to Ostia—they gathered, for the most part in the tenements of slaves or poor tradesmen, but some few in their wealthy homes, and felt the sense of loneliness almost of orphans at the disappearance of the two supreme apostles?

It was the fiercest moment in the tempest that shortly before the cruelty of Nero had let loose upon the infant Church; before eyes still rose the horrible vision of human torches glowing by night in the gardens of Caesar, of the quivering torn bodies in the arenas and in the streets. It seemed then that implacable cruelty had triumphed, striking at and overturning the two pillars whose presence alone had sustained the faith and the courage of the little Christian groups. In that sunset of blood, how their hearts must have felt the distress of sorrow as they found themselves now without the comfort and the company of those two strong spokesmen, abandoned to the brutality of a Nero and the dreadful power of Roman imperial greatness.

But against the steel and physical force of the tyrant and of his servants they had received the spirit of force and of love, stronger than torments or death, and we seem to see the aged Linus at that reunion which followed in the midst of the desolate community, Linus who was the first to be called to take the place of the departed Peter, to take into his hands that trembled with emotion the letter already sent by the Apostle to the faithful of Asia Minor and read over slowly the words of blessing, of trust, of comfort: "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ who according to His great mercy hath regenerated us into a lively hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ . . . Wherein you shall greatly rejoice if now you must be for a little time made sorrowful in divers temptations . . . Be you humbled therefore under the mighty hand of God . . . Casting all your care upon Him for He hath care of you . . . The God of all grace Who hath called us unto His eternal glory in Christ Jesus after you have suffered a little will Himself perfect you and confirm you and establish you." (First Peter, Chapter I, verses 3—6: Chapter 5, verses 6—10.)

Deplores Tempest of Evil

We too, beloved children who by an inscrutable design of God have received in succession to Peter, to Linus and to a hundred other saintly Pontiffs the mission to comfort and confirm our brethren in Jesus Christ (CFR Luke 22-32), we like you feel our heart grew faint at the thought of the tempest of evil of suffering and and of anguish that now rages over the world.

There are not lacking it is true, in the darkness of the storm, comforting sights which dilate our hearts with great and holy expectations; courage in defense of the fundamentals of Christian civilization and confident hope in their triumph; the most intrepid patriotism; heroic acts of virtue; chosen souls ready for every sacrifice wholehearted self surrender; widespread reawakening of faith and of piety.

But on the other hand, sin and evil penetrating the lives of individuals, the sacred shrine of family, the social organism; the being now no longer merely tolerated through weakness or impotence, but excused, exalted, entering as master into the most diverse phases of human life; decadence of the spirit of justice and charity; peoples overthrown or fallen into an abyss of disasters; human bodies torn by bombs or by machine-gun fire; wounded and sick who fill hospitals and come out often with their health ruined their limbs mutilated, invalids for the rest of their lives; prisoners far from those dear to them and often without news of them; individuals and families deported, transported, separated, torn from their homes, wandering in misery without support, without means of earning their daily bread; evils all of them which affect not only the fighters but weigh on the whole population, old men, women and children, the most innocent, the most peace loving, those bereft of all defense; blockades and counter-blockades which aggravate almost everywhere the difficulty of getting supplies of foodstuffs so that already, here and there, famine in all its horrors makes its presence felt; added to this the indescribable suffering, pain and persecution which so many of our dear sons and daughters—priests, religious layfolk—in some places endure for the name of Christ because of their religion, of their fidelity to the church, because of their sacred ministry pains and bitterness which anxiety for those that suffer does not permit us to reveal in all their sad and moving details.

Cites Man's Confusion

Before such an accumulation of evils, of obstacles to virtue, of disasters, of trials of every kind, it seems that man's mind and judgment to astray and become confused and perhaps in the heart of more than one of you has arisen the terrible suggestion of doubt which perchance at the death of the two apostles was a disturbing temptation for some of the less stanch Christians: How can God permit all this? Can an Omnipotent God, infinitely wise and infinitely good, possibly allow so many evils which he might so easily prevent? And there arise to the lips the words of Peter, still imperfect when the passion was foretold: "Lord, be it far from Thee" (Matthew, xvi:22).

No, my God—they think—neither Your wisdom nor Your goodness nor Your honor itself can allow that evil and violence dominate to such an extent over the world, deride You and triumph by Your silence. Where is Your power and Providence? Must we then doubt either Your Divine Government or Your love for us?

"Thou savorest not things that are of God, but the things that are of men" (Matthew, xvi:23), said Christ to Peter just as he had made the prophet Isaiah say to the people of Judah: "My thoughts are not your thoughts, nor your ways my ways" (Isaiah, iv:8).

All men are as children before God, all, even the most profound thinkers and the most experienced leaders of peoples. They judge events with the foreshortened vision of time, which passes and flies past irreparably; God, on the other hand, sees events from on high from the unmoved center of eternity. They have before their eyes the limited view of a few years; God has before Him the all-embracing panorama of the ages.

They think of human events in relation to their proximate causes and immediate effects; God sees them in their remote causes and judges them in their remote effects. They stop to single out this or that particular responsible hand; God sees a whole hidden complicated convergence of responsibilities because His exalted Providence does not exclude the free choice of evil and good in human selections. They would have immediate justice and are scandalized at the ephemeral power of the enemies of God, the sufferings and humiliations of the innocent permitted by God; but our Heavenly Father, who in the light of His eternity, embraces, penetrates and dominates the vicissitudes of time as much as the serene peace of the endless ages, God who is the Blessed Trinity, full of compassion for the weaknesses, ignorance and impatience of men but who loves men too much for their faults to turn Him from the ways of His wisdom and love, continues and will continue to make His sun to rise upon the good and bad and to rain upon the just and the unjust (Matthew 5:45) to guide their childlike steps with firmness and kindness if only they will let themselves be led by Him and have trust in the power and the wisdom of His love for them.

What does it mean to trust in God?

Design of Justice

Trust in God means the abandonment of oneself with all the force of the will sustained by grace and love, in spite of all the doubts suggested by appearances to the contrary, to wisdom, the infinite love, of God. It means believing that nothing in this world escapes His Providence, wether in the universal or in the particular order; that nothing, great or small, happens which is not foreseen, wished or permitted, directed always by Providence to its exalted ends which in this world are always inspired by love for men. It means believing that God can permit at times here below for some preeminence of atheism and of impiety, the lamentable obscuring of a sense of justice, the violation of law, the tormenting of innocent, peaceful, undefended, helpless men. It means believing that God at times thus lets trials befall individuals and peoples, trials by which the malice of men is the instrument in a design of justice directed toward the punishment of sin, towards purifying persons and peoples through the expiations of this present life, and bringing them back by this way to Himself; but it means believing at the same time that this justice always remains here below—the justice of a Father, inspired and dominated by love.

POPE PIUS

However cruel may seem the hand of the Divine Surgeon when He cuts with the lancet into the live flesh, it is always an active love that guides and drives it in and only the good of men and peoples makes Him interfere to cause such sorrow. It means believing finally that the fierce intensity of the trial, like the triumph of evil, will endure even here below only for a fixed time and not longer; that the hour of God will come, the hour of mercy, the hour of holy rejoicing, the hour of the new canticle of liberation, the hour of exultation and of joy (Psalm 95), the hour in which, after having let the hurricane loose for a moment on humanity, the all powerful hand of the Heavenly Father with an imperceptible motion will detain it and disperse it and, by ways little known to the mind or to the hopes of men, justice, calm and peace will be restored to the nations.

We know well that the most serious difficulty for those who have not a correct sense of the divine comes from seeing so many innocent victims involved in suffering by the same tempest which overwhelms sinners. Men ever remain indifferent when the hurricane which tears up the great trees also cuts down the lowly little flower which opened at their feet only to lavish the grace of their beauty and fragrance on the air around them. And yet these flowers and their perfumes are the work of God and of His wonderful designing! If He has allowed any of these flowers to be swept away in the storm can He not, do you think, have assigned a goal unseen by the human eye for the sacrifice of that most unoffending creature in the general arrangement of the law by which He prevails over and governs nature? How much more then will His omnipotence and love direct the lot of pure and innocent human beings to good!

Through the languishing of faith in men's hearts, through the pleasure seeking that moulds and captivates their lives, men are driven to judge as evil, and as unmixed evil, all the physical mishaps of this earth. They have forgotten that suffering stands at the threshold of life as the way that leads to the smiles of the cradle; they have forgotten that it is more often than not the shadow of the Cross of Calvary thrown on the path of the Resurrection; they have forgotten that the cross is frequently a gift of God, a gift which is needed in order to offer to the divine justice our share of expiation; they have forgotten that the only real evil is the sin that offends God; they have forgotten what the apostle says: "The sufferings of this time are not worthy to be compared with the glory to come, that shall be revealed in us." (Romans 8:18), that we ought to look on Jesus "the author and finisher of faith; who having joy set before Him endured the cross" (Hebrew 12:2.)

To Christ crucified on Golgotha, the virtue and wisdom which draws the whole world to itself, they turned their gaze amidst the immense tribulations bound up with the spread of the gospel, those two princes of the apostles who in life were nailed to the cross with Christ, and died, Peter crucified, Paul bending his neck to the headsman's sword. As leaders, teachers and witnesses to the fact that in the Cross is comfort and salvation and that there is no living in the love of Christ without suffering.

Glory in Sufferings

To that cross which illumines the way, the truth and the life, the Roman protomartyrs and the first Christians looked in the hour of suffering and persecution. Do you, too, dear children, look upon your sufferings thus; and you will find the strength not merely to accept them with resignation but to love them, to glory in them as the apostles and saints; our fathers and elder brothers who were formed of the same flesh as you and had the same power of suffering, loved them and glorified in them. Look on your sufferings and difficulties in the light of the sufferings of the crucified, in the light of the sufferings of the Blessed Virgin, the most innocent of creatures and the most intimate sharer in the passion of our Lord, and you will be able to understand that to be like the exemplar, the Son of God, king of sufferings, is the noblest and safest way to Heaven and victory. Do not look merely at the thorns which afflict you and cause you pain but think also of the merit which sprouts from your sufferings like the rose of heavenly garland; and you will find then, with the grace of God, the courage and strength of that Christian heroism which is at once sacrifice and victory, and peace surpassing all sense; heroism which your faith has the right to exact from you.

"And in fine," (to repeat in the words of Saint Peter), "Be ye all of one mind, having compassion one of another, being lovers of the brotherhood, merciful, modes to humble: not rendering evil for evil nor railing for railing: but contrariwise blessing . . . that in all things God may be honored through Jesus Christ: to whom is glory and empire for ever and ever" (First Peter 3:8; 4:11).

But, if the sublime heights of Christianity cause our thoughts to be thus exalted, we feel too in the depth of our heart how the desire of all our children coincides with ours asking God that in so grave an hour in history the virtue of all be equal to their faith.

Blesses Italian People

Our thoughts go especially to thee of Rome our native city in a double sense, the object of eternal counsel, accustomed to bear with such noble sense of duty the greater burdens in the life of the church. To thee before all goes our blessing, for we know that thou wilt not, in this hour, in thy serene strength and exercise of good, deny the faith which has made thee mistress of the world and majestic to the nations where Christian culture obtains.

Together with thee we bless the whole Italian people, which in the privilege of possessing the center of unity of the church, presents the manifest signs of a God-given mission and which in the monuments of its chequered but glorious story throughout the centuries shows forth unbroken its Catholic traditions.

To the whole world finally wherever we have children, all equally dear to us, we extend our blessing, while our heart trembles within us as we think of those people who suffer more from the present disastrous calamities which have already filled the earth with such conflicts and such mourning. Nor would we exclude from our prayer and good wishes those who as yet are far from the bosom of the church, that they may feel her insistent invitation to return and that they too may seek in her salvation and peace.

In this way we present all to Jesus Christ the Redeemer of all. And in His name, with the authority of the Holy Apostles Peter and Paul, whose martyrdom and triumph we celebrate, we impart to all, from the depths of our heart, the apostolic benediction.

War Is Regarded As Punishment For Mankind's Sins

Pope Gives Little Comfort to Axis

The pontiff listed the "comforting sights" of these days but not one of them even hinted at Russia. On the other hand, the "sins and evils" that the Pope featured in an eloquent and deeply-felt passage spare neither side in the conflict and, indeed, contain some strong references that should not be welcomed across thee Alps. The passage which seems to refer to the Russian war is this one:

"All men are as children before God, even the most profound thinkers and the most experienced leaders of peoples (the Pope here used the word "condottieri," which is applied in Fascist circles exclusively to Premier Musolini and Reichsfuehrer Hitler), and they judge with foreshortened vision of time which passes and flies past irreparably. God, on the other hands, sees events from on high, from the unmoved center of eternity.

"They have before their eyes the limited view of a few years. God has before him the all-embracing panorama of the ages. They think of human events in relation to their proximate causes and their immediate effects. God sees them in their remote effects. They stop to think about this or that particular responsible land. God sees a whole hidden complicated convergence of responsibility because his exalted Providence does not exclude the free choice of evil and good in human selection."

This is interpreted in Vatican circles as meaning that Providence does not concentrate on an immediate cause, such as this week's attack against the Communists, but takes into account all that has preceded, all the reason that motivate it and all the effects which are intended and which may be something more than a purely ideal desire to destroy bolshevism.

There was an equally significant passage a little later in the talk in which the Pope was explaining what it meant to trust in God.

"It means believing that God can permit at times here below for some time the predominance of atheism and impiety," the pontiff said in part:

"The lamentable obscuring of a sense of justice, the violation of law, the tormenting of innocent, peaceful, undefended, helpless men. It means believing that God at times thus lets trials befall individuals and peoples, trials of which the malace of men is the instrument in the design of justice erected toward the punishment of sin, toward purifying persons and peoples through the expiations of this present life and bringing them back, by this way, to Himself."

If this passage has a political meaning it is that the instrument whereby Bolshevism is being punished is "the malice of men" and not an idealistic crusade.

The importance of the political issues involved in this message has tended to obscure the fact that it was primarily a religious homily intended to comfort tormented minds, which are asking themselves the age-old question of how a beneficient Providence can permit such horrors as the world is now witnessing. The talk was called by the English announcer, "A radio message to the whole world on divine Providence in human events," and it was in commemoration of the feast of Saints Peter and Paul, which occurred today.

U. S. Seizes 29 In Defense Spy Roundup

funds sent through banks in neutral countries, particularly in South America, where the drafts were ordered payable through United States banks to certain individuals in the ring. Some of the agents here got their money in United States currency from travelers who arrived here directly from Europe.

The ring was so bold in its work, Hoover said, that in several instances efforts were made to deliver abroad models of instruments manufactured in this country that were vital to national defense.

Hoover declared that of those under arrest two were born in the United States and one was a naturalized citizen. Besides the 22 Germans, the prisoners are French, Russian, Austrian and South African.

The most important of the prisoners was described by Hoover as Frederick Joubert Duquesne, whose record as a spy extends, he said, for more than 40 years. Hoover said Duquesne served as a spy in the Boer war and in addition was active in behalf of the German interests in the last war. Duquesne was born on December 21, 1877, in Cape Colony, South Africa. He is a naturalized citizen. By occupation he is a writer, lecturer and "professional spy." Hoover said that in the last war Duquesne was charged with insurance fraud and murder in connection with the sinking of the British ship Tennyson. He escaped from a cell at Bellevue Hospital here in 1918.

Mr. Hoover placed next in importance Else Weustenfeld, 42 years old, a naturalized citizen who was born in Essen, Germany. She described herself as a stenographer and notary public. Hoover said that this woman, who did secretarial work in the office of the German consulate here, was one of the paymasters in the ring. He said she was active in the work of the ring and constantly aware of the movements of its members.

Another said to be important to the ring in obtaining information was Evelyn Clayton Lewis, 37, who was born in Fayetteville, Ark. She said she was an artist, sculptor and playwright. Hoover called attention to the fact that she gave the same address as that given by Duquesne. He said the woman was responsible more or less with Duquesne in directing the ring.

Also under arrest is Lilly Barbara Stein, a German who has applied for first naturalization papers. She said she was 27 years old and an artist's model. Mr. Hoover said she moved in "social" circles and collected information for the higher-ups in the ring.

(The New York Herald Tribune reported that Ogden H. Hammond, jr., son of a former Ambassador to Spain, said last March that the State Department was investigating his relations with one Lilly Stein, of Vienna, during his term as vice consul at that city and later at Leipzig. His relations with Miss Stein, he said, were at all times entirely proper. Hoover identified the woman under arrest as the Miss Stein involved in the Hammond case, the Herald-Tribune said.—Editor's note.)

Hoover named Heinrich Carl Eilers, 41-year-old naturalized German as chief of the trans-Atlantic carriers of the ring. He was formerly a library steward on the liner Manhattan.

Leo Waalen, a German citizen, was described by Hoover as a "particularly active member" of the ring. He gave his occupation as a painter. Just what part he played in the espionage activity was not disclosed but he was considered as one of the major prisoners.

Hoover singled out Herman Lang, a naturalized citizen, as "one of the very active members of the ring." He is a machinist and draftsman and lives in Glendale, Long Island, a section heavily populated with German-Americans.

Alfred E. Brokhoff, a 39-year-old mechanic, was arrested in West New York, N. J. He was said to have produced information for the ring as a result of his activities along the waterfront piers in Manhattan, particularly those of the United States Lines. Another "important" courier was described as Hartwig Richard Kleiss, a naturalized citizen, and a seaman formerly working on the President Harding, the Manhattan and the America.

Carl Reuper, a machinist and naturalized German-born citizen, was also arrested in New Jersey. He was described as one of the original founders of the German-American Alliance, with headquarters in Chicago. Reuper was employed by the Westinghouse Electric Co. in Jersey City.

The headquarters of the ring in this area were said to be the Little Casino Restaurant in Yorkville. Richard Eichenlaub, named as the proprietor, was taken into custody.

"This restaurant was a principal rendezvous of most of the agents arrested," Mr. Hoover declared. He declined to make public specific details of the arrests.

The complaints were filed by special agents of the Bureau of Investigation, and the warrants were issued in Brooklyn. All the suspects are charged with conspiracy to violate the provisions of Section 32 of Title 50, United States Code, which makes it a crime to transmit unlawfully information affecting national defense and to utilize that information to the injury of the United States or to the advantage of a foreign nation.

Hoover said the importance of the arrests was indicated by the fact that since the enactment of the Espionage Act in 1917 there have been only 19 convictions for its violation.

"I would consider this to be the largest espionage case developed since the enactment of the act," Hoover said. "The arrests were made as a result of counterespionage activity by our agents in which we used the 'fly-trap' method, which made it possible for us to apprehend such a large number at one time."

The maximum penalty on conviction on the charges preferred against the prisoners, in time of peace, is imprisonment for not more than 20 years. Discussing the arrests after announcement of the round-up, Hoover said:

"Among the individuals taken into custody, some are or recently have been employed in plants manufacturing equipment vital to the national defense. Others have served until very recently aboard American flag vessels engaged in transatlantic and coastwise travel and on transatlantic clipper planes.

"Investigation conducted has disclosed widespread and diversified efforts on the part of the members of this ring to obtain and transmit to their principals data relative to the rearmament program of the United States, the manufacture of aircraft and other munitions of war and infomation relating to ship movements, commercial and industrial developments."

Another of the men arrested, listed as Axel Wheeler-Hill, was identified by Hoover, according to the Associated Press, as a brother of James Wheeler-Hill, a former national secretary of the German-American Bund convicted on a charge of perjury in connection with the trial of Bund Leader Fritz Kuhn. He was given an indeterminate sentence of not more than three years in February, 1940.

The others accused, with the identification of each as carried by the Associated Press, are:

Paul Bante, New York City, born Lennep, Germany, November 14, 1890. Naturalized American citizen. Iron worker, tool and die maker.

Max Blank, New York City, born September 7, 1902, at Freiburg, Germany. German citizen. Seaman, bookkeeper and clerk and was employed by German Library of Information, 17 Battery Place, New York.

Rudolf Ebeling, New York City, born November 24, 1896, at Wittenstock, Germany. Naturalized American citizen. Shipping clerk and foreman.

Josef August Klein, New York City; born Dusseldorf, Germany, November 3, 1903; German subject who has filed first United States naturalization papers; commercial photographer.

Felix Jahnke, New York; born December 6, 1902, Breslau, Germany; naturalized American citizen; a soda dispenser.

Paul Al W. Scholz, New York; born March 15, 1900, at Reichenbach, Germany; German citizen; book salesman for the Germania Book & Specialty Co.

Heinrich Stade, New York; born January 3, 1901, Hanover, Germany; naturalized American citizen; musician.

Hartwig Richard Kleiss, New York. Born August 21, 1896, at Frankfurt, Germany. Naturalized American citizen. Seaman; formerly employed on the S. S. President Harding, S. S. Manhattan and S. S. America.

Everett Minster Roeder, (210 Smith Street) Merrick, N. Y., born New York City, June 12, 1894. Engineer and designer.

Oscar R. Stabler, of Brooklyn, N. Y., arrested in Westwood, N. J., born December 24, 1904, Stuttgart, Germany. Naturalized American citizen. Former ship's barber on the S. S. Excambion.

George Gottlob Schuh, (182 North Maple Avenue) East Orange, N. J., born December 5, 1888, at Hochdorf, Germany. Naturalized American citizen. Carpenter.

Edmund Carl Heine (20 Poplar Park Avenue), Pleasant Ridge, Mich., born January 20, 1891, at Zeulenroda, Germany. Formerly representative for Ford Motor Co. and Chrysler Corporation in Germany and Spain. Naturalized American citizen.

Vatican Envoy Predicts World Catholic Reunion

Chicago, June 29 (AP).—Archbishop Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, Apostolic delegate to the United States, predicted today the eventual reunion of the 160,000,000 Greek and other Eastern orthodox Christians of the world with the Roman Catholic Church.

In a sermon at the First National Eucharistic Congress of the Eastern Rite Catholic Churches, he lauded the Eastern rites as celebrated in the closing mass, and added:

"The Holy See has constantly desired that these Oriental rites be preserved entire in form and spirit. We think that they are and will continue to be providential means for the return of well over 160,000,000 Christians separated from us today. They belong to these rites, and on their return to the Catholic Church they will rejoice in finding them intact, loved and venerated."

False Teeth Wearers Often Worst Breath Offenders!
"Need More Than a Mouth Wash" say Authorities... Recommend Poligrip
A thin dark film collects on plates and bridges. This film soaks up odors and impurities like a sponge! It holds germs and decay bacteria, and it is so tough that ordinary brushing seldom removes it. It gets into every tiny crevice where brushing can't even reach. Almost always it results in "denture breath"—probably the most offensive of all breath odors.
Yet there's a perfect way to clean and purify false teeth without brushing, acid or danger. It is Polident, a powder that dissolves away all scum, stains, tarnish and odor. Makes breath sweeter—and plates or bridges look better and feel better. Tens of thousands call Polident a blessing for comfort, convenience and hygiene. Long-lasting can costs only 30¢ at any drug store. Approved by Good Housekeeping Bureau and dentists everywhere.
Cleans, Purifies Like Magic
Do this daily: Add a little Polident powder to ½ glass water. Stir. Then put in plate or bridge for 10 to 15 minutes—Rinse—and it's ready to use!

Tripartite Pact Held Peace Move

Agreement Aims to Keep U. S., Japan Out of Present War, Premier Declares

Japan's premier, in the following exclusive interview, asserts that the purpose of Nippon's alliance with Germany is entirely defensive and designed to keep both Japan and the United States out of the European War.

By Arthur Menken
United Press Staff Writer

Tokyo, June 29.—Japan is extremely anxious to maintain friendly relations with the United States and the imperial government "sees no reason why the two countries cannot remain friendly," Premier Prince Fumimaro Konoye told me today in an exclusive interview.

The three-power pact among Japan, Germany and Italy, the premier said, was designed to keep both Japan and the United States from being involved in the European war.

The premier declined to discuss the Russo-German War in detail, because of the present fluctuating situation, but made it clear that he hopes that conflict will not aggravate Japanese-American relations.

He asked that Americans make a vigorous effort to understand Japan's position, which he conceives to be that of a factor for peace and stability in East Asia, and insisted that Japan is not a partner to any German plan for world conquest.

The prince explained Japan's program for peace and orderly political and economic development in East Asia is well known and that the three-power pact was intended to assist in that plan.

"The tripartite pact," he said, "has one chief purpose—of a defensive nature. I do hope that the people of the United States will understand its spirit as we envisage it. Let me repeat, again and again, that I can see no reason why the Japanese and American people cannot remain friendly."

Up to this point the premier, who speaks English well, had used that language, but he switched to Japanese as he went into a discussion of the "purely defensive" background of the three powers treaty.

Then, resuming the use of English, he added that he wished to be most emphatically and clearly understood when he asserted that Japan's recent political relations with Germany all have been motivated by a desire to keep the war away from the Far East.

I asked whether the premier believed that the resources of the United States in raw materials and specialized industry could be combined with Japan's special ability in shipping and certain phases of manufacturing and distribution, to make a strong combination for peace throughout the world and he replied with obvious satisfaction:

"Yes, that is true. Indeed I do."

Vichy May Ask Turkey to Help Defend Syria

By the Associated Press

Vichy, June 29.—Indications were growing in Vichy today that Turkey might be asked for aid in some form in the French defense of Syria against British attack.

Such a request was considered likely to be the main mission of Jacques Benoist-Mechin, vice president of the Vichy cabinet, who arrived in Aankara June 28 with a special message from Chief of State Marshal Petain for the Turkish President Ismet Inonu.

(Turkish reports had said Benoist-Mechin would ask Turkish permission for French troops retreating from Syria to cross Turkey.)

The well-informed Telemondial agency linked Benoist-Mechin's trip to a recent article by Jean Luchaire in the Paris newspaper Les Nouveaux Temps, which said:

"If it happens that the French army of the Levant, deprived of reinforcements and supplies, be obliged to retreat or lay down arms, a danger of the most extreme gravity would weigh, ipso facto, upon Turkey. The most elementary prudence thus counsels the Turkish government to facilitate by all opportune means the French defense of Syria."

It has been reported in Vichy, ever since Benoist-Mechin left, that he was charged either with preventing Turkish entry into the conflict (to aid Britain), or negotiating for passage of French supplies of all kinds to aid embattled Syrian garrisons.

The Luchaire article pointed out that by the treaty of June 23, 1939, in which France ceded Alexandretta to Turkey, France declared she never would renounce her mandate over Syria and Lebanon to a third power.

Of the accord, Luchaire wrote: "One can affirm that France not only is defending Syria and Lebanon against British aggression to safeguard our imperial interests, but that her troops today are fighting to maintain the promise made to the Turkish government two years ago."

Allied Forces Report New Gains in Syria

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

London, June 29.—Allied land forces in Syria have occupied part of the Jebel Mazar mountain range and Saba Biyar, 60 miles southwest of Palmyra, which is still besieged by British troops, it was learned today.

The official communique from British headquarters in the Middle East announced that local advances had been made in all sectors, and that fighting was continuing.

In the advance Saadize and Es Seydr, nine miles north of Sidon, were entered by the Allies two days ago, it was revealed today. As well as the Chehim-Mazboud area, eight miles northeast of Sidon.

Allied troops, largely Australians, advancing along the coast toward Beirut, Syria's chief port, were meeting fierce opposition from Vichy troops and artillery, in the mountains of Lebanon, although Vichy admitted tonight that their forces had been forced to evacuate their southernmost positions in this district.

Warships Shell Coast

The Vichey communique added that their positions along the Mediterranean coast had been heavily shelled by British warships.

Other British forces were understood to be driving toward Beirut, the Lebanon Capital, in an arc north to west from Damascus.

There was no news of the progress of the Allied column which, according to yesterday's announcement, had captured Nebek, 40 miles northeast of the Syrian Capital, and nearly halfway to Homs, key town on the railroad to Tripoli and Aleppo.

According to foreign reports reaching London tonight, the departure of French troops from Syria was close at hand, as the Allied right wing advance on Homs threatened to encircle the main force of Gen. Henri Fernand Dentz, cutting off retreat to Turkey.

Dentz Residence Bombed

Vichy, June 29 (AP).—British bombers were reported by the French today to have attacked the Beirut residence of Gen. Henri Dentz, commander in chief of French forces in the Levant.

Both Gen. and Madame Dentz were absent when four British bombers accompanied by seven fighter planes made the raid Friday at 5:45 p. m.

Five members of the general's personal guard were killed and four wounded, the French said. Fifteen bombs were dropped, but only two hit the buildings, they added.

Russians Halted German Drive Near Minsk in World War

The reported advance of Nazi forces beyond the Soviet city of Minsk recalls the German drive in that region 25 years ago.

"In the first World War a powerful German unit advanced on Minsk from Wilno (Vilna), along the railroad connecting the two cities," says a bulletin from the National Geographic Society. "At the same time another large detachment marched toward Minsk along the railroad connecting with Baranowicze.

"Hard fighting was reported in daily communiques by both sides. Villages were taken and retaken with bayonet charges. In one day the Germans were reported to have dropped 10,000 shells in a sector held by a single Russian regiment. The German advance was stopped, and early in October, 1916, the Germans withdrew. Not until 1918 did they occupy Minsk.

"Minsk is the capital of the White Russian Soviet Socialist Republic, of which it is the largest industrial, commercial and cultural center. Some 200,000 persons live in the city, whose modern improvements include municipally owned utilities. Attractive suburbs cover the surrounding wooded hills.

"The city is built around Liberty Square, faced by the government buildings of the capital, and trade-union buildings. There are several theaters, one of which produced plays in Hebrew.

"The Roman Catholic cathedral, built in 1650, is located on this square, and also the city clock tower built in 1750 by the Jesuits. Ruins of an ancient fortress remain near the State University library. The city activities include the operation of a municipal pawn shop.

"At one time the population was almost half Jewish. One-fourth belonged to the Greek Catholic Church, about 15 per cent were Roman Catholic, and less than two per cent Mohammedan.

"The city's 70 factories turn out varied products. Its commerce is mostly in agricultural and forest products from the surrounding countryside, where many state and collective farms are located."

Brenda Frazier, Fiance to Take Vows Today

Beauty to Trade Glamour Title For Prosaic 'Mrs.'

By Inez Robb
International News Service Staff Writer

New York, June 29.—Cafe society's perrenial glamour girl, Grenda Frazier, voluntarily abdicates her crown tomorrow when, as the June season's glamour bride, she becomes Mrs. John Simms (Shipwreck) Kelly.

Despite her voluntary abdication, little Miss Frazier's innate talent for glamour will irradiate tomorrow's nuptials like a klieg light.

She will resign her title in a burst of glory as the season's most beautiful bride in a simple, but magnificent gown of snowy white slipper satin, her dark hair fittingly topped by a coronet of pearl orange blossoms.

Two components of her bridal attire have been especially created for her, and are bound to be copied by brides everywhere, just as in the past her contemporaries have copied her long hair-do and her fashionable pallor.

Her wedding veil is made of a new and imported English tulle so fine and mist-like that it has been christened "White Wind" in her honor. And her wedding bouquet is a large lace-like arrangement of waxy lilies of the valley, of a type hereafter to be known as "living pearls."

"She is the most glamorous and beautiful bride I have ever dressed," in the opinion of Herman Patrick Tappe, couturier who has designed wedding gowns for New York's most lovely and fashionable brides for a quarter of a century.

The Tappe gown she will wear tomorrow afternoon is made with a long, fitted basque and an extremely full, circular skirt whose soft folds are elongated in the rear to form a train. The basque is cut with a deep, square neck-line in front, and is made with short sleeves.

The romantically named "White Wind" wedding veil will fall from her coronet of pearl orange blossoms.

The wedding ceremony will be performed at 4:15 p. m. tomorrow before an improvised altar, banked with dozens of white lilies, in the drawing room of the apartment maintained by the bride's mother, Mrs. Frederic N. Watriss, at Carlton House. This is the residential annex of the swank Ritz-Carlton Hotel, where Miss Frazier made her spectacular debut at a ball for more than 1,000 guests during the winter of 1938-39.

But tomorrow's wedding, in quantity if not quality, will be in sharp contrast to Miss Frazier's debut. Only 20 relatives, friends and old family retainers will witness the actual ceremony. However, between 200 and 250 guests have been invited to the reception to follow in the Ritz-Carlton's crystal room, to be decorated with masses of yellow roses.

BRENDA FRAZIER

The 20 guests at the wedding ceremony will include the bride's grandmother, Lady Jane Williams-Taylor, of Montreal, who has been a glamour girl de luxe all her life and who is still the social dictator of Nassau despite the advent of the Duchess of Windsor. The wedding guests also include Miss Elsa Maxwell and hte faithful nursemaid who has cared for Brenda since infancy.

The 20-year-old bride will be given in marriage by her step-brother, Frederic Watriss. Both he and Kelly, 31, will be sartorial visions in the customary formal morning attire, complete with gray stock, dark morning coat, striped pants and spats.

Kelly, football star of the University of Kentucky who came to New York to play professional football nine years ago, will take his bride to Honolulu for a brief honeymoon. Honolulu currently is to the cafe set what Niagara Falls was to its grandparents.

When they return from Honolulu, the young Kellys will temporarily occupy Kelly's bachelor apartment while looking for a town house. Miss Frazier, who says she wants a small house, will probably be forced to rent a spacious annex to house her wedding presents.

Silver, glassware, china, pictures, books, linens, lamps, end tables, and assorted odds and ends continued to pour into the Watriss apartment over the weekend. One of the bride-to-be's biggest problems was where to stow the stuff, including the silver picture frame from the William K. Vanderbilts.

U. S. Mineral Situation Good, Survey Shows

Among developments yesterday bearing on defense was completion by a Senate Military Subcommittee of the first phase of an investigation of the supply of strategic war materials. It said the evidence was conclusive that domestic production of chromite, manganese, antimony, mercury and tungsten could be increased materially. There also was an indication, the committee said, that the United States might be made self-sufficient in the production of these materials "without an undue effect on the consumer market."

The committee listed these five, along with nickel and tin, as the leading strategic minerals. In normal times, it said, the supply of all seven comes from 30 foreign countries "where for the most part a somewhat higher grade of minerals were produced by very low-cost labor."

"The inquiry, the committee reported, had developed these facts:

"First, that with the exception of nickel and tin there are large low grade deposits of such minerals mostly located in the western half of the United States; second, that there are known processes of beneficiation through which these minerals can be made available to industry; and third, that a somewhat lower grade can be utilized by the steel and munitions industries without an undue effect on the cost or grade of the product."

Elsewhere in Washington there were these other defense developments:

Secretary Ickes was advised by Abe Fortas, acting director of the Interior Department's power division, that steps were being taken to avert a "threatening power shortage in the West, center of airplane and other defense production.

The Foreign Policy Association, a private research organization, reported that the power and transportation systems might "prove inadequate to the extraordinary demands" of the defense program. It was improbable, however, the report added, that the power shortage would be severe enough to hamper defense production seriously.

It also was unlikely, the report continued, that a breakdown of transportation facilities would develop.

In his report to Ickes, Fortas said a current power deficiency in the San Francisco Bay area was being met by the interchange of power with Southern California, made possible by the production at Boulder Dam.

ABC Plea Poses Airport Question Of Jurisdiction

The question of jurisdiction over the new Washington National Airport, whether it be under the statutes of the District or of Virginia, will come up July 7 before the District Alcoholic Beverage Control Board.

On that day the local beverage board will consider protest to granting a class "C", on-sale liquor license to Air Terminal Service, Inc., at the airport. The case will be heard at 10 a.m.

Although the protesting party was not revealed under the Commissioners orders, it was believed to be Representative Howard Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, because at the time the dispute came up regarding the jurisdiction of the airport, the Virginia Congressman stated he would fight issuance of a license.

The Virginia liquor laws forbid on-sale of alcoholic beverages. Corporation Counsel Richmond E. Keech held the airport to be in District jurisdiction. Thereafter the airport concessionaires sought a liquor license from the local beverage board.

Venezuelan Scout Loses His Wallet After 20,000 Miles

Over a 20,000-mile hiking trail which he followed from his native Venezuela to Washington, Julio Caesar Berrizbeitia, 19-year-old Boy Scout, held on to his wallet.

Saturday night he lost it while sightseeing in the Capital. With it he also lost his passport, his United States visitor's permit, a $50 check and $6 in cash.

The young Scout who began his adventure back in 1939, said he was last aware of the wallet in his pocket when he left a downtown hotel where he had been swimming. He then walked to Fourteenth and Pennsylvania Avenue and later made a trip to the old airport where he had dinner.

Berrizbeitia is living at the Venezuelan Embassy, where he will be glad to receive information about his missing property.

"JIVIN' JACK" ON FULL TIME. Casino Royal's swingmaster, "Jivin' Jack" Schafer, will be on the bandstand hereafter for both dinner and supper sessions and for the Saturday matinee show, according to the terms of a contract signed last Saturday afternoon. This means that Jack leaves the Capitol Theater orchestra to devote full time to Casino Royal instead of dashing back and forth between the two spots. And what a break for Casino Royal dinner patrons! Before this they've had to sit around for the supper show if they were determined to see and hear Jack hit the stratosphere with trumpet notes, sing and dance in his own boogie-woogie style . . . Another change at Cansino Royal is the advent of Hugh Barteman, swing guitarist and saxophonist, formerly with the Madrillon. He'll be right in the groove with Swingster Schafer.

"The Lovely Nook," that pretty song written by Col. C. C. Schiffeler, manager of the Raleigh Hotel, will soon be hard on the Sunday afternoon "Hour That Refreshes." Andre Kostelanetz is making a special radio arrangement of the tune.

THE JUDGING BUSINESS IS FINE. A bid to sit on the judges' committee of the Neptune Room's "Impersonators Night" tomorrow eve has just arrived. Also a request to act as one of the judges of the American Legion beauty contest on the S. S. Mt. Vernon Thursday night. . . . This must be the reward for being one of the judges who worked on the selection of such topflight charmers as this year's "Miss Washington," "Miss Connecticut Avenue," "Miss Treasury," and "Miss Kappa Gamma."

HI HAT GETS FACE LIFT. When you walk into Hi Hat today, you'll think the old place looks mighty nice, but you won't know exactly why. By a miracle of overtime work on three weekends, Hi Hat's been completely done over without changing its own sweet face. New tarpon scale walls just like the old ones (but much, much whiter) were applied yesterday. This makes the job complete since gay, red-and-green composition floors and a sound-proof ceiling were installed on previous weekends.

FACES AROUND PLACES. Lounge Riviera, Anne Gillis, radio publicist and her commentator husband, Bill Slocum. Whenever you see Anne she's wearing a little silver cross. There must be a story to it. Betty Lansdowne looking like a posey in rose linen and blonde Tudor Marcel looking vurra svelte in a shirtwaist outfit . . . Rainbow Room. Jim Dewey, Labor Department conciliator, walking carefully with a cane because of a broken bone in his foot. And receiving compliments because of his work in the Ford conciliation with C. I. O. . . . Restaurant "823." Fritz Kleman, riding academy owner who has one of the nicest chores in town. He oversees the riding instruction of the Arlington Hall seminary girls.

Charles Pecora, guitarist of the Mayflower's Chordsmen, is a cousin of famed Judge Ferdinand Pecora, who dug up all those embarrassing "tin boxes" in New York politics a few years ago.

ODDITIES. That's no mole on the fair cheek of Valentina of the Madrillon. It's a beauty spot. We're trying to get her to wear one on her midriff. . . . Greeter Teddy of the Mayflower lives in a swirl of popcorn, potato chips and other snacks. But he's never tasted popcorn in his life. By the time this is printed, he'll probably be gobbling it by the bowlful. Anything to make a fibber out of a columnist. . . . But our prize health diet is that of Mrs. Lily Santmyer, owner of L'Escargot, who says she's never drank a drop of water in her life. She doesn't think it's healthy.

WE'RE A GYPSY. Laczi, the bona fide gypsy cymbalon player of the Plymouth, made us officially gypsy the last time we visited there. It was a matter of drinking a toast with interlocked wrists and fingers. And there was a kiss mired up in it somewhere.

PRIZE PRETTIES AND RAIMENT. Honey - haired Evelyn Knight of the King Cole Room has a sleek and sporty evening get-up of tailored yellow blouse with matching braided belt and slim, floor-length skirt of black accordion pleating. . . . Lady Vine of the Starlight Roof is no end verdant in jade green chiffon that clings to every curve and is encrusted with matching sequins. . . . People gasp with delight at the white and pale yellow feather costumes worn by the Lotus Dancettes. They include huge headdresses and long trains of plumes. In between? Well, ah, there aren't any feathers. . . . Mixer "Chuck" O'Donnell of the Anchor Room is showing bathing pictures of his year-old daughter, Mavourneen. And you should see her lovely bathing costume. It's her own pretty pink skin.

Leslie Hare and Johnny Harisfeld, of the Robinhood, are the youngest entertaining team around town. They both broke into the Washington diversion picture last winter in the Neptune Room as solo performers. Since then they've formed a partnership.

AT FAVORITE EATING PLACES. Air conditioning in the Harrington Tavern is perfect. But the management also keeps electric fans going. The idea is that even fresh, cool air is nicer for a good stirring up . . . You get five varieties of succulent sea food in the shore dinners at Olmsted's Grill—also delicious rum buns and loads of trimmin's. All for six bits. Who started that rumor about food prices going up? . . . Hogates's are very proud of their share of the summer crop of red snapper and shrimp, say they're the best for several seasons.

HEARD IN A SHOREHAM SERVICE ELEVATOR. Enter a bell hop with three pairs of sports shoes. Some one asks: "Are those the acrobats' shoes?' And the uncanny bell hop said, "Yes and no. They're former Ambassador Bullitt's shoes.'

GLEN ECHO'S IN THE GROOVE. This hot weather is the finest time of the year at Glen Echo, the summer home of Paul Kain's band, endless amusement devices and the Crystal Pool. This is a blueprint for a big vacation in one day at Glen Echo. Go out early and spend hours around the Crystal Pool, splashing diving and sunning yourself. Take a late afternoon whirl at the amusement features. Dine on the roof garden as the lights come on and watch the evening crowd pour into the park. By this time you'll be ready for an evening of dancing in the Spanish Ballroom to Paul Kain's specially designed July rhythms.

Great Pianist Was Once 'Child Prodigy' And Was Founder of Modern Poland

By the Associated Press

New York, June 29—Ignace Jan Paderewski, pianist, composer and Polish patriot, who died here tonight, was probably the first world-famous musician in history to abandon his art at the height of his success, devote himself to liberating and unifying his country and then, his program balked by politics, return to still greater international acclaim on the concert stage.

The masterful fingers of the spectacular virtuoso thrilled millions as they drew inspiring interpretations from the piano, but his greatest joy in life come when Poland was recreated an independent nation.

In the historic part which he took in that development, he spent his fortune of $2,700,000. In later years, upon resuming his music, he explained he needed work to live. At the age of 75 he started in a British movie.

From the time he resigned as premier of Poland on December 9, 1919, after less than a year in office, he kept aloof from politicians, but he never lost his ardent patriotism. Until January 28, 1921, in fact, he represented Poland at the League of Nations and in other occasional capacities.

Sold Great Ranch

Then he retired to a 2,600-ranch in Santa Barbara County, Calif., the remnants of an extensive holding of which the greater part had been sold to provide funds for Polish propaganda. It was from this home, which he finally sold in 1934, that he emerged to resume concert work in 1923.

On the concert stage he was a master both as musician and showman. He earned millions of dollars by his concert work, his tours covering North and South America, virtually all European countries, South Africa, the Far East and the Antipodes. The cause of Poland got most of his money, but his other charities were international in scope.

Notable in this category were the Paderewski Fund, established at Boston by a deed of trust dated May 15, 1900, for the encouragement of American composers; gifts to the andowment fund of the American Legion which in 1926 brought him the distinguished service medal of that organization, and $75,000 which he gave in 1929 to French war charities. Decorations from many governments and numerous honorary degrees from universities in America and Europe were awarded both for his musicianship and his humanitarianism.

Paderewski was born November 6, 1860, at Kurylowka, Province of Podolia, in what then was Russian Poland. Like Izst, Kreisler, Elman, Hofmann and many another master musician, he was a "child prodigy." He played creditably in public when he was only 9 and at 16 was a professor of music at the Warsaw Conservatory. He went on his first concert tour in 1876-77, but devoted his time largely to teaching until 1884, when at Strasbourg, he met Mme. Helena Modjeska, the celebrated Polish tragedienne. She recognized his flair for concert work and did much to start him on his real career. Three years later, at Vienna he made a formal debut, following it with triumphs in Paris and London.

His first American appearance was at New York, November 17, 1891. Critics were none too enthusiastic, but the public was startlingly demonstrative and he made a six months tour of the United States, giving 117 recitals. The following season he returned for a series which netted him $2,500 a performance and grossed $180,000—a figure which had been attained by no other instrumentalist. Sure "box office" from then on, he repeated his triumphs at will through 16 succeeding tours, with his official career marking the 1918-21 interlude.

His second wife died January 16, 1934, at their home in Morges, Switzerland, and later that year Paderewski announced he had given up all thought of again touring America. In July, 1936, he appeared in a British film titled "Moonlight Sonata." His work on it showed that despite his 78 years his sense of time was not dulled. Four times in two days he played Beethoven's "Moonlight Sonata" for the sound track and there was a range of only four seconds in the time needed to record the four renditions.

After that he returned to his beautiful estate on the shores of Lake Geneva, occasionally giving concerts for charity.

First Married at 19

Paderewski was twice married, the first time when he was only 19 to Antonina Kersak, of Warsaw. She died a year later in giving birth to a crippled son who became the father's chief concern until his death several years later.

The second wife, whom he married in 1899, was Mme. Helena Goruka, daughter of Baron von Rosen, former Russian ambassador to the United States. By her first marriage she had a son, W. O. Gorski, who was director of the Polish Information Bureau and later became a resident of New York.

Paderewski Dies of Pneumonia at 80

ficial of Poland, and his secretary, I. Kollegalle.

All three were present when he died.

Dr. Asa Liggett Lincoln, one of several physicians who had been attending the aged pianist-statesman, said early this evening his condition was grave. Oxygen had been administered several times during the afternoon and evening although Paderewski was not kept in an oxygen tent.

Meeting Sapped Strength

Dr. Lincoln said that a public appearance at a meeting in New Jersey several days ago apparently sapped Paderewski's none too robust strength, making him an easy victim to pneumonia.

The former premier of the Polish Republic founded at the close of the World War had not played the piano publicly since the start of the present war in 1939, which began with Germany overrunning Poland, which was split up between Germany and Russia.

He was named vice premier of the war council of the Polish government-in-exile in London and gave most of his time to the cause of his people.

No announcement was available immediately as to funeral plans.

When the World War began, Paderewski took up the cause of Poland—then dismembered among Russia, Germany and Austria—and worked feverishly to interest the Allies in restoring it as a country.

Clashed With Pilsudki

In 1921, however, he clashed violently with Marshal Pilsudski, president of the New Poland, and left the country and politics.

Before his hands grew too feeble, Paderewski had played the piano for more than 60 years before millions of listeners.

He attempted a farewell concert tour of the United States in 1939 at the age of 79, but his tired hands and frail body were unable to stand the strain and the tour was cancelled after a highly successful start.

He sailed for Europe in 1939 and returned late in 1940 to spend his last days in the United States, but he made no attempts to play the piano.

475 Auto Deaths Over July Fourth Weekend Forecast

Chicago, June 29 (AP).—A sharp rise in traffic fatalities prompeted a warning to American autoists today to exert extra caution during the mass motor migration of the long Independence Day weekend.

The National Safety Council reported that in the first five months of this year motor vehicle accidents cost 13,760 lives—17 per cent, or almost 2,000, more than the 11,790 lost in a similar 1940 period.

In May alone, the total was 3,000, or 20 per cent greater than the 2,500 of May last year.

The council stated that, in view of this trend, it regarded its estimate that 475 persons would be killed in traffic accidents during the July Fourth celebration as conservative.

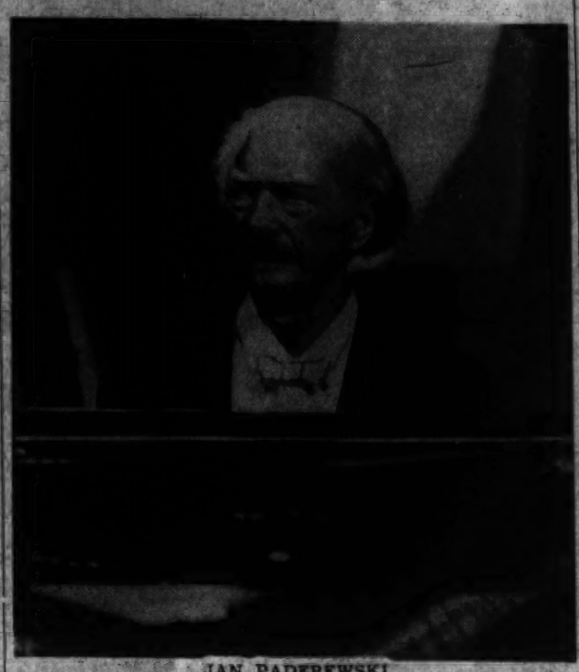
Citing the recent large increase in motor mileage, the council added:

"The upsurge in travel will reach a peak over the three-day Fourth of July holiday, with 30,000,000 cars traveling four billion miles. The only chance to prevent a record-breaking toll is for every driver and every pedestrian to use unusual restraint and caution."

Airport Dedicated

Chicago, June 29 (AP).—The mile square, $6,000,000 municipal airport, one of the largest in the Nation, was dedicated today before a crowd estimated by police at 100,000.

Pianist-Statesman Dies



JAN PADEREWSKI

Wilson Aided Paderewski's National Aims

When George Bernard Shaw, then a London music critic, first heard Paderewski in the late 80's, he confounded his conservative colleagues by praising the Pole. Shaw wrote:

"An immensely spirited, young, harmonious blacksmith, who put on a concert on the piano as upon an anvil and hammers it out with an exuberant enjoyment of the swing and strength of the proceeding . . . His concerto was over, the audience in a wild enthusiasm, and the piano a wreck."

It was in this light, too, that Washington first beheld the successor to Liszt in the early 90's when Paderewski swept the country like a thunderous storm.

On his later visit here, in 1916, the musical genius wasn't interested in his piano. As he himself had said many a time, his country came first; his piano, after.

Europe was at war, and Paderewski saw a chance for the liberation of his country, which like Poland of today had been torn apart and absorbed by greater neighbors. He became an intimate friend of Col. Edward M. House, and through him, with President Wilson.

In the first meeting of the Polish patriot and the champion of democracy at the White House in 1916, Paderewski played because Wilson requested him to—but only works of Chopin, the Polish composer. It was five years before he again took to the concert chamber.

Doublessly that first meeting, and the other that followed, had a great part in Wilson's declaration for a World Monroe Doctrine, January 22, 1917, in which he declared: "I take it for granted that there shall be a united, independent, and autonomous Poland . . . Two years later there words, inspired by the virtuoso, became a reality at Versailles.

In the winter of 1921, when he quit politics and left Europe to convalesce at his California estate, he was received en route by President Harding here, and the following year played in the Capital during a cross-country tour.

America often paid tribute to the master, his fervent music and his fervent love of liberty. Last winter, arriving in New York on his eightieth birthday, he was met by a personal representative of President Roosevelt, Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, who had been Ambassador to Poland.

Last February the country observed the fiftieth anniversary of his first visit to America with a Nation-wide music festival. His native land again in chains, Paderewski died last night in the country that had encouraged his musical genius and national dreams.

D. C. Police Install New Switchboard

Washington police changed over to a new telephone switchboard at 8:10 a. m. yesterday without missing a call even though 3 calls were coming in on the wires at the time.

The new board, located in the new Municipal Building at Third and Indiana Avenue, is equipped with an automatic dialing system operating among the various precincts and offices. The dialing system is intended to increase efficiency in answering incoming police calls because it leaves the operators free from the business of hooking up inter-office calls.

U.S. Communist Party Appeals For Aid to Reds

By the Associated Press

New York, June 29.—The national committee of the Communist Party of the United States issued a statement tonight advocating full American aid to the Soviet Union, Great Britain and all who fight against Hitler.

At the same time, the committee urged that the democratic liberties and economic standards of the American people be preserved and extended as "basic requisites for a successful struggle to defeat German fascism."

Unlimited collaboration of the United States, Great Britain and the Soviet Union was advocated "to bring about the military defeat of fascism." Aid to China and none to Japan also were listed on the committee's program of action against Hitler.

By entering into a treaty of non-aggression with Germany and by adopting a policy of "consistent neutrality," the statement said, the Soviet Union sought to prevent a spread of the war and to reach an early peace.

Now Hitler has attacked the Soviet, the committee continued, because Russia constituted a threat to Hitler's plan "to enslave the peoples of the world."

"The involvement of the Soviet Union in the war has changed the character of the war," the statement asserted, and "creates the opportunity for the people of the United States and for all peoples to unite and assure the complete and final annhilation of Hitler and Hitlerism."

Franco Promises To Punish Rioters

London, June 29 (AP).—Authoritative quarters reported today that Generalissimo Franco of Spain had assured Britain he would punish rioters who stoned the British Embassy June 24.

Franco was said to have given the assurance in a long interview with British Ambassador Sir Samuel Hoare in Madrid. The riot accompanied a Falangist (Spanish Fascist) anti-Russian demonstration in which participants called for destruction of Soviet Russia and "Gibraltar for Spain."

Trapped Army Still in Fight, Russians Say

Berne, Switzerland, June 29.—Large Russian forces described as "caught" in the Bialystok region by the German communique, have "for strategical reasons" not yet been withdrawn, according to Russian comments on the German communique received here tonight.

It is pointed out that German mechanized and tank units operating at the end of 175-mile lines of communication are largely dependent on their supply lines, wherefore the impression grows in neutral military quarters here that a large battle is in preparation in that sector for the immediate future.

On the Baltic sector, Russian military quarters report operations are proceeding according to plan and assert that the enemy is being contained with heavy losses to his mechanized and aerial units.

Nazi Thrust Repulsed

Russian mechanized forces counter-attacking along the Minsk-Baranowicze line succeeded today in cutting off advance German motorized columns driving on Slutzk and midway on that line at Stolbey on the Niemen River, forcing the enemy to withdraw after a fierce encounter between tank divisons, according to reports received here late this evening.

On the southern central front the drive for Lwow from Jaroslav and Przemysl has been contained now for the fifth day in succession, the Russians claim; a second drive directed against the south along a line stretching from Luck to Brody has been driven back with severe losses to the enemy in tanks and materiel.

Resistance being put up by the Russians in this sector led military observers here to believe that whatever may be allowed to happen in White Russia, where Russian troops are falling back in good order to prepared positions, with, it is claimed, slight losses, the Russian high command is determined to resist any German effort to occupy the Ukraine communication lines.

Claim 372 Tanks

During a battle between 4,000 Russian and German tanks in this sector yesterday, the Russian high command claims today 372 German tanks were destroyed, while Russian losses were stated to have aomunted to only 123. The battle in this sector, however, was still continuing at 10 o'clock this morning, when the Russians launched a reinforced counter-thrust in an effort to beat the Germans back to the west across the Styr River on the southern end of the offensive.

In Bessarabia the front in the north continues to hold despite repeated thrusts in an attempt to reach Cernauti. More to the south, the Russian push across the Danube directed toward Tulcea is reported to be progressing favorably, while "ever-increasing numbers of prisoners" are being taken.

On this front, according to neutral estimates, the Russians with about 40 divisions are facing a combined force of 30 German and 50 Rumanian divisions. The Germans in this sector have also concentrated a considerable aerial force, which is at present handling the bulk of "defensive operations" there.

3,500 Do Honor To Borah Memory

Fairfield, Ill., June 29. (AP).—The 76th birthday anniversary of the late Senator William E. Borah of Idaho, who was born in a log house on a farm near here, was commemorated today at a service attended by an estimated 3,500 persons.

Sen. Borah's only living sister, Mrs. Mattie E. Rinard, of Fairfield, was on the speakers' platform. A message was read from the senator's widow, who was unable to attend.

Gov. Dwight H. Green described Borah as the Nation's "greatest champion of true Americanism"

Nazi Drive Fails to Impress Experts

By Bernard Valery

Stockholm, June 29.—The first impression of neutral military observers of the much-heralded German communiques describing German successes against Russia has been one of mild astonishment; everybody seems to have expected more.

Psychologically, the ground for accepting the most fantastic German successes would never be a better one. Even most rabid anti-Nazis are quite prepared to take for granted the tremendous superiority of the German military machine over the Red armed forces. It also looks from here as if Propaganda Minister Joseph Goebbels' staff understood perfectly well the importance of propagating this belief among the neutrals and the United States especially, because it was hoped in Berlin once the impression that nothing can help Russia is deeply anchored in neutral and semi-neutral countries, very little will actually be done to help her or to oppose the German wishes.

That was probably the explanation for all the fantastic rumors about German successes, including a suggestion that Moscow had already been taken, which have originated in Berlin during the past week and had been duly reproduced in the Swedish press.

Nazi Claims Doubted

The German communiques seem to give grounds for several hasty remarks while the only results that really can be checked from the outside, namely, territorial gains, seem to be on rather a modest scale. The figures of destroyed Russian airplanes and tanks, or even the number of Russian prisoners, which cannot be proved at once, are accepted here as extraordinarily large. Neutral military observers here do not hesitate to recall that their experience has shown that German communiques are usually quite correct as to territorial gains, but figures on air victories have often seemed to emanate from Herr Goebbels' headquarters rather than from Reich Marshal Hermann Goering's.

The second observatoin of competent observers here is that German communiques do not contain any reference to the southern front, which, since it is a key to the Ukrainian granary and the Caucasus oil fields, should be more important to the Germans. The capture of Leningrad and Moscow would have a real value if it were immediately followed by anti-Communist insurrection in Russia, but so far there have been no signs of such a possibility in the near future.

Nazis Pulled From Serbia

A despatch in today's newspapers here seems to complete the picture. "German troops of occupation are evacuating Yugoslavia, where they will be replaced by Hungarian troops," it reads. Thus it seems that operations on the Southern Front are not developing as satisfactorily as the Germans had hoped.

As far as the Northern Front is concerned, neutral circles point out, the Germans indeed had good successes in their attack on Minsk, in that direction—known in Russia since the Napoleonic War as the "Door to Smolensk"—they have made about 300 kilometers in one week, which while good is not very surprising.

The figure of 40,000 prisoners and two divisions surrounded is not considered very high here and, it is pointed out, the Germans do not give their own losses.

The general opinion here then is that the Russians are fighting better than expected and the German advance is not as spectacular as anticipated.

It seems that this morning grave events took place in Riga. At 8:40 a. m. the Riga radio, which until then had been silent, suddenly announced in Russian and Lettish: "Attention, attention, the people's commissar Novik orders all movements to cease and all citizens to remain where they are." Then came silence until 9, when the Riga wave length relayed Moscow's reports of the military operations. Half an hour later the same station broadcast in Lettish the names of about a score of persons "discovered, tried and shot" for attempted insurrection, sabotage, etc.

Since noon the Riga radio has not broadcast any more.

Premier Assures Swedes They Still Are Free Nation

Copyright by New York Times

Stockholm, June 29.—Anxieties provoked in Sweden and abroad by the decision of the Swedish government to grant transit rights to one German division proceeding from Norway to Finland, were sharply criticized here today by Premier Per Albin Hansson and by the Minister of Education, Professor Goesta A. Bagge, who categorically declared that Sweden would fight if it were necessary to defend her freedom and independence, which was not the case in this instance.

After having recalled how strongly the feelings of the Swedish people were shocked by the attack against Finland in 1939 and Norway and Denmark in 1940," the premier said "nothing has changed. No concessions jeopardizing our freedom and independence have been made. We expected no such demands would be made . . . but it would be up to us alone to defend our independence.

"Therefore our defensive preparations in all spheres must be maintained."

Dr. Bagge declared, "The decision to allow transit of German troops is naturally serious and its consequences have been well evaluated. With the policy we want to pursue there can be no question but that this is a measure taken only once under special circumstances . . . There will also certainly be unity on this question: If something were demanded of us, if it were in connection with the situation in Finland, which would imperil our sovereignty and integrity, such demands would be rejected with all means even the most drastic ones."

104 Defense Fields Face Labor Lack

Serious Deficiencies Cited by McNutt In Aircraft, Shipbuilding, Machine Shops

The Nation is confronted with a shortage of workers in 104 essential defense occupations, Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt disclosed last night, with "serious shortages" existing in aircraft, shipbuilding and machine shop labor.

Demand for labor is exceeding supply in some defense industry categories, McNutt declared, by a ratio of 50 to 1. There is an insufficient number of qualified workers to fill employers' needs in 16 aircraft, 13 shipbuilding and 26 machine shop occupations, he said.

The Federal Security administrator made public the findings of a Nation-wide survey of labor, covering 394 defense occupations, for only 290 of which adequate forces of skilled manpower were found to be available.

Labor division officials of the OPM, apprised of the report, said it was more "pessimistic" than their own records of the defense labor situation, but disclosed the super defense agency is expanding its industrial training program to embrace 2,000,000 workers, within the next five weeks.

Some of the specific shortages cited by McNutt showed that 978 tool designers were needed up to June 1, but only 61 were registered with State employment offices; 250 die designers were required, but only 16 were available. Only one for every 50 needed detail aircraft assemblers could be found, and one for every 40 needed airplane woodworkers.

Twenty-five hull inspectors were needed by the shipbuilding industry, and none was available. It needed 550 loftsmen, but could find only 15.

Other "extreme shortages" named by McNutt were shipfitters, template makers, boatbuilders, marine machinists, aeronautical engineers, aircraft final assemblers, aircraft riveters, tool and die makers, machinists and lathe operators.

Luxury Buying Rises Sharply As Defense Boosts Incomes

The Commerce Department said yesterday that increased income from the defense program had resulted in huge increases in purchases of "luxury and semi-luxury" goods.

Income payments to individuals are currently estimated at the rate of $85,000,000,000 a year compared with $76,000,000,000 for 1940, the department said. Total retail sales for the first five months of the year are more than 15 per cent above "the comparatively good dollar volume" of the same period last year, the report added.

"Especially notable has been the tendency for the largest percentage sales increases to appear in luxury and semi-luxury lines," the department said. "Thus on the basis of reports from independent stores in 34 States to the Department, the largest gains in sales during the first five months of this year compared to sales in the corresponding period of 1940 were scored by automobile dealers (37 per cent), jewelry stores (28 per cent), furniture and household equipment stores, including radio, (22 per cent) and sporting goods stores (15 per cent)."

The Department also reported that sales of 2,905 wholesale firms, representing 35 kinds of trade, totaled $303,634,000 in May, an increase of 32 per cent over May, 1940, and four per cent over April, 1941.

Treasury to End Year Tonight With Deficit Under Estimate

By L. W. Meredith
International News Service Staff Writer

Record revenue collections and defense spending falling below President Roosevelt's budget will enable Uncle Sam to close his books on fiscal year 1941 at midnight tonight about $1,250,000,000 better off than anticipated, the Treasury revealed last night.

Pending reports on the final four days of June, the Treasury forecast income of $8,500,000,000, an all-time high, and that spending will fall about $500,000,000 below President Roosevelt's budget estimate of $13,-992,370,970.

The anticipated deficit will reach only about $5,000,000,000 compared with the budget forecast of $6,289,-340,970. Even the public debt will fail to cross the $49,000,000,000 mark as predicted by the President. It is now $48,838,294,531.

The working balance in the Treasury is at $1,900,000,000, due not only to record-smashing income tax returns of over $900,000,000 in June but to the sale of United States defense bonds, which recently spurted.

Defense spending will cross the $6,000,000,000 figure, more than accounting for the deficit, since outlays for ordinary Government functions will be only $6,500,000,000, nearly a billion less than for last year. However, some civilian agencies have charged some of their expenditures to defense, since their duties overlap.

The unexpected healthy condition of the Treasury comes from big individual, corporation and excess profits levies imposed by Congress in two tax bills enacted last year. They will exceed $3,500,000,000.

Slash in Budget to Result In Closing 264 CCC Camps

Announcement that 264 CCC camps will be closed July 1 because of reduced appropriations was made yesterday by James McEntee, director of Civilian Conservation.

This will cut the number of camps from 1,500 to 1,236. The CCC appropriation for the fiscal year ending tomorow was to $280,000,000, and is $246,960,000 for 1941-42.

CCC expects to start the new fiscal year with 232,500 men compared with an average in the closing 12 months of 270,000.

Approximately 75,000 new enrollees will be taken in soon, to fill vacancies created by "graduation" and by large numbers of youths leaving the corps to accept jobs in private industry or to join the armed services. The size of the corps will not be increased greatly over the July 1 figure.

McEntee said he would be unable to release a list of the camps closed for several days, as the operation was being carried out by field men and the designation of individual camps was not now available here.

The director said a number of the abandoned camps may be used by the Army for special training purposes.

Roosevelt Calls for 900,000 Men to Be Drafted in Next Year

Bush, president of the Carnegie Institution of Washington, to be director of the OSRD.

Mr. Roosevelt said in his Selective Service order that "The national interest requires that between July 1, 1941, and June 30, 1942, 900,000 men be inducted into the land forces of the United States."

The Secretary of War was instructed to induct the new crop of trainees as the present group finish their one-year training period.

Since the one-year limit on training is fixed by law and can only be changed by act of Congress, it was assumed the President has no present intention of asking that the training period be lengthened.

It appeared from the President's order and from other statements of Army policy that defense officials are anxious to give military training to as large a segment as possible of American men, rather than limiting the program to the group inducted this past year.

There was no indication at temporary White House headquarters whether the President would order the National Guard held in service for more than a year. He can do this by executive order and there have been strong indications that it is planned to lengthen the training period of the guardsmen.

The American Defense Service Medal may be awarded by the Secretary of War, Navy or Treasury to members of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard, the President ordered.

He prescribed that the Good Conduct Medal may be awarded by the Secretary of War "to those enlisted men of the Army of the United States who hereafter honorably complete three years of active Federal service, and who are recommended by their commanding officers for exemplary behavior, efficiency and fidelity."

In establishing the new Office of Scientific Research and Development the President directed that the old National Defense Research Committee, also headed by Dr. Bush, be included in the new framework.

While selecting Dr. Bush as director of the new office, the President named Dr. James B. Conant, president of Harvard University, as chairman of the research committee. Dr. Conant returned recently from a secret scientific mission to England for the President.

Members of the research committee include Dr. Roger Adams, head of the department of chemistry, University of Illinois; Dr. Karl T. Compton, president of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and Dr. Richard C. Tolman, dean of the graduate school of the California Institute of Technology.

Dr. Bush will shortly recommend to the President a list of scientists to be named to a new committee on medical research. This group, it was understood, would study medical problems as they are affected by national defense and war.

The President spent a quiet Sabbath with his family, preparing for dedication tomorrow of the Franklin D. Roosevelt Library.

This $300,000 Dutchess County field stone structure, built along Dutch colonial lines, stands within a few hundred yards of Old Hyde Park House, the President's family home. It houses a documentary record of the New Deal and Mr. Roosevelt's own collections of volumes on Hudson Valley history, books and prints about ships and oddities that the Chief Executive has acquired during more than 30 years of public life.

The President will make a brief speech at short, simple dedicatory ceremonies. The address will not be broadcast.

First Natural Gas Well Roars In at Bergton

Harrisonburg, Va., June 29 (AP).—Bergton's No. 1 natural gas well opened yesterday afternoon with a roar that echoed from the surrounding mountain slopes.

Approximately 1,000 persons, gathered in the northwest Rockingham County community for the opening, saw the blue vapor shoot nearly half the height of the 86-foot derrick with the valve partially opened. Gas was struck at 3,000 feet on June 3. Drilling operations were begun in 1935 but had not been continuous.

4 Congressmen Debate Unified Air Force Plan

Two Congressmen advocated a unified air force for the United States and two disapproved the suggestion in a radio broadcast last night on the American Forum of the Air, via Station WOL.

Speakers in favor of the unified system were Representative Jennings Randolph, of West Virginia, chairman of the House District Committee, and Representative Frank C. Osmers, jr., of New Jersey. Both have introduced bills providing for an independent air force.

Opposing the unified system were Representative Melvin J. Maas and Representative Richard P. Gale, both of Minnesota.

Speaking from the Hotel Willard, Representative Randolph told the radio audience: "I know the Army and Navy have not placed sufficient emphasis on air power. I am interested in making certain that future development of United State air power will be placed in the hands of those who have only one responsibility—maximum developments."

The chairman of the House District Committee asserted that the success of the German military machine was due to unity of command.

Representative Osmers announced that he will introduce an amendment today to his bill for an independent air force. He will ask for the creation of a United States Air Academy "so that the air officers of the future will be steeped in the traditions of the air force, like West Point and Annapolis."

Congressman Gale, opposing an independent air force, stated that "an air force alone cannot act independently as the principal unit using the other agencies as auxiliaries. It is no more reasonable to have a separate air command than it would be to have a separate tank, submarine or battleship command."

Stating that an independent air force is not synonymous with air power, Congressman Maas told the audience that "creating an independent air force, with a separate Cabinet officer, would not only not solve our problem, but would add to its complexity."

Henderson Named to Succeed Schram as RFC Chairman

New Head Once Held Senatorial Post From Nevada

Election of Charles B. Henderson to the chairmanship of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation was announced yesterday by the board of directors. He will succeed Emil Schram, who resigned to become president of the New York Stock Exchange.

Henderson, a member of the RFC board since 1934, is a Nevada Democrat who represented his State in the United States Senate from 1918 to 1921.

He was appointed to the Senate upon the death of Senator Francis G. Newlands, and at the ensuing election was elected to fill out Newland's term.

He is a lawyer and former banker and once was engaged in mining and ranch operations at Elko, Nev.

Henderson was named a member of the RFC board in 1934 to succeed Wilson MacCarthy.

Jesse Jones, Federal Loan Administrator, said Henderson's election had been approved by President Roosevelt.

'Startling Scheme' to Send Alien Refugees to U. S. Is Revealed

By Cecil B. Dickson
International News Service Staff Writer

Disclosure of a "startling scheme" to unload alien refugees now in Canadian prison camps on the United States was made by Representative Allen (Democrat), of Louisiana, in a report to the House revealed yesterday on a bill to plug a loophole in the immigration law.

Allen declared the "Central Committee for Interned Refugees" at West Montreal, Canada, had disclosed in a sensational document that "a scheme has now been devised, in cooperation with the British, Canadian and United States authorities by which it is hoped that where the interned refugee has a good case for immigration to the United States, facilities will be provided which will make the immigration possible."

Speaking for the House Immigration Committee, Allen said:

"The committee feels that if England thinks it is not safe to let these internees run at large, and if Canada feels that way about it, the United States ought not to be expected to let them in. It is too dangerous to take the chance."

Explaining the need for legislation, Allen said that at the beginning of the war Britain rounded up a number of aliens and interned them. Many were sent to Australia and New Zealand, and about 2,500 to Canada, where they were placed in detention behind a wire screen or fence.

"Many of these interned aliens in Canada desire to come to the United States," he said, "and it appears that an organization has been formed in Canada, known as the Central Committee for Interned Refugees, 1121 St. Catherine Street, West Montreal, Canada, which is directing its efforts toward getting these interned aliens into the United States.

Allen said secret evidence placed before the committee shows that "some 450 such interned persons have made application for admission to this country."

Explaining the "scheme," Allen said while these interned refugees could not come directly from Canada under existing law because the dominion is "contiguous territory," should any of these persons go to some other crown colony, such as Newfoundland, it would be possible for them to enter.

"The bill reported by the committee is designed to stop that very situation and to plug that loophole," he said.

Policeman Shot, 2 Bitten

PATROL WAGON FRACAS—Private L. A. McCracken, jr. (second from left) was shot in the shoulder Saturday night by a colored robbery suspect while he and other policemen were taking him to a precinct station in a patrol wagon. The suspect grabbed the revolver of Private William P. Doran (left) and shot McCracken. He also bit Private Chester F. Bernard (third from left) in the forearm. Doran then shot and wounded the suspect. Sergt. A. S. Douglas (right), who arrested the man, was bitten on the shoulder in a scuffle before the wagon arrived

USO to Report Tomorrow; 50% Raised

Brig. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, deputy director of the Selective Service, will be the principal speaker at the third report luncheon of the United Service Organizations Washington campaign tomorrow at 12:30 p. m. in the Mayflower Hotel.

Raising of more than 50 per cent of the District quota of $250,000 will be reported, according to U. S. O. headquarters. Tentative closing date for the campaign is July 4, but U. S. O. officials say that the campaign undoubtedly will be continued until the full amount set for the District has been procured.

Some cities, such as Philadelphia, have just started their campaign, so it is probable the national drive will continue well into the summer. Aim of the U. S. O. drive, which is sponsored by a number of national social and religious agencies, is to raise $10,765,000 throughout the country, for the construction of 360 clubhouses for service men and defense workers. The clubs are designed to provide recreational facilities for soldiers, sailors and marines, and young men and women defense workers.

A meeting of 1,800 volunteer civilian defense registrants, who have been selected for work for the USO, will be held tonight at the Interdepartmental Auditorium, Constitution Avenue, between Thirteenth and Fourteenth Streets Northwest. Charles P. Taft, assistant coordinator of health, welfare and related defense activities of the Federal Security Agency and vice chairman of the Government unit of the local USO campaign, will speak.

Taft and other USO leaders will explain the campaign in Washington to the volunteers and will outline the work they will be assigned to do. Most of the 1,600 will be asigned to immediate duty as USO solicitors.

Between the games at Griffith stadium yesterday afternoon, Sidney F. Taliaferro made an appeal for contributions to the United Service Organization through the radio.

Shenandoah Scouts May Add Cruising

Winchester, Va., June 29.—Salt water cruising may be added to the activities next year of landbound Boy Scouts of the Shenandoah area council, composed of counties in Virginia and West Virginia, it was learned today.

Dan Sievers, scout executive, said six scouters from this city are spending the weekend on a Chesapeake Bay cruise to determine whether the work can be included in the local program.

Those making the cruise aboard a schooner, which put out Saturday morning from the Severn River, included Phil Hunter, Ray Garrabrandt, R. C. Gemmill, Courtney Jones, Fred Bame and Bernard Groves, all of this city.

Berryville Citizens Form USO Group

Berryville, Va., June 29.—A group of citizens met yesterday at Scaleby, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth N. Gilpin, to organize a United Service Organizations branch. R. E. Potts, cashier of Bank of Clarke County, was made temporary chairman. He said the object of the meeting was to arouse the interest of citizens in raising $1,200 for service clubs at cantonments. Ralph N. Dorsey was elected chairman of the campaign and R. E. Potts, treasurer.

Johnson Leading In Texas Election

O'Daniel Running Second, Mann Third, Dies Fourth in U. S. Senate Battle

By the Associated Press

Dallas, June 29.—A correction in the Bexar County (San Antonio) tabulation tonight sliced 239 votes from the lead of Lyndon Johnson in the special senatorial race, but the Texas Election Bureau said all indications pointed to his victory over Gov. W. Lee O'Daniel.

The 9 p. m. (C. S. T.) tabulation of the election bureau showed the 32-year-old New Deal Representative leading O'Daniel by 4,961 votes, showing a loss of 591 votes in Johnson's lead since the 6:30 p. m. count.

The bureau, ending its count until tomorrow morning, gave these totals:

Returns from all of 254 counties including 116 complete, O'Daniel, 162,910; Attorney General Gerald C. Mann, 135,075; Representative Martin Dies, 77,382, and Lyndon Johnson, 167,471.

The election bureau manager, Bob Johnson, said that 96 per cent of the vote apparently had been counted and that barring a miracle Johnson appeared elected the next United States Senator from Texas—chosen to fill the term cut short by the death of Morris Sheppard a few months ago. The bureau estimated about 18,000 or so votes still out, widely scattered over Texas. Dies and Mann both conceded defeat.

O'Daniel, behind for the first time in a Texas election, wanted to go to Washington to seek more Federal pension money and "twist the tails of professional, pussyfooting, backslapping, pie-eating politicians who couldn't run a peanut wagon successfully."

The youthful Mann, "Little Red Arrow" of Southern Methodist University football fame, conceded his defeat last night. No comment came from the Orange (Texas) home of Representative Dies, who campaigned on his record as a ferreter of subversive activities of Communists and Nazis.

The winner will serve until January, 1943, filling the unexpired term of the late Senator Sheppard, father of prohibition, and the late Senator Andrew Jackson Houston, who died last Thursday. O'Daniel appointed Houston, son of Texas' greatest hero, Sam Houston, as interim Senator until election of a new one.

Cooperation for Defense Urged On States as Governors Meet

By the Associated Press

Boston, June 29.—Near Boston's Navy yard, where riveters pound out a night-and-day symphony of the Nation's building sea power, Governor Saltonstall (Republican), of Massachusetts, called today for "cooperation rather than competition between the States in the country's defense work.

Welcoming the chief executives of the States here for their 33rd annual Governor's conference, he emphasized that their business sessions, opening tomorrow, would center on new defense problems confronting the States and methods of solving them by unified action.

Saltonstall spoke at Maritime Day exercises in busy Boston Harbor, as a big fleet, bright in flags, maneuvered past the reviewing stand—sleek fighting ships of the expanding Navy, scrubbed and sturdy merchant vessels, and a flotilla of power and sailing pleasure craft.

Asserting the sea "still remains a major battlefield in checking the forces of aggression," Saltonstall said each port and each stretch of seacoast throughout the Nation had its "special advantages" in building and maintaining the Nation's sea power.

"Each State can and should help the other," the Massachusetts Governor said. "The need is for cooperation, rather than competition. Our goal can be reached only by joint effort to increase our commerce and improve all our seacoast facilities."

The Governors tomorrow will inspect battleships in construction at the Navy yard in Boston and at the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Co. in neighboring Quincy, and get a look at harbor fortifications, after visiting the State Legislature and the home of Paul Revere.

Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox and Malcolm MacDonald, high commissioner of the British government in Canada, will address them tomorrow night.

Tinkham Assails Roosevelt For Pledging Aid to Soviet

Representative George Tinkham (Republican), of Massachusetts, last night assailed the Roosevelt Administration for pledging to support Soviet Russia in her war with Germany.

Tinkham demanded a Congressional investigation of American policy towards communism, and its influence on this Nation's domestic life and Federal bureaucracy. He announced he will introduce a resolution in the House today calling for the inquiry by a 5-man committee.

The veteran Congressman accused President Roosevelt of attempting to guarantee the continuance of communism in Europe and Asia, through the Soviet-aid policy and declared:

"The President and Secretary of State Hull have taken into their arms that most bloody aggressor, the homicidal Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, the destroyer of democracies and a dictatorship of unparalleled cruelty."

He said Congress should conduct a "thorough and fearless investigation" of this Administration's policy toward communism, beginning with United States recognition of the Soviet Union in 1933.

The Administration's pledge of aid to Russia, Tinkham declared, represented an "optional use of the fantastic lend-lease bill."

"This bill established a preposterous foreign policy for the United States," he said. "Whereas, it was alleged to be a measure to keep the country out of war, it quickly brought us to the brink of war in Europe and Asia, and whereas its declared purpose was to defend the so-called democracies, actually it has resulted in the United States underwriting communism in Europe and Asia, and undertaking to assist the Soviet Union in its war against Finland, one of the most democratic countries in Europe."

The two resolutions will go on to the Foreign Affairs Committee and probably will die there.

This July 4 'Most Signficant,' Bishop Says at D. A. V. Rites

This July Fourth will be "the most significant anniversary of Independence Day in the history of our country," the Rt. Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, yesterday afternoon told 500 Washington Cathedral worshipers at a special anniversary service for the Disabled American Veterans.

"Our freedom is not made by law but is a gift from God, and is within the individual and not within the power of the State to legislate," he said.

The services were preceded by the massing of the colors, conducted by the American Legion National Guard of Honor. Several disabled veterans marched in the procession, together with ranking officers of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, Military Order of the World War and the Order of the Purple Heart.

The bishop told the veterans that "Today our freedom is attached and we have the choice to defend it or suffer slavery. Our liberty had its birth with Jesus Christ and all our defense program is of no avail without the moral stamina of religion in the home, in business and in government. Here is the source of our strength and the guarantee of our freedom.

"May God arouse in this Nation a new sense of obligation and a new devotion to spiritual ideas that go to make up our freedom," the bishop concluded.

The Rev. Penn Howard of Alexandria, Va., D. A. V. chaplain who arranged the services, read the Scripture lesson.

Axis Faces Terrific Battle In Russia, Italians Warned

By the Associated Press

Rome, June 29.—Italians were warned by the authoritative Fascist Editor Virginio Gayda today against expecting a lightning victory over Russia.

"It would be a serious mistake to think that all is easy and ought to speed in quick step to the desired solution," Gayda wrote. "Russia is resisting the offensive not only with a gigantic mass of arms and the more or less capable arts of her leaders, but also with distance.

"That was the case in 1812 (when Napoleon failed to conquer Russia). It was the case—if in a less measure—from 1914 to 1917. It is still, in part, her chance today."

The Fascist spokesman added, however, that modern methods of warfare had so changed the picture as to make it impossible for Russia to rely upon traditional defenses.

Little activity on the African fronts was reported, but Italy saw on the home front new signs of preparation for long conflict.

The nation looked to wood burners to keep it warm through the second winter of the war, as the timber guild ordered immediate measures to assure adequate supplies of cordwood and charcoal to supplant coal.

Speakers at a guild meeting pointed out the necessity of increasing the charcoal output to take the place of imported coal, which now is a necessity for war industries, tracting mineral oils from asphalt products.

Fifteen Italian movie personages, including first-rank stars Vittorio De Sita and Asia Noris, drew fines for ignoring rationing restrictions in the Cinecitta (film city) restaurant.

Timber from Croatia also is expected to help meet the emergency situation.

Earn A Bond

June sales of defense bonds have fallen below the level of the opening month of the defense savings campaign. That is not surprising in view of the fact that a good many people undoubtedly transferred accumulated savings to the Government in the first flush of their enthusiasm. Now the problem is shown in its true dimensions—how to tap income. Those current savings constitute the reservoir which the Government needs. Moreover, by tapping that income, the Government would succeed in accomplishing another purpose, namely, applying checks upon current consumption.

The money is available in the fatter incomes of the American people. For the rank and file of wage earners and people with small incomes are now earning a good deal more than in recent years. They have, therefore, more surplus to invest. Many of them, to be sure, also have a yearning to buy the things they have gone without in the long years of depression. However, with shortages developing in gas, with automobile output cut, and deficiencies in other articles of mass consumption in the offing, people will be forced to reduce their spending in all sorts of unexpected ways. There is thus an opportunity for the Treasury to make a bid for these saved funds and prevent their diversion to other lines of consumption.

There is talk about the possibility of compulsory saving if defense bond sales should prove disappointing. We hope there will be no such need. Voluntary investment builds up citizen morale and makes every bondholder feel as if he has a personal stake in his Government. Compulsory saving, on the contrary, does not create that sense of partnership with the Government that the President stressed when he opened the bond sales campaign. Perhaps the Treasury ought to undertake a more spectacular campaign to popularize the defense bonds. We must continue to try to attract the kind of loyal, enthusiastic support that would assure a steady inflow of funds and make an unqualified success of the savings bond plan.

Right Man For China

The naming of Owen Lattimore, who is now teaching at Johns Hopkins University, as American adviser to the government of Free China reflects great credit upon the President for his recommendation and upon Chiang Kai-shek for the actual appointment. Owen Lattimore is rich in experience and knowledge of China. He is familiar with the country, with the language, and with the people, particularly in extra-mural China. Half a dozen books testify to his scholarship. None of them may be well known to the general reading public, but all of them are held in high esteem by sinologues. At the same time the new appointee is no bookish recluse or specialized researcher. Both in personality and in interests Mr. Lattimore is ideally suited to the quasi-diplomatic role to which he has just been called. As to his interests, these range far and wide over the entire problem of the Far East, and his occasional articles, which have appeared in several of our magazines in recent years, show a comprehensive understanding of the Pacific complex.

The appointment is the more satisfactory because of its timeliness. It was necessary to show Chiang Kai-shek that, despite our preoccupations with the Battle of the Atlantic, we have not forgotten China. Hitlerism is a disease which has infected the Japanese no less than the Germans. And China is one of the front line fighters against Hitlerism, as Britain is. So we must sustain the Chinese to the utmost of our ability. In recent months Chiang Kai-shek has sustained a series of shocks that point up the need for American encouragement. There was the Russo-Japanese pact which, while it did not stop Russian aid to China, did release a certain number of Japanese troops in Manchukuo for "pacification" service in northern China. Then there was a certain amount of American trial ballooning in Tokyo's direction induced, apparently, by the President's neglect to deal with the Far East in his May 27 fireside chat. Now the Russo-German war has introduced a new complication. This will stop all supplies to China from the Soviet Union, and the Japanese in China seem to be capitalizing their opportunity—short-lived though it might be, if the Soviet troops are driven into Siberia—by redoubling their air attacks on China. Thus Free China needs all our faith and friendship, and Mr. Lattimore will no doubt carry fresh assurances to Chiang Kai-shek that there is no falling off in either.

Propaganda And Fact

Yesterday's German communique detailing the gains made by the German armies in a week's fighting on the eastern front reminds one of the story of a humorist whose address before an organization had been preceded by the oft-repeated assertion that he was just about the funniest man in the world. When the humorist finally got up to speak anticipations were keyed so high that his reasonably funny remarks were greeted in dead silence.

Day after day during this past week the Nazi propaganda ministry promised that soon, very soon, the German high command would give its version of what had happened in the German-Russian struggle. And the world was informed that the awaited communique would tell of "fantastic," "unbelievable" victories. In view of the German army's record in Poland, Norway, the Low Countries, France and the Balkans' some expected nothing less than an announcement that the Russian armies had surrendered, the swastika was flying over the Kremlin and the German forces were somewhere in the vicinity of Vladivostok. However, when the German high command finally did bring the period of its enforced silence to an end, the German gains then listed were impressive enough, judged by any ordinary standards, but neither "fantastic" nor "unbelievable."

Hitler's army, it appears, has captured such important places as Brest-Litovsk and Grodno, Vilna and Kaunas, and has penetrated some distance into Latvia. Moreover, the claim has been made (although in this instance subject to the inevitable discount) that 4,107 Russian planes have been destroyed, as against a mere handful lost by the Germans. Against this lofty claim there is the very modest one that during the first week's fighting only 40,000 Russian prisoners have been taken. It is a good record of fighting successes for such a short time, but the British did almost as well against the Italians when they captured Sidi Barrani and the other Italian strongholds in the western desert.

For once, therefore, Nazi propaganda appears to have overreached itself. The odds remain definitely on their side. It is still very much of an open question whether and for how long the Red army can hold out against the onslaught of the German panzer divisions and Luftwaffe. It is clear, however, that the Russians have put up enough of a fight, and have proved a tough enough opponent, to compel Dr. Goebbels to draw in his horns and proclaim victories much less impressive than his propaganda machine had led the world to expect.

President's Dollar

In a unique report submitted to Congress at the end of last year the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, the 12 presidents of the Federal Reserve Banks, and the Federal Advisory Council outlined a legislative program designed to minimize the dangers of monetary and credit inflation. Among other, and essentially much more important recommendations, these representatives of the Federal Reserve System asked that the power of the President further to devalue the dollar should be permitted to lapse. It was held that the power was "no longer necessary or desirable" as a result of "the completely changed international situation during the past year." Outstanding monetary experts and private bankers have echoed these views, but to no avail. First the House and last Saturday the Senate voted to extend for another two years the President's power to devalue the dollar by roughly another 15 per cent. Put another way, this would mean an Executive leeway to raise the value of an ounce of gold from the present $35 to $41.34. Secretary Morgenthau's argument in favor of continuing the power was the same old argument—that we are in an emergency. But our present emergency differs vastly from the emergency which caused Congress to delegate these dollar powers to the President. Then we had to combat deflation. Today it is the danger of inflation that we have to fear, and, as Mr. Morgenthau says, there is no thought in this situation of using the devaluation power. The contention that the power to devalue is a club which might be used to intimidate other nations inclined to devalue their own currencies and thus gain a trading advantage has also lost its former cogency. There is no gold standard left. And the future is too uncertain to enable us to forge protective weapons for later employment in a post-war trading world. The case is very weak for continuance of the President's devaluation powers.

Still we would not exaggerate the impact upon the economy of the action taken by Congress in extending the time-limit of the devaluation power. The power to devalue is only one among various possible causes of inflation, and it is by no means the one most to be feared. The Federal Reserve authorities, for example, advocated removal of the power to issue $3,000,000,000 of greenbacks and to issue silver certificates against the seignorage from silver purchases. We could get more inflation by the exercise of such powers than by further devaluation of the dollar, which at most would add $4,000,000,000 to the paper value of our gold holdings. Furthermore, if every one of these powers were swept away, we could—and we undoubtedly will—have inflation of a serious nature unless our people are willing to be taxed and taxed again, and ready to save to the limit of their capacity to meet the costs of defense. The idea that inflation is somehow connected with maintaining a fixed value for gold was exploded when the dollar was first devalued. Today we are simply clinging to a fiction when we assume that we are on a gold basis and that the purchasing power of the dollar within the country is determined by its gold content.

The real danger to the dollar inherent in the power to devalue comes from the temptation to use so-called devaluation profits to pay off Government debt or cover current expenses. The same temptation is provided by the power to issue greenbacks. But, apart from the shock to confidence administered by such openly inflationary expedients for financing Government deficits, the sale of billions of dollars in bonds to banks on credit constitutes a much greater and more immediate inflationary menace than these other expedients. All financing devices for providing funds for the Government to spend without increasing taxes or drawing upon the people's savings result in a creation of purchasing power that is not offset by a corresponding increase in goods. The result, of course, is to raise prices and depress the purchasing power (value) of the dollar. Talk about the gold standard—when there is no gold standard that means anything for practical purposes—just confuses the issue.

Broadside On Defense

Not so many weeks ago it was freely predicted that by late summer the defense effort would pass the lumbering stage and really begin to click. The House Military Affairs Committee, in a report crammed with detail, has played hob with this particular illusion by issuing a superlatively critical report of defense activities. The committee agrees with most observers, including The Post, that the trouble is to be traced to the fact that we are still without a single responsible head of the defense program. Lack of such a head accounts for a host of administrative shortcomings on the part of the Administration, Congress, the State Department, the Army and Navy, the OPM, the Maritime Commission and industry. Without coordination there can be no administrative efficiency in seeing that the defense job is done. The curse of divided authority has, of course, become painfully evident in the progressive creation of new boards and committees to handle specific defense problems. We have not yet learned the lesson of the last war. In that emergency we had the War Industries Board, though we were so slow in giving it plenary powers that this board was unable to organize production in such a way as adequately to equip wartime America. Now the job of arming is infinitely greater, and just as urgent.

The House committee also emphasizes a wholesale lack of vision as to the material requirements of defense. This would apply particularly to the fumbling manner in which we have acquired strategic stockpiles. There is no reasonable excuse, as The Post has frequently pointed out, for past hesitancy in this respect. Admittedly, nobody could predict the material demands of mechanized war on a scale such as now exists. But nearly a year ago the shape of things to come was clear to many in Congress and out who urged without avail drastic action to acquire larger stockpiles. The reluctance to insure them until war operations proved the necessity is still one of our greatest administrative failings. In effect, it keeps the defense effort truly "defensive," which is the surest way to invite disaster. The committee's broadside will probably be dismissed in some quarters as economic hindsight. But its revelations, made over the opposition of Administration followers, ought to serve as an incentive to greater coordinating effort, without which all the military vision in the world cannot be translated into effective action.

PURSUIT

There go I
Through golden hills
Where peacocks ply,

Where moonlight hangs
Like heavy fruit
In a topaz tree
With a silver root.

I follow the golden
Hoof and horn
Through asphodel
And sleeping corn,

But he goes stepping
Soft as light
In the secret acres
Of the night.

I hear the frenzy
Of his breath
Beside the small
Quick feet of death,

And I am lost
And left behind,
Prisoned where he Goes unconfined.

All communications must carry the writer's name and address, though pen names are permitted at the editor's discretion. In fairness to other correspondents, letters should be held to 300 words. Letters are subject to condensation.

Isolationist Stand

The various letters printed in The Post, including those of Benjamin Frazier, attempting to smear the character and motives of the leaders of the America First Committee, illustrates to what extremes otherwise rational men and women will go under the spell of war psychosis. Mark Twain accurately diagnosed the progress of this malady in the calm of 40 years ago, before Europe was engulfed in the wars and revolution of this generation. He showed that those who come under its influence abandon their normal processes of reason and surrender to primitive passions and emotions.

Jose Ortega y Gassett has explained that man's superiority over the lower animals is due in large measure to his longer memory, his ability to accumulate his past to guide his present and future. Senor Ortega says: "It is an unfortunate shortcoming of our time that it is not interested in history. Never since the sixteenth century has the average man so completely ignored the past. When a people has lost its memory," says Ortega, "and returned to infancy, the odds are desperately against a good end. The fatal mistakes of other times will inevitably be committed again."

The group of people which has "lost its memory and returned to infancy" is not likely to be alarmed by the historic warning of Washington of the danger to American institutions of foreign influence, when he said: "It gives to ambition, corrupted or deluded citizens, facility to betray or sacrifice the interest of their own country, without odium, sometimes even with popularity."

There has not been a war or social upheaval in Europe since the founding of the American Republic that the intervention of the United States, either moral or physical, has not been sought. In 1808 Timothy Pickering said in the United States Senate, demanding American intervention in the war between England and France: "The French Emperor is the most ruthless tyrant that has scourged the European world since the Roman Empire fell. Suppose the British navy were destroyed and France triumphant over Great Britain . . . what legions of soldiers could he (Napoleon) not send to the United States in the thousand British ships, were they at his command." To the belligerant politicians of that day President Jefferson answered: "For what Bonaparte is then to do to us, let us trust to the Chapter of Accidents. I cannot with the Anglo-men prefer a certain present evil to a future hypothetical one."

In 1852 Louis Kossuth, came to America seeking the intervention of our country on behalf of Hungary in her fight for independence against Austria and Russia, in a speech in Faneuil Hall, Boston, at that time, said: "Republican America and all-overwhelming Russian absolutism cannot much longer subsist together on earth." To the dramatic appeal of Kossuth the venerable Henry Clay replied: "By the policy to which we have adhered since the days of Washington we have done more for the cause of liberty in the world than arms could effect; we have shown to other nations the way to greatness and happiness. Far better is it for ourselves, for Hungary, and the cause of liberty that, adhering to our pacific system and avoiding the distant wars of Europe, we should keep our lamp burning brightly on this western continent, as a light to all nations, than to hazard its utter extinction amid the ruins of fallen and falling republics in Europe." Irish-Americans

The animosity of certain Irish-Americans and Irish for Britain is exceedingly difficult to understand. Do they resent the freedom and independence of Eire? Do they prefer the old abuses, the old quarrels?

These queries might cause some well-meaning people to gasp; but is there any common-sense, logic, or fairness in harping on injustices that have been righted; in acting as though the Britain of today were an enemy, and helping by a negative attitude the brutal invader of many lands—an invader whose triumph over Britain would be a tragedy for Eire?

Would a person in private life accept redress from the grandchildren of an enemy, then act as though these grandchildren were as cruel as the grandfather had been and hold a grievance against them for "spite" or some other strange reason, even though their downfall would involve themselves in disaster?

Sex Crimes

Thanks for your editorial Anarchic Washington.

May I give you a clew to the sex crimes which are but a sad symptom of an anarchic world bestialized by the threatening decay of all civilization.

It seems to be not so much a lack of police force as a lack of a strong moral force being undermined through the sadistic teachings of brutal force and violence as the fulfillment of highest patriotism. National defense requires the wholehearted backing of all humane and moral forces helping to defend our country from within and without, against the poisonous propaganda of the aggressors the leader of whom has been recently called by Winston Churchill a "blood-thirsty guttersnipe." Yes, war is the greatest sex crime committed by the apostles of bestiality and cruelty as the highest virtues of man.

The clew to the roots, not only to the symptoms of sex crimes, lies in the education toward a deep moral conviction of the common good which through international understanding and cooperation after this deadly bloodshed will come to solve and eliminate crimes and demoralization. Washington's sex crimes are but the result of an ethical bankruptcy.

May I quote in this connection the last paragraph of Magnus Hirschfeld's introduction to his "Sexual History of the World War," of which I happen to be a coeditor:

"What the war brought was nothing more than spiritual and moral emptiness and brutalization, a sudden unchaining of atavistic impulses which for five years stormed through the world unimpeded and constituted the terrible forms in which the historic necessity of a moral transformation came to expression." Washington's Need

Inasmuch as a "crime wave" is usually a reflection of the community's impaired social state, indicating more or less generally relaxed municipal morale, I incline to wonder if shortcomings of our metropolitan police are not being overemphasized presently owing to their failure up to now to find and arrest the perpetrator of the National Capital's most recent murder?

As the rest of us, policemen have their limitations, are certainly not without their quota of human frailties, and, however astute the best may be at untangling the intricate webs of modern malefactors and their crimes, none is, nor reasonably expected to be, adept at necromancy. It must not be overlooked that only yesterday the metropolitan police were vindicated by imposing of the death sentence upon the "sniper" murderer who "left no trail!" Yet these same and much maligned detectives finally got their man.

Whatever innate defections of the local police there may be, it cannot be denied that the municipality makes or unmakes its police department, and no police force ever made a municipality. The police but reflect their environs. This is axiomatic. Washington's paramount need is a modern municipal government! RIENZI B. LEMUS.

Recall Of Thomsen

I have today written to President Roosevelt urging that the German Embassy be closed and the Charge d'Affaires Hans Thomsen be ordered to return to Berlin. Closing the Embassy would blast the pipeline of propaganda and espionage from Berlin to Washington that comes through the diplomatic pouch. I believe public opinion would be wholeheartedly with the President should he take this action.

Using Every War "Break"

Even after three years of watching the various international ostriches I am still amazed when some Americans and some of our newspapers herald the Soviet-Nazi conflict as a reprieve to the United States. If we are to use every "break" that comes our way as a pleasant opportunity to snatch a delicious 40 winks what will the harvest be? Next time it will be Hitler's opportunity and he will not miss it; and the harvest of our missed opportunities will be a bumper crop of war graves, war injured and taxes, all far greater or more numerous than they would be could we act with our opportunities instead of with Hitler's.

The history of the first World War and of the Russo-Finnish war shows that the defeats or severe losses of the Russians have been due largely to special circumstances, and are, therefore, no basis for an accurate forecast of possible Russian resistance today. Russian confidence does, however, appear to have been affected, and our intervention at this time would, apart from all other advantages, improve Russia's chances from this point of view alone.

A very strong factor in bringing about Germany's collapse in 1918 following the entry into the war of the United States and a group of smaller countries was the realization by the German people that the whole world was against them. If we wait, therefore, and risk a possible defeat of Russia such a realization could not be so effectively forced upon the people of Germany. Indeed the very opposite might occur; and Nazi confidence in their ability to defeat the world might be engendered or strongly fortified.

Let us try to imagine the feelings of the Axis with the whole of the British Empire, Russia and the great might of the United States of America united in active war against them. In addition, as in the last war, our entry would probably be followed by the entry of a number of our Latin-American neighbors and the opposiiton of the countries already enslaved by Germany would be greatly encouraged. It could not but be borne upon the Nazis strongly that the world was arising in every quarter to crush their aggression. Our entry into the war now would be an act of statesmanship, unexcelled in history. It would save thousands of American lives, thousands of American cripples and many millions in taxes.

The Post Impressionist

F Street Vignette

Humanity in the mass may be broken down into its individual personalities in many ways, but not the least of these is by approaching the commercial candid cameramen on F Street. From Eleventh Street to Twelfth Street the crowd may sweep along like one of those waves of the future, but, as it comes to the man with the efficient looking camera in front of Brentano's, the surge wavers and falters and all the separate egos emerge.

There is, immediately recognizable, the newcomer to the city, who is a little startled when, for the first time, he is handed the small yellow envelope which announces in bold type: "A PHOTO OF YOU HAS JUST BEEN TAKEN." His is not yet the automatic gesture, which will come with time, of tucking the envelope in his pocket or casually tossing it away. He reads all the print quite carefully. There is something of a challenge to him in "See How You Look in Action" and he finds a persuasive note in "Unposed Pictures Please Best—They're Natural." The chances are good that the first timer, if from no other motive than curiosity, will mail off the "strong, specially printed coin envelope" with his quarter and await results.

The most revealing reactions, however, are those of the passers-by who know they are going to be photographed, and this group includes nearly everyone who has been in Washington as long as 48 hours. For by day, or under the lighted marquee by night, the candid cameraman is at his post.

One of the most unmistakable personalities to detach itself from the parade is the man who simply likes to pose. He doesn't have any intention of ordering the photograph but he enjoys, for however brief a moment, this opportunity to command the center of the stage. Perhaps for the instant he is the celebrity which he would like to be, a personage photographed whenever he makes his appearance outdoors, the hero returning from his most recent triumph. Jauntily he steps out from the crowd, adjusts his tie confidently, and smiles with all the air of the celebrity. He is a natural for the candid cameraman: here is a man who wants to be photographed; the camera clicks and the photographer passes out the yellow envelope with the conviction that this is a sure sale. But a few steps farther along the envelope flutters to the pavement.

The hero's female counterpart is the glamour girl. She may be a typist for eight hours of the day, but on F Street at noon or at 4:30 o'clock she casts off this disguise to reveal her true Brenda Frazier personality. The corners of her mouth pull back to let the incisors and the canines shine. The eyes gleam. No Hollywood hopeful ever faced her first screen test more radiantly. The shutter moves and makes permanent all this mutable beauty. This time the envelope isn't discarded, but is slipped into the somewhat lumpy purse. Maybe, if the glamour girl feels that she was in pretty good form that day, and if payday isn't too far away, this will be another quarter for Rotogravure Pictures of New York. If not, there will always be another day.

A surer sale is the family group, but it is one which taxes all the cameraman's ingenuity. Mother and the three boys are downtown for the afternoon. Elmer wants to get two more first-day covers at the stamp store. Junior, superior in his mature interests, is on his way to the museum. Little Caldwell is willing to settle for the Zoo. None of them are interested in being photographed. But at the moment they are washed and dressed with a pristine freshness which mother would like to see recorded. As they approach the camera she herds them together, and nods to the photographer with a glance that says that if he can get them all together, she will be lastingly grateful. He lifts his camera and snaps. Just at that moment, of course, little Caldwell darts off to the left. But mother will send for the picture. Maybe it will be good of Elmer and junior.

Even greater in maneuverability is the college group. Whether it is a contingent from the University of Virginia composed, in the poet's phrase, of:

"The unsaddled young who pasture here"

or a quartette from one of the other local or neighboring colleges, they all face the camera with inevitable and considerable horseplay. Whether Dabney in his new checked coat or Harvey in his gabardine is to be in the center of the candid shot is a matter of moment which can be settled only by rather violent jostling. But settled it is, and this is likely to be not one order but four.

More subtle is the maneuvering of the boy-girl combination. Maybe she's being coy, or perhaps he is. Neither is really likely to be very averse to bring photographed together, or they wouldn't be having a date. But you never can tell. Suppose he got the photograph and Henry should see it? Anyway, as they come nearer the camera there is a bit of jockeying into focus and out of focus. But the photographer is experienced at this sort of thing, and he takes matters into his own hands and snaps.

But this is only a beginning of a listing of the individualities which emerge before the camera and then are engulfed again in the crowd. There is the stout gentleman who unconsciously pulls his stomach in, the shy lady who would really like to be photographed if she had the courage to face the camera . . .

All day long personalities reveal themselves for an instant on F Street.

Daylight Saving

The Gallup Poll certainly does not speak for the majority relative to Daylight Saving, for many, many people are against it, and very well know that the political golf-players who get off work at 3:30 o'clock are the ones who want it. It started during the first World War. The golf players of New York kept it up, now certain golf players—who have $4,000, $5,000, $6,000 jobs—they are the birds that are carrying the "Ickes" fast move.

Politics is in the Gallup Poll, we all know this and for some time.

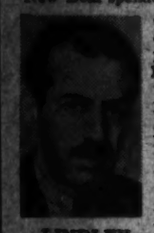
A New Budget Plan

By Ernest K. Lindley

Would Reconcile Controversy

A NEW NATIONAL budget plan which goes far toward reconciling the long controversy between the New Deal spenders and the advocates of a balanced budget is proposed by Beardsley Ruml, treasurer of R. H. Macy & Co., and a director of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York.



LINDLEY

The controversy has been lulled by the exigencies of national defense. A bigger national debt is recognized on all sides as inevitable. The most stringent taxation that has been proposed in Congress will not come within billions of balancing the budget so long as we are engaged in a major armament or war effort.

At the end of the war, however, the argument is certain to be reopened. And in their spare time Government economists are pondering the problems of orderly transition from a war to a peace economy.

Mr. Ruml thinks both the New Dealers and the budget balancers have impressive arguments in their favor. He recognizes that Government spending of borrowed money is an economic stimulant. The present defense boom is undeniable proof of that. Indeed, one problem now is to prevent inflation, owing to the bunching of huge Government expenditures. But he thinks also that for psychological and political, as well as financial, reasons, a balanced budget is generally desirable.

RUML'S PLAN for harmonizing these divergent views begins with two superbudgets.

The first superbudget is a dollar budget, similar to that which we now have but bringing together on one balance sheet all the receipts and disbursements of the Federal Government, including social security and other trust funds, and all income and outgo of Federal lending agencies which are not part of the regular budget today.

The second superbudget is what he calls an "income" budget. It is an analysis of the effect on the national income of every item of income and outgo in the Federal budget.

A million dollars spent in WPA wages, for example, will produce more than $1,000,000 of national income in the course of the year, since the money paid out will be respent by those who receive it and by those who receive it from them. It may produce $2,000,000 or $3,000,000 in national income.

On the other hand, $1,000,000 spent in buying tax-delinquent submarginal land from local governments probably will not increase the national income by very much.

On the income side, $1,000,000 in pay roll taxes for old age insurance reduces the national income by more than that sum. For if the money had not been taken by taxation most of it would have been spent, accounting in the course of a year for perhaps $2,000,000 or $3,000,000 of national income.

One million dollars in inheritance taxes, on the other hand, would in normal times reduce the national income probably less than $1,000,000 if not skimmed off in taxes; most of this money would have been left in the form of investments instead of being spent.

THE INCOME superbudget proposed by Ruml cannot, of course, be calculated anything like so exactly as the dollar budget. But all economists agree that some types of expenditures are more stimulating to the economic system than others, and that some types of taxation throttle spending more than others. Estimates of the effects can be made, and revised with further experience.

Ruml examines two dollar superbudgets which are balanced. One results in a large net addition to purchasing power and national income. The other, combining taxes and expenditures in a different way, creates a net deficit in national income.

Thus, within limits, it is possible to balance the dollar budget and at the same time to produce compensating effects which the New Dealers believe to be essential to make our economic system work.

Ruml presents his superbudgets as "a clew as to how a positive program of fiscal policy can produce desirable economic effects within a framework of financial prudence." He believes that "at a cost" we can struggle through the defense period without a better fiscal policy than we have. But he sees major changes in the Federal financial plan as inevitable in the postwar period—a conclusion from which few will dissent.

Springboard To the South

By Derwent Whittlesey

Potential Combat Area

Derwent Whittlesey, professor of geography in Harvard University, is also an historian and specialist in the field of political geography. In the followin article he discusses crucial aspects of the geography of the South Atlantic and their relation to American defense of the Western Hemisphere.

THE SIGNIFICANCE of the South Atlantic as a potential combat area has scarcely been mentioned. Only twice has it figured in the news: when the Nazi raider Graf Spee was disabled near the Uruguayan shore, and when the Zamzam was seized last month. Yet, for the United States its future is far more vital than the future of the Mediterranean, and perhaps no less important than the North Atlantic itself.

A glance at the globe or a world map will show that between Cape Verde (Dakar) on West Africa and Cape Sao Roque, the eastern tip of South America, the Atlantic is constricted to a mere 1,700 miles. This water is not too wide to patrol with prospect of success. Control is made easier by the location of the shipping routes close to one coast or the other. It is obvious that ships sailing from North America to South American points beyond Cape Sao Roque will normally skirt the headland.

It is less obvious but equally true that the far more active trade from Europe makes directly for the east point of South America. In similar fashion the North American-South Africa route skirts the West African coast, just as does the Europe-South Africa shipping lane. (These facts may readily be demonstrated by stretching a string from port to port on a globe.)

IN PEACETIME the route between Europe and South America carries the heaviest traffic of the four. War has diverted considerable cargoes from it to inter-American traffic. To the small African trade has been added the much larger traffic from Asia and Australia that ordinarily uses the Mediterranean route. Even allowing for diminution of business due to war, the sea lanes of the South Atlantic are busier than in peacetime.

The political implications of this ocean transportation are far more critical than the mere amount of trade. The British Empire is centered on the Indian Ocean. The only feasible route between this area and the British Isles today is the South Atlantic Ocean. Moreover, Britain and all of Europe not blockaded depend for food and clothing upon bulk products of southeastern South America—wool, hides, meat, wheat, corn, and coffee being the leading items. Loss by Britain of the South Atlantic would seriously cripple its war effort.

For the United States the political issues are scarcely less critical. Our trade with Africa is negligible, and we are more closely in touch with Asia and Australia by way of the Pacific than via the South Atlantic. But our trade with east coast South America is valuable, particularly traffic with Brazil beyond Cape Sao Roque, where we get much of our coffee and manganese, the latter an essential ingredient of steel. European blockades have brought us some additional business from all the countries in that sector.

If control of the South Atlantic were to pass into the hands of enemies to free navigation, all this trade would vanish. More important, so would any hope of keeping the Western Hesisphere clear of subjection by the force that rules that ocean. Put in other words, hemisphere defense is inconceivable without the South Atlantic.

FROM RECIFE, the large port nearest Cape Sao Roque, to New York is nearly 4,000 nautical miles; from Recife to Liverpool is less than 400 miles farther. On the longer and more usual voyages to the principal South American ports the difference becomes even more insignificant. In case of a naval struggle for possession of the South American trade route, bases in the Iberian Peninsula are closer than any on the North American mainland. The nearest United States base, Trinidad, is some 2,000 miles from Recife; the Spanish Canaries and French Morocco are only a little farther. The slight American advantage in mileage from island advance points is offset by a handicap in major continental bases.

Between these bases and the constriction separating the two parts of the Atlantic lie vast wastes in both the adjacent continents. Across the whole of northern Africa the Sahara extends as a waterless wilderness with a harborless sea front.

In South America a dense and impenetrable rain forest chokes the coast and extends inland along the Amazon and lesser streams to the heights of the Andes Mountains. Here and there, on the coast and along the larger rivers, are primitive villages and a very few insignificant port towns. Both these extensive wastelands form barriers to encroachment from the north, and it is most improbable that military advances could be carried overland across either of them in the face of a determined foe.

THE LANDS beyond these barriers will continue to be reached (except by flying) by sea. Inevitably the character of the coasts in the vicinity of the construction is momentous in case of establishing bases for sea patrols.

On the American side the first satisfactory harbor and large city is Recife, just within the South Atlantic. Like all the inferior sites farther north, it is subject to the numerous diseases of the rainy low latitudes.

The blunt west front of Africa, south to the Sahara, is punctuated by three small but usable harbors. Freetown and Bathhurst, both British colonies, have natural harbors, but suffer excess heat, rain, and plagues. Both are small native cities where few Europeans live. Neither has a large hinterland. On the other hand, French Dakar, the third port, stands on the southward-projecting point of Cape Verde, has much less rain, and is swept by sea breezes. Here a moderate-sized harbor has been enclosed by jetties, providing slips large enough to berth ocean vessels. A railroad line taps the Sudan and connects with the Niger River.

DAKAR IS more like a European city than any other town in West Africa. It has a relatively permanent population of 42,000, some 15,000 of them being Europeans. Set on the high ground above the harbor is the commodious house of the governor of French West Africa. The grounds of this mansion overlook the boldly-cliffed ocean front. Near by is a garden suburb of villas occupied by well-to-do Europeans.

Below in the harbor-city are several streets of wholesale and retail businesses, as well as public buildings, a Roman Catholic cathedral, and several hotels with patio cafes. The harbor foreshore is devoted to shipping and railroad yards; warehouses and large fenced open areas are used to store peanuts and cotton, the two chief export crops.

To the north of the business center, on the midrib of the narrow peninsula, lives the African population, centered around a huge native market house. The native abodes range from neat, two-story houses to shacks rigged from slabs of wood, gasoline tins, adobe, and a variety of other random materials.

French Dakar is the most advantageous place for a base from which to control the northern entrance to the South Atlantic. Together with the Portuguese Cape Verde Islands as an advance base, it lies at the trans-Saharan contact point between Europe and the southern hemisphere. To most Americans it must seem a remote African station, of interest only to Europeans. Actually, it is the potential European springboard for east-coast South America. If the Western Hemisphere is to be kept free from domination by Europe, the South Atlantic must be kept open to ships sailing under the flags of all the American nations.

President's Burden

By Mark Sullivan

Managing The Defense Effort

ON SUNDAY, June 22, Hitler attacked Russia. Within 36 hours, President Roosevelt announced that we would help Russia.

Three days later a member of the Senate committee investigating our preparedness effort, declared that the "biggest bottleneck" is the President's desk. "To expect the President to handle the myriad responsibilities of our preparedness program is fantastic."

That comment was not directed against the President's action about Russia; it was about a quite different field, the management of our preparedness effort. But the action about Russia illustrates the same condition—more being attempted by the President than can possibly be done well. Many of the decisions that must be made on behalf of the Government can be made wisely only if preceded by careful thought, delicate balancing of considerations involved.

No day is long enough for any man to solve as many situations as descend upon the President's desk in 24 hours—some of them leaping suddenly, such as this matter of Russia. Brain work has as certain a limit in fatigue as physical work. The writer of this column, when a neophyte, received much wise advice from a friendly counselor who later became a Justice of the Supreme Court, Mr. Louis Brandeis. One truth, well-remembered and often recognized in concrete form, was: "Sometimes you can keep on working when you're tired—in a way, and at some kinds of work; but you can't have good judgment when you're tired."

THAT THE ACTION about Russia was a mistake, is practically universally recognized. About the only group getting any direct concrete benefit from it was narrower yet, the Communists in the United States. To the American Communists the President's action came as a boon from the sky. They had been in strong disfavor, many were under legal prosecution of various kinds including accusation of crime, deportation, proscription from public office including teaching, expulsion from some labor unions.

A recent strike alleged to have been inspired by them had been described by Attorney General Jackson as amounting to "insurrection," and had been suppressed by the Army. There was growing consideration of outlawing their organizations, including their press.

To the Communists, thus in angry disfavor, President Roosevelt's declaration about help to Russia brought respectability and immunity. They knew it would be difficult to differentiate completely or convincingly between Communists in Russia and Communists in the United States; to maintain an attitude of help toward Stalin in Moscow, and at the same time proscribe Stalin's representatives and supporters in the United States.

American Communists and sympathizers were about the only group the President's action could help. The action could not increase Russia's war effort, for as a practical matter, we could send no substantial material help to that country—we are not able to send as much to Britain as we ought to and are committed to. The action could be of no help to Britain; in fact, the action was a detriment to Britain. Because, by the shock it gave to many Americans, and by confusing our minds about the issues involved in the war, it chilled our war-effort, our disposition to go farther toward intervention.

IT WAS A MISTAKE of haste and thoughtlessness—the mistake of men who, as Mr. Walter Lippmann put it, act "as if they had been caught unprepared," and therefore fall into "confusion." It was a violation of the rule which says, unless there are overwhelming affirmative reasons for doing something—do nothing.

It would not be fair to imply that the action about Russia was taken by the President without consultation. Almost certainly he must have consulted with the Secretary of State; the first announcement of the policy was made through Undersecretary Welles, by the President's direction.

The question now is, is there any way to undo the harmful effect, even partially? One obvious way would be to disappoint the happy expectations of the American Communists. If the Administration continues the prosecutions begun against Communists, if it actually deports the ones under sentence of deportation, and otherwise maintains the attitude of condemnation and resistance which has been the official policy for some months: if the Administration makes clear that it does not welcome the bedfellowship which American Communists now look forward to—such a course would tend to dispel the concern aroused by the Administration's hasty offer of help to Stalin.

In the foreign field the later working out of the Russian situation may ease our problem in the Far East, in our relations with Japan. If so, we should, of course take advantage of it.

Meanwhile, we have a course that is immediate and unquestionable, approved by public opinion and embodied in law. Enlarge our help to Britain—quickly, abundantly, ungently. Britain's chance to beat Hitler is now greatly increased—if we, and Britain, act with speed.

Little Orphan Axis Partner

(After James Whitcomb Riley)

Little Axis partner is in a sorry way,
His turn may come tomorrow, it may even come today;
He does the sweepin' 'round the house 'nd does the dirty dishes
An' listens to the telephone to hear Der Fuehrer's wishes,
An' then he sits an' shivers when the supper things is done
An' tries to be convincin' when he says it's all such fun
A-list'nin' to the witch-tales a-fallin' all about
An' the Fuehrer big 'at gits you
Ef you
Don't Watch
Out!

Onc't there was a dictator 'at wouldn't say his prayers—
An' when he went to bed at night away upstairs
His mammy heerd him holler, an' his daddy heered him bawl,
An' when they turn't the kivvers down he wasn't there at all!
An' they seeked him in the parley-room an' in the special train
An' seeked him in the phone booth an' 'neath the counterpane—
But all they ever found was jhist his pants and roundabout,
An' the Fuehrer big 'll git you
Ef you
Don't Watch
Out!

An' one time a Roosian bear 'ud allus laugh and grin
An' sign almost anything an' then he'd laugh agin,
An' onc't he joined the Axis an' he thought it purty smart
To read about the friendship 'at would never fall apart . . .
An' jhist as he was feeling good and awful swelled with pride
They was a Great Big Black Thing a-standin' by his side,
An' it snatched him through the ceilin' 'fore he knowed what he's about
An' the Fuehrer big "ll git you
Ef you
Don't Watch
Out!

An' onc't there was a ruler who loved to thumb his nose,
An' call the movie pitcher men an' thump his chest an' pose.
An' onc't he joined the Axis, too, an' bellered "Here I come."
An' thought he'd bring the timbers down an' make the presses hum
But suddenly the lights went out and standin' there (guess who?)
Was kickin' him around an' givin' orders what to do;
He wound up saying "Yes, sir," with a very silly pout
An' the Fuehrer bad 'll get you
Ef you
Don't Watch
Out!

Now any Axis partner says when the blaze is blue
An' the lamp wick sputters an' the wind goes "wo-oo!"
An' Der Feuhrer says he loves you and he calls you "Friend,"
An' he pledges nonaggression to the very end,
You better choose yer exit, an' all discretion toss,
An' do yer very derndest to beat the double-cross
Er yer buddy dear'll git you
Ef you
Don't Watch
Out!

The Moscow radio played the American national anthem the other night. War is war.

Add similes: As funny as Mayor LaGuardia in the newsreels warning people never to get excited.

Conditioned Reflex

By Barnet Nover

A Bell Rings, The Dog's Mouth Waters

IT WAS A RUSSIAN scientist, Ivan Pavloff, who scientifically established the fact that animals could be conditioned to react automatically to certain external stimuli. But it was the Nazis who have been most assiduous, cynical and successful in applying this theory of the conditional redex to human relations both in the domestic and in the international sphere.

NOVER

Pavloff's experiment was carried out with dogs. Every time food was brought into the laboratory a bell would be rung. No food no bell; no bell no food. At first the animal's redexes would operate only in the normal way. It was the smell and the sight of food and not the ringing of the bell that got the animal's salivary glands flowing. By dint of repetition, however, the identification between food and the sound of a bell became so complete so far as the dog was concerned that it was enough just to ring a bell to create the desired reflex in the animal's salivary glands.

IN HIS PROCLAMATION announcing that Germany was at war with Russia, Hitler rang the old familiar gong of anti-communism. It was a completely cynical gesture. But Hitler's action was based on the belief that so many millions of individuals had for so long been conditioned to react automatically against communism that they would fail to notice that they were being made victims of a laboratory trick and would therefore react as the Nazis wanted them to. Nor has the Fuehrer been entirely wrong in his calculations. There are individuals in this and other countries who, despite Hitler's record, are simple-minded enough to believe that Germany's struggle against Russia is a struggle against communism.

Hitler has struck the anti-Communist gong many times. He did so in 1933 when he had his foot on the first rung of the ladder by which he was swiftly to climb to despotic power. Anti-communism on that occasion was the instrument which enabled him to smash German democracy. It was German democracy and the Weimar Republic rather than communism and the Communists that stood in his way. But there were enough people in the Reich who reacted in the manner of Pavloff's dogs to the gong of anti-communism that Hitler was able to have his way. And after he had become master of Germany he installed a system that duplicated the Russian Communist system in so many particulars as to resemble it as do peas in a pod.

HAVING WORKED once, Hitler used anti-communism again—this time in the international sphere. In 1936 he concluded the so-called anti-Comintern agreement with Japan. The ostensible purpose of this pact to which Italy, Hungary and Spain later adhered, was to isolate Russia. The real purpose was to divide the democracies who at that time were between them infinitely more powerful than the Reich and could have crushed Hitler easily. The real victim of the anti-Comintern agreement was not Russia but Spain, later Austria, and still later Czecho-Slovakia.

By the summer of 1939 Hitler had squeezed the anti-Comintern pact dry of all immediate advantages. He then turned around and made an agreement with Soviet Russia, the host country of the Comintern. And he kept that agreement only as long as it suited his interests to do so.

IT SPEAKS volumes for the utter cynicism of the Nazis that Hitler has had the amazing effrontery to pose at this time as a knight in shining armor out to slaughter the Red dragon. But it is even more amazing that there are individuals in this country who are so blind to the realities as to accept Hitler's thesis that the Russo-German conflict is an ideological struggle. It is nothing of the sort. It is only the latest move in a cold-blooded bid for world mastery. And the would-be victim is not communism, but Russia.

Hitler's motive in attacking Russia is primarily military and economic. He wants to encompass the destruction of the largest military force in Europe outside the Reich, a force that has inhibited Germany from using her full strength against Great Britain. He also hopes through the destruction of the Russian army to acquire the wealth of Russia. But his campaign was undoubtedly undertaken in the hope and belief that the enemies of the Third Reich would not be able to capitalize the opportunity created for them by the war in Eastern Europe because they would be thrown into confusion by the Communist issue.

IT IS OBVIOUSLY Hitler's purpose to create the impression that the only phase of the war that now really matters is Germany's struggle with Russia. The central fact, is that the Russo-German conflict is only part of a very much larger conflict in which the major protagonists are not Russia and Germany but Germany and Great Britain.

The world has been faced by the Communist problem since the November revolution of 1917. But during this quarter of a century the Communists succeeded in making no permanent conquests outside of Russia, except in the case of limited areas that were occupied by the Red army. And those areas remained Communist only so long as they were occupied by Russia troops. On the other hand the Nazis have extended their domination over a large part of Europe and have ambitions of world dimensions which can only by blocked by the concentrated effort of all of Hitler's enemies.

For the United States to be in the least fooled by Hitler's Communist bogeyman or to relent for a moment in our effort to do everything possible to bring about his destruction would be suicidal. Fortunately the number of Americans who are prepared to play the part of Pavloff's dogs to Hitler's gong-ringing are not numerous.

Lindbergh Leads Fascist Youth, Dr. Bohn Charges

Copyright by New York Times

Camp Tamiment, Pa., June 29.—Charles A. Lindbergh was assailed as "the leader of the Fascist youth of the United States" by Dr. Frank Bohn, chairman of the German-American Congress for Democracy, in an address before the conference of the Tamiment economic and social institute here today.

Dr. Bohn, son-in-law of Daniel C. Roper, former Secretary of Commerce, made this charge in connection with the prediction that "isolationist and appeaser" forces in this country would seek to utilize Hitler's attack on Soviet Russia as a means of hamstringing American aid to England by painting Hitler as "the savior of the world from bolshevism."

Hitler's attack on Russia is the springboard for the greatest propaganda offensive in history," Dr. Bohn said.

Defeat Would Mean Famine For Russia, Rukeyser Says

By Merryle Stanley Rukeyser

International News Service Commentator

New York, June 29.—The troops of Russia are battling not only against German troops but also against the threat of hunger and economic paralysis.

For, though the Nazi high command may have been tempted by Russia's rich and vast resources, the truth is that the people of Soviet Russia have been living on a hand-to-mouth basis. Whenever international deals were made through the years on the assumption that Russia would have a vast exportable surplus, the realities caused great disappointment. Russia is still half a century behind in using science and invention for production.

As the British blockade of Germany and its vassals continues to hold, Russia's ability to produce oil and raw materials tempts the invaders. Rich production is centered in the Ukraine-Caucasus zone, and includes more wheat than produced in all the Balkans. Oil output has been running at 620,000 barrels a day. Russia also turns out nearly half the world's output of manganese. Only the United States and India grow more raw cotton than Russia.

Has Little to Spare

But Russia has little foodstuffs and oil to spare. She does have an exportable surplus of manganese, which is of the highest quality and which is essential in steel making. She can also spare platinum, of which she is the world's leading producer. She has substantial production of high-grade iron ore and industrial coal, but apparently needs all she produces. In copper and other metal, Russia is in the main self-sufficient, but has no substantial amounts to spare in foreign trade.

If transportation were available, Russia could spare wood products, pulp and veneers in amounts sufficient to meet all German requirements. In foodstuffs, Russia could spare grains, but apparently no butter fats, eggs, other animal and vegetable fats, fruits and vegetables. It is believed that she might have a surplus also of flax and materials for synthetic fibers, but not cotton, wool and hides.

In other words, if a ruthless foreign conqueror should denude Russia of current production of vital supplies, the result would be deprivation and starvation among the Russians.

Would Cripple Farms

If the Nazis seized the oil production of the Baku region, which amounts to 72 per cent of the estimated total Russian oil production of 620,000 barrels daily, the loss of fuel would suddenly cripple Soviet economic activity, including that on motorized farms. American oil interests inform me that even though Russia is the world's second largest oil producer, its output at present is barely sufficient to meet the current domestic requirements for her civilian and military population.

Russia produces three times as much oil as Iran, and five times as much as Rumania, which is now under Nazi domination.

It must be conceded that, provided a conqueror can furnish the means of transportation, there will be a rich loot in the ripening grains in the Ukraine and in the oil in Baku. But the need for such an operation at a time when the battle of the Atlantic against Britain is pending would seem ill timed unless Germany and the affiliated states of Europe face immediate critical shortages which threaten defeat.

Long-Term Plan Possible

On the other hand, if a more far flung capture of Russia is contemplated, then it would mean that the Nazis are now resigned to the failure of the blitzkrieg technique and are attempting to build up long term Nazi raw material resources in order to offset the lend-lease facilities of the United States.

Still another interpretation is that the Nazi high command is so confident that it believes that this is the opportune time to attempt to convert Germany from a "have not" into a very prosperous "have" nation.

The Nazis doubtless assume that, with their managers and technicians, they could enormously step up the productivity of the less advanced Russians.

U. S. Manufacturers Envision Huge Pleasure Plane Market

By the Associated Press

Detroit, June 29.—The speeding up of aeronautical research in the national emergency has started manufacturers of small airplanes talking about a market for millions of private aircraft when conditions return to normal.

One aircraft company official has suggested in private conversation that airplane making may well be the economic savior of the Nation when the emergency is over.

"What pulled us back to business normal after the World War?" he asked. "It was automobile manufacture."

Several million personal airplanes using tens of thousands of airports are not beyond the bounds of possibility.

On the side of demand, the manufacturers already have part of their future market tailor-made. The Government is teaching the rudiments of flying to young men and women in 1,150 training centers. Their number soon will reach 100,000. Few of them will stop flying voluntarily, because it is too much fun.

Although it costs $2,500 and up for the type of plane the common citizen would like to own, lower prices would come with demand and mass production.

The other day an army engineer at Wright Field, in Ohio, said the government had developed a wing which seemed ideal for small airplanes. It was designed, of course, for military use.

This wing, which is still on the government's restricted list, has the extraordinary quality of reducing "drag," or resistance to the air, to the point where speed per horsepower goes far beyond an airman's fondest dreams.

Moreover, it promises to help eliminate loss of control at low speeds and therefore obviate dangerous "spins."

Spinproof airplanes already are being manufactured: The "Ercoupe," made in Riverdale, Md.; the "Sky-Farer," designed by a professor at Massachusetts Institute of Technology; the "Voyager," made by the Stinson Division of Vultee Aircraft, Inc., in nearby Wayne, Mich., and one type of Bellanca plane produced in New Castle, Del.

The utility of airplanes depends almost entirely on landing fields. The United States now has 2,700 airports. Some officials of the Civil Aeronautics Authority are talking in terms of 30,000 to 40,000 fields. Not big terminal fields costing millions of dollars, but small, inexpensive ones which could dot the landscape and permit a flier to "sit down" anywhere.

'Beer and Skittles' Club Opens Season at Picnic

By Carolyn Bell

The young set—so often lost in the shuffle of dowagers and beribboned dignitaries—came into its own yesterday afternoon with two lively parties. No cafe tan for these youngsters as the two fetes included softball, swimming, picnicking and, as a climax, dancing under the stars.

The newly formed "Beer and Skittles" Club inaugurated the season with a picnic, at which Miss Joan Dodd was hostess, at Wolf Trap Farm, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jouett Shouse. The wise Miss Dodd purchased 15 pounds of hamburger and 100 hot dogs—and we'll wager there wasn't one left over.

Earlier in the afternoon Hillcrest Farm, the Virginia home of Nathaniel H. Luttrell, was the scene of a hotly contested softball game. A slight crisis arose when it was discovered that the Potomac Club—being challenged by the Hillcrest group—boasted of a feminine player, Miss Dolly Corbin. However, things were evened up and Jock Merriam, Alan Moulton, Edgar Orme, jr., Brue Potter, Juddy Bowles, Rufus Johnson and a few others pitted their skill against Tommy Adams, Baron James Bayenes, Robert Knowlton, Miss Corbin and several more. Meanwhile, the girls lolled about the edge of the pool and acquired more sun tan—and gossip.

Open Fireplace Lures Guests

Long about 6:30 in the evening more than 50 guests converged upon the lovely farm owned by the Shouses in McLean, Va. Barry Woods, instigator of the club, was on hand to greet the guests with Miss Dodd. Mr. and Mrs. Donald Downes—who are among the honorary members—attended the party as did Mrs. Dodd's mother, Mrs. Shouse and Mr. Shouse.

The "Skittles" club was formed several weeks ago and plans to meet—for purely frivolous reasons—every Sunday until late in September for a picnic. Various estates of the members will be offered as the site—and guests will "bring their own" refreshments. However, yesterday, it was Miss Dodd's party.

Long tables had been set up on the lawn in front of the open fireplace. Here, huge mounds of hamburger, salads, pickles and potato chips were to be found. The youngsters finished off their picnic by devouring several icy watermelons.

Hal Crowell, who has an enviable collection of records, brought them along and the guests danced until midnight to the music. The pavilion, which was put up last week for the "Have Fun Carnival" had been left for their use.

Many Attend Gay Fete

Among the group—all members of the club—were Miss Betty Burton, Miss Ruth Dove, Miss Eleanor Flood, Miss Betty Frost, Miss Marilyn Himes, Miss Betty Lloyd Hutchinson, Miss Suzanne Slingluff, Miss Nancy Ordway, Miss Betty Stewart Richardson, Miss Nancy Lawrence, Miss Billie Byrd West, Miss Eleanor Meem, Mr. and Mrs. Igor Cassini and Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Orme, jr.

A number of eligibles were on hand, including Nathan Bartlett, Judy Bowles, Al Baer, James Campion, Francis Hoag, Connie Hunt, Frank Holcomb, Rufus Johnson, Fred Maristeller, Jock and Bill Merriam, Bob Parsons, Fred Mechlin and several dozen others.

Although yesterday's party was just for members only, from now on they may bring guests—at 50 cents apiece. The dues are $2 a month a person and $3 for a married couple. Barry Woods is president of the club and other officers include Pat Crowell, Jack Arrington, Peggy Lansdowne, Julienne Cahill and Miss Jean Dodd. Among the honorary members are Mr. and Mrs. Shouse, Mrs. Wallach Merriam, Mrs. Nathan Wyeth, Mr. and Mrs. John Caswell.

Official Set Among Audience At Watergate

Many officials were in the audience at the Potomac Watergate Concert last evening to hear the National Symphony Orchestra open their summar season.

Mrs. George T. Pettengill, wife of the Commandant of the Navy Yard, took a party of friends up the river and to climax the evening they dropped anchor not far from the Watergate to hear the music. Mrs. Truxton Beale asked some friends in for supper following the concert.

D. C. Pen Women Entertain 150 at Founders' Day Tea

On a day "made to order," 150 National League of American Pen Women attended the Founder's Day Tea given by the District Branch yesterday, at the home of Dr. Frances Moon Butts in Chevy Chase.

Receiving with Dr. Butts were, Mrs. H. Lyle Campbell, president of the District Branch; Mrs. Bertha Shanks Chaney and Mrs. Edward R. Seal, vice presidents, and members of the newly elected executive board.

Mrs. Emma M. V. Triepel, only living founder of the league, recalled, "Down Memory Lane," telling many incidents in the early life of the league, a few sad, some amusing and a great many happy ones. Mrs. Triepel is a constant source of inspiration to other members of the league, being actively interested in, and attending regularly, many of the creative groups meetings as well as the social affairs of the District Branch.

The national president, Mrs. E. Richard Gasch, spoke on the active part members of the league can take in national defense through the medium of literature, art and music. She stressed using the American way of life as an inspiration, asking too, for cooperation, tolerance and patience in these trying times.

Mrs. Campbell presented to Mrs. Theodore H. Tiller, pinning it over her heart, where it must always be worn, Mrs. Tiller's L. A. P. W. pin wearing its new bar, bearing the inscription, "Founder President, District Branch, 1921." Mrs. Tiller, in accepting the pin, proudly spoke of "her baby," the District branch, which is one of the most active branches in the National League.

Mrs. Leroy W. Tilton, league historian, gave excerpts taken from her book, "The League of American Pen Women in the District of Columbia," which will be published sometime during the coming year. She spoke of Mrs. Margaret E. Pearson, who was president during the three most active years the league has ever known, being elected on May 7, 1917, just four weeks after the United States entered the first World War. It was during her presidency that the "Godmother's Service Committee of the L. A. P. W." was formed. Members of this committee "adopted" some soldier, sailor or marine wearing the United States uniform. Slips of paper printed in red and blue, bearing the message, "Wherever your orders may lead you, by day or by night, I beg you to remember that across the wide ocean there is one who prays for you, one who claims for you the saving grace of the enfolding Presence. It is your godmother. If you send me your name I will write to you." Mrs. Tilton told also of the league taking part in the collection of funds for the erection of an International Hospital in Brussels, as a memorial to the martyrs, Edith Cavell and Marie DePage. She recalled that the Pen Women once maintained a delightful and unique eating place called, "The Hoot o' the Owl." Its decorator, Miss Virginia Beery, in describing it, said: "It out Greenwiches anything in Greenwich Village." Mrs. Tilton told too, of a reception given when Dr. Butts was president of the District Branch, honoring Mrs. Lucretia Grady and Congressman McGroaty of California, a Spanish theme was carried out. Dr. Butts wore a dress trimmed with lace from the trousseau of Empress Carlotta of Mexico.

The rest of the program consisted of an original poem "to Our Founders," written and read by Mrs. Evelyn Norcross Sherrill and incidental music played during the afternoon by Mrs. Lisbeth Coin.

The tea was honored by having present, two past National presidents, Mrs. Victoria Faber Stevenson and Mrs. Audrey Wudermann Auslander, as well as many past presidents of the District Branch. Other guests were Mrs. Hester Beal Provensen, president of the Chevy Chase Branch and Mrs. Florence R. Kahn, president of the Baltimore Branch and officers and members of their branches. Mrs. Gasch had as her guest Mrs. Lulie Kirby Parrish Hone of the Miami, Florida Branch.

About the Town

with Dudley Harmon

HERE'S A TIP for Washington hostesses—sent in by the wife of one of our most prominent Senators:

"Please have small parties for dinner and restrict the conversation to light and frivolous talk. Not war talk or politics. These tired Senators and other officials are so exhausted when they come home for dinner that they would prefer to remain quietly at home unless parties can be given where they can relax and not have their brains picked for information that they are reluctant to give in the first place, and are so tired to think about in the second. Light and relaxing talk is what they want.

"I sat next to a very important Army officer at dinner recently and, at the end of the dinner, I told him that I had purposely refrained from discussing the war, knowing that he must be fed up on it. He thanked me sincerely and said he wished others would be as considerate."

AND HERE'S A tip for the gentlemen on hot-weather clothes. At the Howe-Burling subscription dance Saturday night, the guests were told to wear "what they were most comfortable in." Cuthbert Train appeared in black tie, white dinner coat, black pumps and—tennis shorts. His costume was the sensation of the evening and all agreed that it should be adopted in Washington heat waves.

Inspired by Cuthbert, many of the men present took off their coats and danced in their shirtsleeves. The very excellent orchestra played frantic congas and rhumbas, which were right in keeping with the tropical evening. Tables and chairs were set up in the cool garden of the George Howes' home in Georgetown, and an enormous Japanese lantern gleamed from a tree. The bar was placed out under the trees and guests helped themselves to wine punch and beer.

SEEN HERE and there: The pretty hostesses, Mrs. Howe and Mrs. Edward Burling, jr., in light summer evening dresses . . . Gen. "Mike" Scanlon, air atache of our Embassy in London, who will leave in about ten days for his post . . . Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, who reversed the usual order and came down from his home in Beverley, Mass., for the week-end . . . Eddie Burling doing a conga with Mrs. Thacher Winslow . . . Ann Perin, just back from a vacation in Aiken and all set to begin work again on Monday . . . Hugh Cumming, without his wife, who is recovering from a bad case of poison ivy.

Mrs. Creighton Peet, in a cool sports print, doing a rhumba with Hank Whitney. . . . Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Bonsal dropping by for a dance. . . . Mr. and Mrs. Richard Sanger getting ready for the christening of their little daughter—Mrs. Thomas Eliot and Creighton Peet are the godparents. . . . Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Roberts, she wearing a red and white print. . . . Mr. and Mrs. Hoyar Millar, Mrs. David Yerkes, Mrs. B. Lauriston Hardin in champagne colored crepe, popular Tony Balasy, Frank Oliver, Mrs. Gale McLean, dropping by after a dinner party, and dozens of others.

COUNT Leone Fumasoni-Biondi, who resigned several months ago as correspondent for Stefani, the Italian news agency, has a new job. He begins today teaching classes in journalism at Catholic University. . . . The Italian Ambassador and Princess Colonna were lunching at the Mayflower yesterday with John Montgomery, until recently United States Minister to Hungary. . . . Chevy Chase Club, our scouts report, was packed on Saturday evening. Dancing on the terrace were Laura Tuckerman, Elsie Ekengren, Marcia Umbsen, pretty Betty Lloyd Hutchinson, Smith and DeLong Bowman, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Merrill, and about 200 others.

Mr. and Mrs. Curry, who make their home on Park Road, have been entertaining at a series of supper parties. They built a fireplace in the building—which once housed several carriages—and put the neon sign above it.

In Two 'Incidents' With Office Supervisor, Girl Government Employe Gets Impression Her Services Aren't Wanted; Has She Been at Fault?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Where I work (for the Government) my superior has twice made me feel that I am not needed. I shall describe the incidents exactly as they occurred—and then I want you to tell me who was at fault. The first time, the work was counted wrong. I understood (clearly) that the work was to be counted before I started on it. When I turned in the report, the supervisor said that I couldn't have counted correctly; that I couldn't have done that much work in one day, when I hadn't done it the day before. He said it as though he thought I was trying to cheat. (And, anyhow, on some days I do turn out more work than on other days.)

The second incident was this: I had been using a chair on which to stack my work. One day the supervisor came around in the morning and said, "Are you using this chair?" I said, "Well, if you need it, I'll have to get something else." So I looked high and low for something else. Finally I saw a stool, sitting in the middle aisle. I decided to use it. A few minutes later, a girl in the section came over and said, "This stool belongs to me." I said, "Well, do you have a basket?" She said, "Yes." I said, "Well, you will have to go to the supervisor, because you have a basket, a stool and other things, and I have nothing to work with."

So she went to the other side of the room and brought back the supervisor. He said to me, "Have you got her stool?" I said, "Well, I don't care if I do. She has a basket, a stool and what-not, and I can't work with nothing. I had a chair here and it is gone." Then he brought back the chair, which had been sitting in the middle aisle, being used by nobody. As for the stool,—it didn't belong to the girl. It belongs to the Government. Now, I feel that my supervisor is always going to treat me as a cheat and a thief.

I went yesterday to the timekeeper and asked if I could be transferred to some other section. I didn't give him the real reason. I only said how long I had been there, and that I didn't think I was an expert typist. He said he would have to speak to my supervisor, and would try to put me on filing. I said I would like very much to try that. So he talked with my supervisor, and a few minutes later, the supervisor said the timekeeper wanted to see me. I went back to him and he said there is great demand for typists just now; that my work is average and that a lot of people would be let go before he would let me go. I said "Well I guess I'll have to try to bear it," and went back to work.

My work is my only means of support or I would have tried to get transferred long ago. I am temporary here, and would like to be in a section where I would want to be permanent. My supervisor has many good points, but we don't agree. Would you advise me to go to the section chief's secretary the next time something comes up? Or should I forget the whole thing? I would like to be very broad-minded; but most people think I am very narrow-minded. E. C.

Girl Is Demonstrating 'The Will to Fail'

DEAR E. C.: It is plain that you are no ball of fire, as an office worker; and your psychological approach to your task could hardly be worse. Indeed, you seem to be animated by what Dorothea Brande (in her book, "Wake Up and Live") calls "the will to fail." It appears you are unconsciously wanting to be "let out."

But, on the other hand, your supervisor is no ace executive, either. If he were on to his job, he would make it his business to step up the morale of his staff by seeing (1) that such equipment as is available or procurable, and indispensable to efficient production, was equitably distributed amongst the workers; and (2) that each employe knew exactly what was expected of him, in general and in particular, when taking over a new assignment. He would be able to tell, in a few minutes' conversation, if not at a glance, whether you (for instance) would "catch on" quickly or need watchful instruction,—and would shape his supervision of your efforts accordingly.

The "incidents" you describe reflect more discredit upon the way the department is run than upon yourself—but if you had your wits about you, they could be avoided, I think. Take the matter of the chair, to illustrate. When the supervisor asked if you were using the chair, you should have said, courteously, that you were—and then briefly and clearly explained the purpose it served. If the need was indisputable (as it turned out to be), you would have been in the clear. Either the search for a chair would have passed on down the line, or you would have been given a piece of furniture to take its place. In either event, you would have been spared the subsequent time-consuming unpleasantness, which brought you unfavorably to the supervisor's eye; and probably, in addition, would have "made a hit" on him with your poised, polite air of knowing what you were doing.

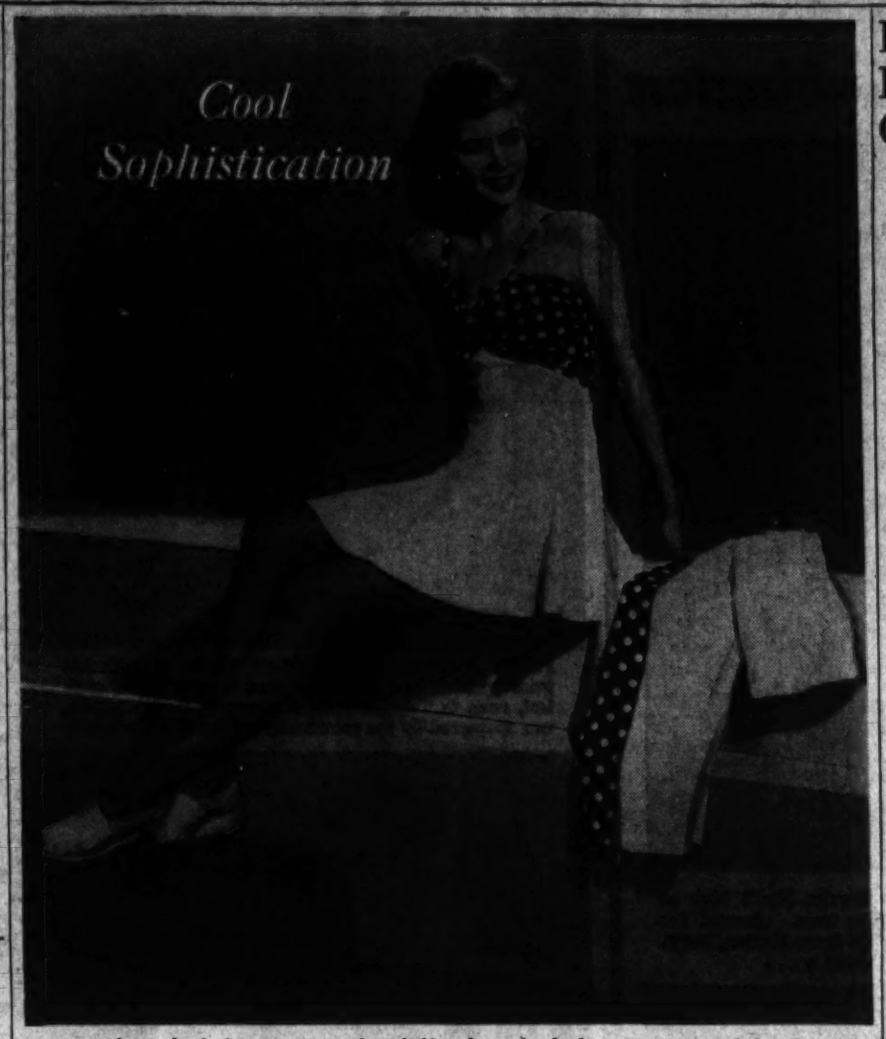
In the matter of the "wrong count," you were primarily at fault, for not having kept your eyes and ears open to what was expected of you. But whoever gave you instructions was at fault, too, in not making the procedure unmistakably clear. However, I am sure the supervisor realized, on investigation, that you were not trying to cheat. And if he looks askance at you now (although you may just imagine it), it probably means that he finds you tiresome to deal with,—well meaning, of course; but slow on the up-take, and too disputatious.

Having twice put yourself in a bad light with your boss, it was most unfortunate that you damned your ability as a typist to the timekeeper as a chief argument in favor of being transferred. Remember the old saying, "Give a dog a bad name and hang him." In seeking a transfer, don't disparage your usefulness in your present capacity; but stress, rather, your interest in and aptitude for, other types of work. Don't seek a transfer simply as a change of scene. Plan it in terms of advancement; and solicit it as such.

Instead of "trying to bear" your present assignment, change your attitude and turn in a bang-up performance. This will give you a talking point for asking something better,—an appointment that will give you a chance to use other aspects, or more, or all, of your business trainnig. To ask special consideration on the ground that you are falling down on a job is the worst imaginable strategy.

No—don't "go to the section chief's secretary" with any petty complaints. She (or he) will think less of you for it. Tale bearers and cry babies get short shrift in most business offices—and soon come to be shunned and condemned by those very persons whose disinterested good will would mean most to them. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.



Cool Sophistication

Be cool, yet look decorative in this chalk white sharkoda swim suit and beach coat of Eastman acetate rayon. Coin spotted silk dramatizes the suit's bra top and is used in the knee length coat for a shoulder widening yoke trim. The slightly flared skirt of the suit aids and abets a slim silhouette. The suit also has a lining and bloomers of soft rayon jersey. It is equally practical for sunning and splashing about in the waves.

Heat Needn't Bar Exercise; Get It in Bed

By Ida Jean Kain

WHEN HEAT and humidity are added to a natural vellelty, it may be good tactics to shift to a few lazy weather exercises that call for the minimum of energy and yet get results. So start stretching.

It's a very good way to start your day. You can't sleep late these torrid mornings anyway, and you'll open your eyes at how much better stretching makes you feel.

Before you stir out of bed, toss the pillows aside and lie flat on your back with your arms straight overhead on the mattress, legs straight down. Grasp the headboard with both hands and push down with both feet until you are pulled out long and slim. Relax and repeat several times.

Try Going Limp

Between stretchers, let yourself go so limp that you seem to sink right down into the mattress and rest there for at least 30 seconds.

Then follow with this: Still on back, hands down at sides and legs together and straight down, flex alternate knees to the chest. That's a very easy exercise but it's excellent for those lower abdominal muscles and, to a degree, for the large fleshy muscles on the backs of the hips. As one knee is flexed toward chest, keep the other straight and entire leg on the bed. When you've gone your limit, rest.

Here's another good one: Lie on your back, arms down at sides and legs straight down. Raise the right arm up overhead until it rests on mattress as you swing the right leg across the left and touch toes to bed beyond. Stretch, pull. Return to starting position and repeat with other leg and arm. Take it easy—the point is to stretch, not to work up perspiration.

Now Roll Over

After that a warm shower tapering to cool water—cold, if you are up to it—and you'll feel so good you won't mind the weather.

Patriotic Luncheon

"Now of course our color scheme will be red white and blue."

"Oh yes! We couldn't think of having anything else at a time like this."

"And we can work out a perfectly stunning centerpiece—say a little battleship on a sea of glass—"

"Yes, or a little fort made of carnations with toy soldiers. After all, you know, some of our guests have army connections."

"Wait though! We can't leave the airplanes out! They're so important in modern warfare."

"Oh I have it! Ships on a sea of glass, around a fort of flowers and suspended above an airplane holding the goddess of Liberty with a torch!"

"Marvelous! And it'll be so much fun to make it all!"

"Now then what's next? . . . Oh yes the menu! Now our fruit cups could be watermelon balls, grapefruit wedges (they're almost white) and—well I simply can't think of a blue fruit."

"Blueberries!"

"Marvelous! Now shall we have chicken patties or lamb chops?"

"Lamb chops! So they can wear the red, white and blue panties."

"All right . . . Now I suppose we should have peas—no they're green!"

"We really ought to have the red, white and blue vegetables."

"Let's see—beets, cauliflower and—"

"Beets are so messy to serve."

"Well, I suppose we'll just have to have a green vegetable. But say, we could stick little eagles in the parsley potatoes."

"Fine! And have a really decorative patriotic salad."

"Say, I have an idea for that! Make a red gelatin base, have a layer of white marshmallows, top this with blue tinted whipped cream and in the middle have a little banana tree—that is, a banana rolled in nuts and covered with red, white and blue toothpicks."

"Wonderful! And by the way, we ought to have patriotic toothpicks for the baby sausages we serve with the cocktails."

"Heavens! I almost forgot that!"

"Now then I suppose we'll have the patriotic brick ice cream—"

"Yes and little cakes with red, white and blue icing!"

"Everybody has the red, white and blue icing. I think we ought to have the patriotic emblems. Now I know a little woman who simply works miracles with a pastry tube."

"All right. Now what comes next? Oh yes the mints! Of course we'll have the patriotic mints."

"Oh, say! What about the loaf sugar for the ice tea? It ought to have little red, white and blue flowers on it."

"I know. But most of the loaf sugar has only the single colored flowers."

"I know a little woman who could fix us some with the three colors."

"Another thing, I think we ought to ask each of our guests to dress in red, white or blue."

"Still, they might not want to—"

"If they don't, the color scheme is simply going to be ruined . . . Besides, they ought to be willing to do that much—at a time like this."

"I guess you're right. Oh, say, we forgot the favors."

"Oh, yes. Well, we ought to have something real cute—"

"I tell you. We could make little patriotic lapel gadgets for everybody and hav ethem hidden in the airplane with ribbons running to each plate."

"Ye-es. Only it would take a lot of time to make the gadgets."

"I know, but I do believe in doing things nicely if you're going to do them at all. And besides I think we really ought to be able to go to a little trouble to do patriotic things—at a time like this."

Defense Guest

Secretary Wickard Favors Cherry Pie Without Cheese

Important men from all over the country have come to Washington to help Uncle Sam carry on the Defense Program. They have all brought with them ideas about the foods they have eaten back home. The food editor will tell in this column what she learns about their food preferences.

THE PRODUCTION of food for national defense is of great concern to Secretary of Agriculture Wickard. But he also has a great personal interest in food—especially pie. Cherry pie, the kind made from sour cherries grown on his farm at Camden, Ind., is among his favorite dishes.

Formerly Mr. Wickard ate cheese with his cherry pie. But that is all changed now, since he advocates curtailing American cheese-eating so this concentrated food may be sent to aid Great Britain.

"When a child I was always ready to climb a tree and pick cherries for my mother if it meant she was going to bake a cherry pie," said Mr. Wickard. And Mrs. Wickard volunteers that Mr. Wickard didn't pop the question with the familiar inquiry, "Can you bake a cherry pie?" but she is certain that he knew she could, or he would have passed her by.

"Men who do" never seem to be allergic to cherry pie. Wendell Willkie is another famous Hoosier who told me cherry pie is among his favored foods. I also know a girl who carried a cherry pie 300 miles in a hat box to her soldier-husband at camp.

There may be other foods that are easier to carry to boys in camp but there are few that will be more appreciated. Boys coming home on furloughs will, no doubt, be glad for this pie, and the men at home will like it equally as well as Secretary Wickard or any service man who is in camp. Here is a recipe to keep "on tap:"

Cherry Pie

Make a flaky pie crust by mixing 1½ cups enriched flour with ½ teaspoon salt. Cut in ½ cup shortening with two knives. Do not mix as thoroughly as for crumbly pie crust but leave shortening in small lumps or slices. It is important to prick flaky crust before baking it; otherwise it may puff too much in one place. The hot oven is especially important in baking a flaky crust. Layers of cold air have been incorporated into the crust and the heat of the oven expands this air quickly, making the crust light.

The common sour red cherries are best for pies. Line a deep pie pan with paste. Fill nearly full with 1 quart stoned cherries and sprinkle with ½ cup sugar that has been sifted with 1 tablespoon flour. Cover with an upper crust, which should be rolled as thin as possible. Make a vent in the center and press the edges together so that the juices will not escape during the baking. Bake in hot oven, 450 degrees, for 10 minutes, then lower to 425 degrees for 30 minutes.

Cherry pie should be served the same day it is baked, or the under crust will become heavy. Sorinkle powdered sugar over each piece just before serving.

Domestic Crisis Averted

A domestic crisis in the White House kitchen during Fillmore's administration was caused by the fact that the cook had never cooked over anything but an open fire until the President presented her with a then-modern range. Not only did the cook not know how to use it, but neither did anybody else in the household. The President himself went to the Patent Office and inspected the model there so he could teach the cook how it worked.

U. S. Founders' Homes Reflect Their Ideals

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

IT IS ALWAYS reassuring to visit the homes of the great Americans who designed our government. For in these homes we can see their theories, their dreams, their plans for America's destiny expressed in specific terms of good living.

This importance of translating theories into reality was the reason that such men as Washington and Jefferson had time in their busy lives to give to planning and ordering their homes. They were creating an American pattern that we find inspiring to this day.

Something to Aim At

The unexpected thing about visiting Mount Vernon and Monticello is that these homes aren't as big as you anticipate. They have dignity, even elegance, but they have simplicity, too. They are livable and not in the least ostentatious. They are homes for the rest of us to aim at, homes with ideas and arrangements for the rest of us to copy.

That is why the fathers of this democracy were so remarkable . . . they were able to put their pattern into wood and stone, expressing far more than words the democratic ideal. For neither of these houses remotely strives for the grandeur of old world palaces which leaders there have always built for themselves.

These American homes have fine classic designs, but their beauty depends even more upon their situation — the men who started this government off with such heroic strides were aware that then and always the land and the beauty of a magnificent continent should be the really impressive thing about this new world.

Still the Best Today

In the interiors the accent was on satisfying and enduring furniture, the designs of which were based on permanent classic forms. It is the furniture we like best to this day—for the most part American versions of English and French styles, just as our people and our government grew out of the European scene. We borrowed those things from the European culture that would fit this new dream—and discarded the rest.

Spending Saturday Night in Washington

A private from Fort Myer put a shooting gallery .22 through a clay duck and said: "We don't get paid until Monday."

A pre-payday state of pocketbook malnutrition probably put something of a crimp in service men's merry-making but it was still Saturday night and a free night, and most of the soldiers, sailors and marines from the many camps and stations in and around the District look to the Capital for the bulk of their night-off entertainment.

IN spite of the interest displayed in a Chinese checker game, a date still is the most popular attraction. The movies, a soda or a beer, and the amusement parks put forth the strongest claim on service men's nickels.

Beginning to catch on, however, is the new USO-financed Capital City Service Men's Club, where a musical show was presented. The primary attractions of the club are a staff of pretty, blue-uniformed hostesses and an array of ping-pong, checkers and other games.

THE fact that Washington is still new to many of the men who come from sections far removed is the reason for a large number of camera-carrying groups bent on sightseeing. They follow the ordinary sightseer's routine, alternating between looking up at the Monument, or an equivalent structure, and sitting on a park bench nursing tired feet.

However, as one soldier protested, "Don't go too much by tonight. Next Saturday we'll have a month's pay in our pockets."

1. CHINESE CHECKERS was in vogue at the Capital City Service Men's Club as the boys in uniform spent a prepayday Saturday night in town. Around the board (from left) are Sergt. H. E. Kline, Staff Sergt. S. O. Smith, Janet Kasdon, Sergt. W. M. Eade, Virginia Brittin and Private C. J. Thompson. Taking a . . .

2. . . . BUSMAN'S HOLIDAY were Privates Edward Topliff, A. McMindes, Joseph Nesavich and Harvey Hornberger, shown in an E Street shooting gallery in private target competition. Casting . . .

3. . . . WISTFUL GLANCES at a pretty girl on a drug store window poster were Hospital Apprentices C. E. Allen (left) and B. W. Biggers. Next Saturday night will be different, because a pay day will have come in the meantime

Bill Cunningham's Column

. . . . Fans' Fond Memories of Hating Ty Cobb

By Bill Cunningham

At the Ty Cobb-Babe Ruth golf soiree in Boston, it was interesting to sit around in public places with Cobb and to note the reaction of the citizenry to him, to hear the questions they asked, and the reminiscences they presented. It was his first visit to Boston in 13 years, and in the days of his prime, he was definitely Public Enemy No. 1 of all the town's baseball fandom.

But a steady stream of people, most of them getting a little thick around the equator and becoming noticeably nude above the brows, kept walking up and shaking his hand.

"You bring back my youth," one old fellow told him. "I wish you were back on those base paths and I were back in the stands calling you names. Ah, those were the days!"

"Yeah," said Tyrus, "I used to love 'em to."

"I wonder," said another fellow, "if you can remember a thing I saw you do one time that I've been puzzled about ever since. You were in center field that day and were running the ball club. One of the Red Sox came to bat with a man on third and second base open, and you made a wide swinging motion with your arm to the Detroit pitcher, as if you were waving the batter to first base.

"The motion said plainly to walk the guy. Everybody in the park saw it. Your pitcher saw it. The batter saw it. The pitcher nodded his head. The batter slumped in the box, apparently waiting for the pitchout. But instead the pitcher burned one right through the middle of the plate and the umpire yelled, 'Sturryke.'"

Cobb in a Tantrum.

"You went into a regular tantrum in center field, yelled at the pitcher and swung your arm again, waving the guy to first. The same performance was pulled right over again. The batter stood there just resting the bat on his shoulder. The pitcher blazed one over the middle of the plate, and the umpire roared, 'Sturrryke Twoooo!'

"Then with two strikes on the hitter and him thus in the hole, you didn't wave any more, the pitcher really went to work on the guy, got him to fish at a bad one and struck him out, thus retiring the side. I was only a kid at the time, but I've always remembered it and I've always wondered if that pitcher was deliberately disobeying orders, and, if so, what you did to him afterward."

Ty Cobb (right) challenges decision

"He wasn't disobeying orders," the baldish Mr. Cobb chuckled. "That was a play we had. You couldn't work it very often, but once in a while we got away with it. I remember that day here in Boston. That guy went for it, hook, line and sinker."

"The first flash of major league baseball I ever remember," another man in his middle 40's told the celebrated outfielder, "was of you stealing third base here in Boston and getting in a fist fight. I was only a kid from the country and had never seen a big league game.

"A friend here in Boston took me to Fenway Park that day mostly because Detroit was in town and the great Ty Cobb was to be in action. We got tied up somehow and the game was already on when we got there and just as we got settled in our seats on the third base side, looked at the scoreboard and sized up the general situation, you were on second and you started to steal third.

"You came into the bag with your spikes so high, it looked as if you were sliding on the back of your neck. There was an argument over the decision, the third baseman swung at you with his fist. You swung back and a regular free-for-all started."

"Yeah," said Ty, "that Larry Gardiner and I always had a lot of trouble. I couldn't get through a game without getting mixed up with him somehow or other. But he was a good ball player. He really could go."

Babe and Ty Pals?

But the off-stage meetings in Boston between Ty and the Babe were something really to see. Never especially enthusiastic about each other, and the veterans of a couple of tangles in their playing days, they were like a couple of belligerent kids meeting socially for the first time and making the somewhat disconcerting discovery that they really liked each other.

They had a lot in common already. This golf gives them a new bond that is current and living. From what I heard and saw, it wouldn't surprise me any to see them wind up with their arms over each other's shoulders singing "Pals, Dear Old Pals," almost any time now.

That's the way it is with sport more times than it isn't. If you really want to know a guy, take him out and play a game with him. That motto, "Strife Forgotten: Friendship Made" sums up the story.

Even Corridor Space Being Used at Justice

Justice Department is doubling up in its office space in an effort to keep all of its offices here. Officials with large offices are being moved to smaller ones and a half dozen clerical workers are being moved into the large offices. Thurman Arnold, the trustbuster, has moved his library into the corridor and 25 employes have been given the office space formerly used by the library. Arnold's reception office also has been moved into the corridor. Other officials probably will follow Arnold's lead.

If any Justice agency is moved in the decentralization drive it probably will be the Alien Registration Unit. The unit is composed mainly of temporary employes and it's the belief of some officials that regional offices and temporary and liquidating agencies, like Home Owners Loan Corporation and Alien Registration, should be the first agencies moved out.

Securities and Exchange Commission, according to some sources, is marked for transfer. However, a report has the President opposed to the transfer of SEC's central office out of Washington. The probable outcome is further decentralization of its trial registration and litigation units. Several months ago field offices were set up on a trial basis in San Francisco and Cleveland and it's generally believed these offices will be made permanent and be expanded by the transfer of personnel from the central office here.

Interstate Commerce Commission, which has directly or indirectly brought terrific pressure on the Administration to remain here, isn't expected to be touched. A White House official said no serious consideration had been given to the thought of transfering ICC. . . Federal Works officials are understood to be interested in the possibility of constructing a building on the Virginia side of Great Falls to house Public Roads Administration. Federal Works assigns space to other agencies and it's on the spot to set an example by moving some of its employes out of the city or finding adequate space here.

40 Different Licenses

There are now 40 different kinds of licenses used on Government-owned vehicles. After January 1, however, they will all be the same. President Roosevelt has ordered all departments to use a uniform system to identify Government-owned vehicles and John B. Blandford, jr., acting director of the Budget Bureau, has instructed department chiefs how, when and where to get the new licenses. The only exceptions to the rule will be vehicles operated by investigators such as the Secret Service, and G-Men.

The new tags will be in red, white and blue. Each tag will have a code number on it which will designate the agency operating the vehicle. Federal Power vehicles, for example, will carry the letters "FP," and Labor Department will have "L" on its licenses. Each vehicle also must display a red, white and blue shield after the New Year. The Procurement Division will supply the shields for all vehicles, and licenses for field vehicles. The District Government will issue Government licenses for Federal vehicles operated here.

The Bureau of Agricultural Economics is due to get a slash in its 1942 appropriation of nearly half a million dollars less the amount it asked for. What this will do to the personnel isn't known, but unquestionably some employes will have to be shifted to other jobs or separated. The story behind the cut is interesting. Last month, it seems, the bureau got out a report in which it took some cracks at the crop control programs which are operated by the Agricultural Adjustment Administration. The report indicated that the cotton control program had been operated to the disadvantage of American growers. Southern Congressmen were furious. Senator Bankhead of Alabama is understood to have insisted on the slash as a lesson to the bureau. It's interesting that Howard R. Tolley, bureau chief, is a former chief of AAA.

Kindler Offers Defense of Finland In Presenting 'Finlandia' Over Protests

A crowd of 9,000 people proved themselves more optimistic than the weatherman last night as they braved a threatening thunderstorm to attend the National Symphony Orchestra's opening "Sunset Symphony" concert at the Water Gate.

Although showers had been predicted for last night, the audience came anyway and were rewarded when the rain held off. They took up all the available seats, lined the railing of the Arlington Bridge, brought a flotilla of Japanese-lanterned canoes to the waterfront, and cheered Conductor Hans Kindler and the orchestra through a program of six numbers and five encores.

Dr. Kindler introduced a moment of drama into the evening when he announced that he had been requested not to play "Finlandia," the last scheduled number on the program, "for obvious reasons." After following the announcement with the simple statement "I am going to play "Finlandia," he drew the applause of the crowd with a brief defense of Finland's position in the war, describing her as caught between "Europe's two big bullies."

"Hitler has proclaimed Finland his ally," said Dr. Kindler. "But because Hitler says something—to use a musical expression—it ain't necessarily so."

The Finnish Minister and Mme. Hjalmar J. Procope were in the audience, along with a list of other Capital celebrities which included Vice President and Mrs. Henry Wallace, Norwegian Minister, Wilhelm Munthe de Morgenstierne, Mr. and Mrs. Paul V. McNutt, and Gen. and Mrs. George Marshall.

Lightning over the river provided extra effects for several of the numbers. The electrical display playing over the edges of the thunderheads made an appropriate background for numbers like "Finlandia" and Edvard Grieg's sturdy Norwegian March. And the audience, which ranged from white suits through khaki uniforms to shirtsleeves, didn't let the lightning interfere with the enjoyment of less stormlike pieces such as Ravel's "Pavane" and the Strauss waltzes.

Lucy Monroe, known as the "Star-Spangled Soprano" by virtue of her claim to having sung the national anthem publicly more times than any other living person, will be the soloist at the second of the concerts scheduled for Wednesday. The program has been arranged by Dr. Kindler in honor of Independence Day weekend, and the orchestra will be under the direction of Charles O'Connell, director of artists and classical recording for RCA-Victor.

Postlude

Music of Nazi Victims Played At Watergate

By Ray C. B. Brown

Hans Kindler conducts the National Symphony Orchestra in the opening concert of the 1941 summer series Sunday night at the Potomac Watergate. Program: Symphony No. 9 in E minor (Dvorak), Triumphal March from 'Sigurd Jorsalfar' (Grieg), Two 16th-Century Tunes from the Netherlands (arr. Kindler), Pavane pour une Infante defurte (Ravel) . . . Artist's Life Waltz (Strauss), Finlandia (Sibelius).

In opening the 1941 series of summer concerts at the Potomac Watergate last evening, Hans Kindler paid attention to the troubled affairs of our world by conducting the National Symphony Orchestra in "a defense program of music of the invaded countries." After the proclamation of our National anthem, the concert was devoted to compositions whose authors were natives of Bohemia, Norway, Holland, France, Austria and Finland. The underlying theme of the program was not only timely, but seemed to meet with the approval of the large audience assembled for the occasion, for at the close of the official list, the demand for extra numbers did not subside until five had been played.

BROWN

The symphony chosen by Dr. Kindler was the one which Antonin Dvorak composed during his residence in the United States and titled "From the New World." For almost half a century, Americans have repaid the compliment by cherishing this work above all his other eight symphonies and listening to it with unabated affection. Its continued popularity is not based entirely upon sentimental reasons, however, for the music has a charm unrelated to place. The beauty of its themes and the sincerity of its emotional expression are the elements which preserve it.

Norway was represented by the triumphal march from Grieg's incidental music for Bjornson's patriotic drama, "Sigurd Jorsalfar." This, too, was a happy choice by the conductor, for it presented a comparatively unfamiliar piece by a composer who is usually heard in the purely lyric vein. This music has stateliness, dignity and the pomp of state.

For the music of his native land, Dr. Kindler went back to the fifteenth century, and offered his arrangement of two songs which sprang from the struggle of the Netherlands against the tyranny of Spain; "O Unhappy Time" and "See the Cursed Oppresser." From France came Ravel's delicate "Pavane pour une Infante defunte," from Austria the "Artist Life" waltzes of Johann Strauss the younger, and from Finland the stirring strains of Sibelius' "Finlandia."

Waxing enthusiasm of the audience would not allow the orchestra to depart without some added numbers, and Dr. Kindler was generous in his response. The varied extra offerings were Bach's "Some, Sweet Death," Shostakavich's impish polka from "The Golden Age," Lecuona's "Siboney," Kreisler's "Liebesleid" and Debussy's "Clair de lune."

It might be well before the next concert to make some shifts in the location of the microphones for the amplification. The rumble of the double-basses frequently disturbed the balance of the orchestral tone, for one thing, and there were other instances of instrumental prominence not intended in the score.

Mount Vernon Church Honors Choir Leader

The congregation of Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church last night saluted one of its most distinguished members, Deane Shure, upon completion of two decades of service as choir leader.

The adult, senior and children's chapel choirs honored Mr. Shure by singing several of his own compositions; Dr. John Rustin, pastor, recounted his musical accomplishments, and everyone joined in a reception afterward in the social hall.

In the adult choir were eight charter members who've been associated with Deane Shure since he came to Mount Vernon in 1921. They were R. Frank Barr, L. A. Coffman, Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Coffman, Alfred England, Mrs. Dora Etheredge, Dr. W. S. Rhodes and Charles E. Ruffner.

In his tribute, Dr. Rustin said that Deane Shure's enthusiasm for music "rang through all his compositions." 100 of which have been published, including 15 anthems inscribed to the Mount Vernon choir.

At the reception which followed, Deane Shure received gifts from the three choirs—a volume of records of Brahms' Third Symphony, and colored films for his movie camera. Mrs. Shure was presented with a corsage of red roses.

Presenting the gifts to Deane Shure was Talma L. Smith, church board official, who 25 years ago was a student of Mr. Shure's at Clarendon College, Texas.

The committee in charge of the reception was headed by Mrs. Ida Groover, teacher of the Jaynes Class, and included Mrs. Earl Carson, Mr. and Mrs. O. Castle; Don McLane, Mrs. E. E. Beardon and Grace McCutcheon.

Defense Needs Help of All, Mrs. Kerr Says

"National defense is everybody's business and everybody should get busy about that business," stated Mrs. Florence Kerr, assistant in the OPM, in an adddres before the National Council of Negro Women at Howard University yesterday.

"There is not going to be any defense plan for any specific group of individuals," Mrs. Kerr said. "We are going to be civilian and volunteer workers and serve where best we can. The national office, under Mayor LaGuardia, will plan and outline objectives and procedures, but control and responsibility will rest with the local groups.

Mrs. Kerr, who is assistant WPA commissioner in charge of all community service programs, has been "loaned" to the OPM to serve as Mayor LaGuardia's assistant.

The speaker urged her listeners to know their jobs well and to be able to defend their work and the purposes for which it is intended. She also advised the audience to take first-aid courses.

Fireworks Ban Urged By District Society

The District of Columbia Society for the Prevention of Blindness yesterday issued a recommendation that fireworks be omitted from Independence Day celebrations, "and the tragedy of pain and remorse be averted."

The society called attention with approval to the fact that explosive fireworks have been made illegal for Fourth of July in Maryland, and reminded the public that in 1940 only three large cities had worse records for injuries than Washington. The total hurt here, they reported, was 68.

Miller Quits USHA To Join D. C. Law Firm

Morris Miller of St. Louis, Mo., has resigned as assistant general counsel of the United States Housing Authority, the authority announced last night, to become associated with the Washington law firm of Dempsey and Koplovitz. The resignation will become effective tomorrow, the announcement said.

New Draft Registrants To Get Equal Chance

Increased chances of being called for a year's military service created by President Roosevelt's order yesterday for the maximum number of 900,000 selects in the coming fiscal year, will be shared equally between the approximately 750,000 men reaching 21 years of age by tomorrow, and those already registered, it was pointed out yesterday by local draft officials.

The new registrants will be put "neither in front nor behind" those already registered, officials stated, but will be put on the lists in proportion to the registrants remaining and not called as yet.

It was pointed out, however, that fewer deferments either for physical handicaps or for family responsibilities are expected among the new group.

New Class to Register

While America's class of 21-year-olds prepares to register in 6,000 centers tomorrow, it was reminded that deferment from military training of all Selective Service registrants with dependents to whom they make any "substantial contribution" has been ordered.

Only exception is of a registrant who was married after the date when he was required to register and who cannot prove that the new status came in "a manner consistent with the ordinary course of human affairs," Selective Service headquarters said. That is, the registrant must show that his marriage was not in order to give a basis for deferment claim.

The District is prepared tomorrow to enroll more than 7,500 men who reached the age of 21 since last October 16. The registration will be held in 25 District schools. Fourhundred registrars will be on duty.

Reclassification Planned

The ruling on deferment for dependencies directs reconsideration of all such registrants in Class 1-A, as well as attention to future classification of married men or men with married children, it was said. The growing number of cases of married men seeking Army discharge unduly burdens administrative machinery of both the Army and the selective system, Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, deputy director of Selective Service, said in a memorandum to State directors. He pointed to three principal types of applicants for discharge, as follows:

1. The registrant who is not deferred because his wife works, aiding in support of the family. Frequently, following induction of such men, the wife finds herself unable to carry on.

2. The newly married registrant whose claim for deferment by reason of dependency has not been recognized because of the recent date of his marriage.

3. The married registrant whose financial status or the financial status of his dependents the local board decides is such that the dependents may support themselves in some fashion despite the disruption of the family unit which follows his induction.

Dependency Ruling

"Registrants whose wives work and contribute to the support of the home may not for that reason alone be denied deferment," the memorandum insisted.

"Local boards should remember that every husband is under legal obligation to support his wife and children and that obligation is not removed because the wife has chosen to aid in the family maintenance."

Before granting a recently married registrant deferment to Class III, "the local board should require a showing that the new status of the registrant was acquired in the ordinary course of human affairs and was not acquired in order to evade training and service. In applying this rule, however, any reasonable doubt should be resolved in favor of deferment."

Capital News In Brief

Man, 55, Is Injured As Fourth Starts Early

Hopes for a safe and sane Fourth of July looked dimmer yesterday as the first fireworks accident of the season went on record at Sibley Hospital.

Edward S. Suth, 55, of 48 H Street Northeast, said he was standing peacefully on the corner of First and H Streets Northeast when an exploding firecracker hit him on the leg. Who threw it or where it came from, he didn't know. He was treated for a laceration and puncture wound of the left leg.

Pickpocket Gets $70, Tickets to Ball Game

Charles M. Henderson, of Alexandria, had bought two box seats in advance to make sure he saw Joe DiMaggio set a new hitting streak record, but had a hitch thrown into his plans very rudely yesterday afternoon.

On the street car, between Seventh and D Streets and the stadium, somebody helped himself to Henderson's pocketbook containing $70 and the two box seats to the game. Henderson reported the theft to Thirteenth Precinct police.

3 Colored Golfers, Escorted By 6 Police, Play East Potomac

Escorted by six officers of the U. S. Park Police, three colored men played golf yesterday at the East Potomac Golf Course.

Lieut. H. T. Miskell and Sergt. L. G. Purtlebaugh, who feared there might be trouble, detailed three shifts of two men to accompany the colored golfers. Starting about 10 a. m., the men played twelve holes, stopping about 5 p. m. when it began to rain.

Their tickets were purchased by a light complexioned man, according to the concessionaire but were not accepted when the three men entered the course to play. The tickets were left at the doorkeeper's desk.

The men played without interruption until they came to the tenth hole, near the swimming pool. Jeers from the spectators did not stop the game, however.

The players were Asa Williams, 90 R Street Northwest; George Williams, 1924 Sixth Street Northwest, and Cecil R. Shamwell, 1124 Seventh Street Northeast. Asa Williams is president of the Royal Golf Club.

Accompanying the players was Edgar G. Brown, director of the National Negro Council and president of the United States Government Employes. The colored leader said facilities at the Langston course were inadequate, so the men came over to the East Potomac course to play.

The scores of the players were as follows: Asa Williams, 2 over par; Shamwell, 1 under par, and George Williams, 4 over par. Par for the course is 72.

Dr. Doyle to Speak

The future of modern foreign languages in secondary education will be discussed at a meeting in Boston this afternoon by Richard Pattee, assistant chief, division of cultural relations, Department of State, Washington, and Dr. Henry Grattan Doyle, professor of romance languages at George Washington University.

Out of the Musicals And Into the Melee

Anna Neagle to Change Pace in War Melodrama; Capital Gets New Helen Hayes Play, After All; Short Takes and Shoptalk About Amusements

ANNA NEAGLE

IN HER NEXT PICTURE, Anna Neagle, one of England's three ranking, feminine, cinema stars, recently seen at RKO-Keith's in "Sunny," will bring a complete change of pace to the screen—just as she did in abandoning such serious subjects as "Victoria the Great," "Sixty Glorious Years" and "Nurse Edith Cavell" in favor of new picturizations of old favorite musical comedies.

According to Producer Herbert Wilcox, a weekend visitor in the Capital, the new vehicle, as yet unnamed, will be a straight melodrama of aviation, the Intelligence Service and the Battle of the Atlantic, with its exteriors filmed in Canada and the studio sequences in England. It will be made with the full cooperation of the British Air Ministry and the Admiralty.

Miss Neagle and Mr. Wilcox will plane to England immediately upon the conclusion of her present Canadian personal appearance tour, a matter of four or five weeks. They plan to spend two months on the other side. Two male stars will appear opposite the star, to be recruited from among the many actors well known to the American public now in England and available for assignment.

Coming Over the Horizon

The Earle Theater is bragging again, this time about what it deems the likeliest lineup of feature film attractions ever squirted across the Thirteenth Street screen during what is sweleringly dubbed the heated term. Don Ameche and Mary "My Heart Belongs to Daddy" Martin, in Clare Boothe's capricious comedy, "Kiss the Boys Goodbye," will lead the parade, with Oscar Levant, Eddie "Rochester" Anderson and Connie Boswell marching in the cast. Then John Garfield, Ida Lupino and Thomas Mitchell will be coming along in "Out of the Fog"—based in Irwin Shaw's "The Gentle People"—followed by "The Bride Came C. O. D.," costarring Bette Davis and James Cagney in the first comedy in which Miss Davis has appeared since goodness knows when. "Manpower," Marlene Dietrich's first picture for Warner Brothers, in which she is costarred with Edward G. Robinson and George Raft, puts a temporary period to all this braggadoccio. Promise enough for the time being, at that.

Howard Lindsay and Russel Crouse, producers of Broadway's homicidal comedy hit, "Arsenic and Old Lace," are burning red flares and dancing in the street. Boris Karloff, leading murderer in their idyll, who was to have reported to Columbia Pictures for three weeks in June to fulfill a contractual commitment, has been granted a stay of execution until February 1, 1942.

Dots and Dashes

Best letter of the week—too long to quote—comes from Ethel G. Cline, next door in the Munsey Building. . . . Knows her theater up and down and crosswise. . . . And hated "Fantasia" so much she only went to see it six times. . . . From Sidney Luist, on his way home from the M. P. T. O. A. convention in Hollywood, a pretty, outsize postage card of the Grand Canyon of the Yellowstone, bearing this discovery, "This is a beautiful place." . . . Glad it still is. . . . It was the last time we were out there, too. . . . And a wire from Harry Anger adding this to some flattering remarks about our review of the "Rochester Unit," currently on the stage at the Earle: "We have cut the show down to 54 minutes. It has tempo and movement now and I think if you could spare the time to drop in again that you would like the construction as set up. Thanks again and regards." . . . Those Louis-Conn fight fillums are still romping around and rousing the customers. . . . Now banging away at the Trans-Lux, Hiser Theater, Bethesda, Md.; Hyattsville, Hyattsville, Md.; Milo, in Rockville, and Cameo, in Mount Rainier. . . . Coming to the Marlboro, Upper Marlboro, Md., July 3, 4, 5 and 6; Waldorf, Waldorf, Md., July 5, 6 and 7, and the Leader, 507 Ninth Street, July 4, 5, 6, 7 and 8. . . . One of the most spectacular fireworks displays in this vicinity will be touched off at the Open-Air Theater, down on the Richmond Highway, at a special July 4 midnight show.

PRINCIPALS IN TECHNICOLOR MUSICAL

A Meaty Bill Is on View At Trans-Lux

As Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker lands in New York after his close brush with death, he makes you sit up and take notice, at the Trans-Lux Theater this week, by saying, "The Statue of Liberty never looked so beautiful before." And this might well be a good slogan for all Americans as the newsreels grind out the bitter battle of the centuries now devastating more than half the entire world.

The Royal Air Force shows you what they are doing in the most daring raids of the war, while the Soviet army is giving the Germans their toughest fight by land.

In France, there is a scene of dramatic tenseness as French troops arrive "home" from German prison camps and with eager eyes pierce the lines of silent civilians for loved ones not there. Petain inspects the pitiful remnant of the tricolor airforce and in Libya powerful British tank troops turn in many German prisoners. In England, the British put their new monster tanks through thrilling maneuvers as their warships rush reinforcements to Gibraltar to defend the famous rock.

And Here at Home

In the United States, the news presents the 18 members of the White family, of Washington, D. C., all in line at the downtown postoffice to purchase their defense savings stamps; memorial exercises for the lost officers and crew of the Submarine O-9; former President Hoover inspecting the huge library of his Americana at Palo Alto, Calif.; the Eucharistic Congress in St. Paul.

In the short subject section there is an instructive film, "We Americans," starring Frank Craven. The "Modern Way Down East" will prove highly interesting to lovers of colonial Americana. Fanny Brice and Jerry Colonna join with a number of movie celebrities for a Hollywood party, in a "Screen Snapshots," and, finally, the pictures of the Louis-Conn fight, held over for a second week.

Gets Lay-Off

For the first time since she came to Hollywood in 1935 Dorothy Lamour is getting a full month's layoff, following the completion of "Aloma of the South Seas."

LEONARD LYONS

New York, June 29.

Clare Boothe attended a dinner party, wearing a new, white evening gown. The man seated to her right engaged her in the customary dinner conversation. Then, accidentally, his knife slipped from the plate—and some food remnants splattered across Miss Boothe's gown. . . . The embarrassed man apologized, profusely—while the playwright cleaned her gown as best she could, assuring him that it was quite all right. He continued to tell her how sorry he was—while she replied, each time, that it was quite all right. . . . When, for the sixth time, he repeated his regrets and insisted: "I feel awful about this," Miss Boothe accidentally tipped a bottle of ketchup across his white shirt-front, and said: "There. Does that make you feel any better?"

Before Darryl Zanuck began the production of his new movie, "A Yank in the R. A. F.," he sent a copy of the script to Lord Beaverbrook, who was in charge of the air ministry. Zanuck asked Beaverbrook to read the script, and to make any suggestions he deemed appropriate . . . Beaverbrook returned the script with one comment: "Keep it as funny as possible."

Until the Nazi decrees appropriated all the available wire in Occupied France, the hardware dealers in Paris indulged in unusual sales practices. Whenever a purchaser asked to buy 3 meters of wire, the dealer told him that none was available. If he asked for 10 meters, or 2 meters, or 6 meters—the reply was the same: None Available. . . . But if a customer wanted to buy "26½ meters of wire," the dealer would discover that supply in stock, and make the sale. . . . 26½ meters of wiring is exactly the length required to place Paris radios within the range of all BBC broadcasts emanating from London.

Wendell Willkie, who received 4 honorary degrees this season, could have had 14 other degrees from colleges throughout the country. Willkie felt, however, that to accept so many degrees at one time would be too embarrassing—and so he accepted those he considered to be representative. . . . Eve Curie, whose books were banned last week in the occupied countries, is completing a new book, about France. . . . Mayor LaGuardia's first address to the Air Wardens will be made today. . . . When Jacqueline Cochran returns from her trip to London, she will start organizing a Women's Auxiliary Air Corps in this country, patterned after the similar organization in Britain.

This week a State Department courier returned from Europe, with a pouch containing all the photographs taken by Dave Scherman, of Life, aboard the prison ship on which he and the other Exxodus passengers were held captive. These rolls of film had been removed by the Nazi officials at Biarritz, for censorship. They promised to return them, via the American Embassy. . . . When Scherman made these pictures—the first photo record of life aboard a prison ship—he was aware of the censorship difficulties. And so he resorted to an old political trick, by interspersing, among the pictures he really wanted, some photos which were sure to please the Nazi censors—posed photos of the Nazi captain and sailors, kissing a baby.

The recent hot spell, which brought discomfiture to millions of New Yorkers, brought relief to Albert Hirschfeld, the noted artist and caricaturist. . . . Some weeks ago, when blankets still were used in the bedrooms of Manhattan, the bearded Hirschfeld was interviewed by a young man who propounded the ancient query: "Do you sleep with your beard under or over the blanket?" . . . The artist laughed at this question, but that night—and every night, until the warm weather eliminated the necessity for sleeping with any covering—Hirschfeld was unable to sleep, kept awake by the disturbing thought that he must remember, in the morning, whether he had slept with his beard under or over his blanket.

Frances Lehrich, Secretary of the Board of Estimate, will be elevated to the bench within the next few days . . . The notables who are portrayed in the movie, "Sergeant York," first had to consent to being portrayed on the screen. Cordell Hull and Gen. Pershing consented immediately. The last one to grant a release was Oscar of the Waldorf

HEDDA HOPPER

Hollywood, Calif., June 29.

If "audience reaction" means what it should, "Kiss the Boys Goodbye" is off to a flying start. The preview audience ate it up, particularly the delectable Mary Martin, as the deep-South charmer, who fights it out with Barbara Jo Allen (Vera Vague to you) for the attentions of Don Ameche.

MARY MARTIN

Elizabeth Patterson and Minor Watson, as Mary's "Befo de wah" aunt and uncle, who still don't know that "dam-Yankee" is two words, are a scream. With Oscar Levant, Jerome Cowan, Raymond Walburn, Connie Boswell and Rochester all thrown in for good measure, it's no wonder the applause was deafening.

David Selznick has announced a complete departure in motion picture form which he hopes will be a blow at double features. He's planning on producing groups of short stories that will fit into a single framework to make a full evening's program. First of these group productions will be called "Tales of Mystery and Imagination," which will include one story by Edgar Allan Poe; the second group will be titled "Tales of Passion and Romance." Selznick says he's had this idea in mind for years, and that the mistake most producers make is trying to stretch a short story into a full-length picture, thereby losing the charm of the original.

Our girls are going in for wild animals. Tallulah Bankhead bought a lion cub; Ann Sheridan has a honey bear; Sigrid Gurie has two ocelots, and Elizabeth Risdon's three-legged wildcat has completely eclipsed her in the eyes of the neighborhood children, who come to the door requesting to see the critter.

Billy Gilbert is "all wore out" with the younger generation. He offered his son, Barry, a chance to earn extra pocket money by weeding the lawn, but Barry demurred on the grounds that it was too tiring. "Oh, it won't tire you once you're used to it," explained Billy. "Yeah?" said Barry, "—but look how tired I'll get—gettin' used to it!"

Humphrey Bogart has no wild animals, but a wife, a Scottie terrier and a boat—and he calls them all by the name, "Sluggie."

Cecil Kellaway writes from the "Bahama Passage" location that the natives never heard of "craps" but they all play ginrummy like mad.

Writer Murphy

George Murphy and Gene Solow took time out before Murphy starts work in Ann Sothern's new picture, "Ringside Maisie," to write a script. It is called "The Chicago Method" and is based on an incident which occurred in London three months ago. Already in screen play form, the story has found favor with two major studios.

American Wife in Name Only, Star Still Can Date 'Husband'

By Frederick C. Othman
United Press Hollywood Correspondent

Hollywood, June 29.—Today we called on an actress, name of Alice Faye, who's in love with her husband. In two more months the law will let her live with him.

In Mexico, where they were married, Alice Faye and Phil Harris, the band leader, are man and wife. In California they're not. They'll not be legally married in these parts until September, when Harris' divorce from his first wife becomes final.

"Of course," said Miss Faye, "there's nothing against my having dates with my husband. He can take me places. We can ride together. We can go fishing. And I can redecorate his house, which is fun, even if I can't live in it yet."

It was a pleasure to talk to Miss Faye, who was dressed in whites and playing the part of a salesgirl from Macy's basement who had saved up her money for a "weekend in Havana." This is a Technicolor picture featuring her, Carmen Miranda, John Payne and Caesar Romero. It's being directed by Walter Lang, who just finished "Moon Over Miami" and it looks like it will be the same kind of bright and frothy entertainment. But to get back to Alice Faye:

Had That Worried Look

Last time we saw her she had circles under her eyes and a worried look. She was polite enough and she answered our questions, but she wasn't very enthusiastic about being interviewed. She didn't volunteer any information. She wasn't having any fun. Life was all worry and work for her.

"But now it's different," said she. And different it seemed to be. No circles any more. Only word we know to describe her appearance is the old fan magazine standby, "radiant."

"I sleep at night," she said. "I don't worry about anything. I guess I'm in love. And the whole world looks different. I never used to be interested in outdoor life. Now Phil takes me horseback riding. He takes me into the mountains, fishing. Imagine me, getting a kick out of catching a fish! Well, I do.

"This outdoor business is opening up an entirely new world for me. I never really knew it existed."

Wants To Have a Family

"And when I have to go to work I get so lonesome for Phil I hardly know what to do," she said. "What I'm hopeful of is getting my contract adjusted so that I'll only have to make one or two pictures a year.

"Anyway, I want to get started pretty soon on having a family. And I think it is bad for an expectant mother to be working in pictures. Bad for the baby, I mean. Prenatal influence. An actress is under a strain and nervous when the arcks go on and I wouldn't want any child of mine to get that kind of start. It might be nervous, too."

Miss Faye said she and Husband Harris weren't going to be bothered with any extended tours, either. She said she tried once to be happy with a husband (Crooner Tony Martin) who never was home and it didn't work.

"Phil," she said, "has arranged to spend his time in Hollywood playing on a radio program. If he also can play in some local night club, he may do that. But he does not intend to go touring with his band. What we want to do is live a normal life. It may be difficult to arrange it, but we're going to make a real try."

Bummy's Chance for Promotion Slim

New York, June 29.—If Pvt. Bummy Davis' chances of promotion in our armed forces depends, as it is said, on his defeating Fritzie Zivic Tuesday night at New York's Polo Grounds in the battle of the partly reformed hoodlums, then we suspect that Bummy will equal one of the greatest records ever set for lack of military progress. The record we speak of is owned and cherished by the writer Charles McArthur, who entered the A. E. F. at the start of hostilities as a second class private, fought through the full war, and emerged as a second class private.

CONSIDINE

Nothing Bummy has learned around his anti-aircraft gun emplacement is calculated to make him know anything more about fist-fighting. Zivic, the flat-nosed old master of every boxing trick, has forgotten more about the art of fighting than Bummy ever will learn. He should be able to handle the rough-tough soldier boy with ease, tie him up at will, and pound out a 12-round victory. The authorities hope he won't try to thumb his way along the road of success.

Pvt. Davidoff's chief chance, as of old, is to land his full-blown left. It is a real haymaker, thrown from 'way back here, and tipped off so long in advance that a fighter as wily as Zivic should be able to cartwheel twice before ducking it. On the strength of that punch alone, Davis has come up with a host of backers. Zivic ruled only an 8-to-5 choice over the week-end.

Davis' Weight Figures Are Climbing

If Davis is fortunate enough to land a couple of those crushing punches, and knocks out Zivic, he will get no title and will have to go back to his Army work to serve the eight months of his year's duty. Bummy is a growing boy. When he first came up, his astute manager, Johnny Attell, matched him almost exclusively with lightweights, or less, though Bummy was already a welter. Now he has grown all the way through the welterweight class, before getting a real chance to fight for the title. He'll weigh about 150 by the time he steps in the ring Tuesday night. What he'll weigh when the Army hands him back to Attell next winter remains to be seen. But at the rate he's going he'll be a middleweight, but with the height and reach of a man in a lesser division. Attell will have to render Davis' suet severely enough to get him back into the welterweight class, or teach him to box well enough to hold his own with such taller semimasterful boxers as Middleweights Soose and Overlin, to keep Bummy from becoming a fistic misfit.

The boys have been talking tough in the mimeographed handouts for the past few days, and there is a bare possibility that they may have said some of the things attributed to them. But in all probability Tuesday night's fight isn't going to be as dirty as their first meeting.

Tough Guy Learns Who's Boss

And it isn't Mike Jacobs who will order the lugs to be gentlemen. Or even Brig. Gen. J. J. Phelan, the boxing commissioner whose jowls shook with quivering righteousness the day, several months ago, that he barred Davis from New York rings for life, for fouling Zivic with 11 consecutive low punches. It will be Davis' commanding officer, whoever he is, who'll make it a cleaner fight. Bummy was a hell-raising gutter-fighting kid in his tough Brooklyn section. But it didn't take him long to learn who was the boss in the Army. We suspect that word has been passed to him to fight a clean fight, and that he'll do his best to obey the command.

We suspect also that it will be perhaps the hardest thing Davis ever had to do. For Zivic used him very badly in the first round of their first fight. He thumbed him, and Bummy went berserk, hot and savage with the desire to get even with Zivic.

If he weren't wearing a uniform, Bummy might go back Tuesday night and begin clouting Zivic in the cellar, until he felt he was even for that little gouging job Zivic performed on him. But orders are orders and Bummy will probably fight as cleanly as it is possible for him to fight. All of which is going to make him a much less dangerous foe, for Zivic, and all of which is going to send Bummy back to camp a beaten man, though not a disgraced one for a change.

Leonard Is Chased By Heavy Barrage In Opener; Hudson Shelled in Nightcap

Joe DiMaggio made history and the Nats made a mess of their double-header against the Yankees yesterday at Griffith Stadium. The Yankees won both ball games, 9 to 4 and 7 to 5, but the 31,000 fans who overran the aisles didn't seem to care.

The 31,000 saw DiMaggio surpass all modern records for consecutive game hitting. There was nothing hostile about the crowd, which wasn't concealing its anticipation of seeing the Yankee slugger better the record of hitting safely in 41 straight games. The 31,000 were on their feet as a sixth-inning two-bagger rang off DiMaggio's bat in the first game, tying George Sisler's record, and they abandoned their chairs in another wild demonstration when DiMaggio cracked a seventh-inning single in the second game, to crown himself the new consistency champion.

Dutch Leonard was the victim of DiMaggio's first-game blow after the Yankee Clipper had gone hitless in his first two times at bat.

With the count one ball and one strike, DiMag whistled a line-drive two-bagger into left center. On second base he grinned and tipped his hat to the noisy applause of the stands.

Chances Were Fading

One hit in each game was Di Maggio's lot, but with the chips down in the late innings of the second game he came through in thoroughbred style. Sid Hudson, who started the second game, had held him hitless in his first two times at bat. There were moans when a line drive off DiMaggio's bat streaked directly into the glove of shortstop Cecil Travis.

Joe's chances to better Sisler's mark were fading when in the fifth inning against Arnold Anderson he lifted a weak fly to Cramer.

DiMaggio stepped to the plate in the seventh inning of that second game still without his hit. It threatened to be his last chance. Six times before, during his 42-game streak, he had made the important hit on his last appearance at bat. Would he get it this time? Anderson brushed him off with a high inside pitch on the first ball and DiMaggio was forced to dance out of the way. On the next pitch—Crash. A low line drive streaked into left field and DiMaggio was the new champion.

Joe Gets Big Ovation

The 31,000 loved it, despite indications that the Nats would lose a doubleheader at this point. In the Yankee dugout, DiMag's teammates tossed their caps and danced their version of a jig. The roars for DiMaggio subsided and then were heard again as DiMag crossed the plate a moment later on Charley Keller's triple.

The Yanks didn't forget another of their hitting streaks, either. They nursed along their feat of hitting at least one home run in each of their

By Jack Munhall
Post Staff Writer

Franklin Field, Philadelphia, Pa., June 29.—Under a blazing sun that sent the temperature soaring to a sultry 103 degrees, the fifty-third National A. A. U. track and field championships blazed to a sensational finish on Franklin Field today, with 25,000 fans seeing one world's record cracked, two equalled and three other marks broken.

Capping the display of speed and stamina as portrayed by 300 of the Nation's outstanding track athletes was the overwhelming victory scored by Olympic Club's 16-man squad in defense of its senior team title. One of the most powerful track squads ever assembled, Coach Charley Hunter's all-Coast personnel easily dominated the field. Olympic Club totaled 125 points to 65½ for Southern California A. A., which won the junior team title yesterday, and 67½ for New York A. C.

Stealing individual honors from a score of other standout performers was Grover Klemmer, the U. C. L. A. flash, who cut the tape in the world-record time of 46 seconds flat in coming from nowhere to win the 400-meter dash for the second straight year.

Fast Fair Spills

Klemmer, the Pacific Coast 440-yard champion and record holder, zipped out of a pocket in the final 200 yards to overtake Hubert Kerns and Cliff Bourland, both of Southern California A. A., to win in a spectacular blanket finish. Not more that four feet separted these three as Kerns and Bourland were clocked in 46.1, which equaled the old world's mark established by Archie Williams, Chicago, way back in 1936. Al Diebolt, Colgate's intercollegiate 440-yard titleholder, also was in the race to the last few yards. He was timed in 46.4.

Hal Davis, me Salina Junior College star, and Norwood (Barney) Ewell, the ebony streak from Penn State, finished up all even in their sprint duels, with Ewell taking the 100 meters and Davis retaining his title in the 200 meters. Both accounted for tied records. Davis and Ewell each duplicated the meet record of 10.3 in the 100, Davis doing it in the trials and Ewell in the finals as he beat Davis by 3 yards. But Davis got ample revenge for this defeat which cost him his 100-meter title, as he came from way back to take Ewell in the 200 meters and equal his own mark of 20.4, set last year.

Another Head-to-Head Duel

Another great head-to-head encounter found William Stewart, the Southern California freshman protege of Les Steers, beating his coach and pal to add the senior high jump title to the junior crown he won last year. And in winning the event with a leap of 6 feet 9¾ inches Stewart smashed a meet record for the second successive afternoon and also tied the listed world's mark.

The high jump was close, with Stewart and Steers both clearing the 6 foot 8¾-inch mark and Stewart claiming the victory on the basis of fewer misses during the entire contest. Steers did not miss until the bar went from its original starting point of 5 feet 10 to its final 6 feet, 9¾-inch resting place. Then he muffed once before clearing that figure. Meantime Steers who, holds the yet-to-be-recognized world's record of 6 feet 11 inches, dislodged the bar once at 6 feet, 6½ inches, twice at 6 feet 8¾ inches, and once at 6 feet 9¾. It was a tough licking for the defending champion.

Fred Wolcott shared attention among the mark smashers by grabbing off the 110-meter hurdles in the new meet record time of 13.7

Joe Extends Bat Streak To 42 Games

By the Associated Press

Joe DiMaggio boomed his way into baseball's row of immortals yesterday in Griffith Stadium, by hitting safely in his forty-first and forty-second consecutive games, setting a new modern major league record.

DiMaggio tied the old mark, established in 1922 by George Sisler, of the St. Louis Browns, with a double to centerfield in the sixth inning of the opener and then carved himself a niche in the game's hall of fame with a sound single in the seventh frame of the nightcap.

A crowd of 31,000 sweltering fans turned out to see DiMaggio's successful bid for a new mark. For the record-minded there also was the Yankees' feat of stretching their home run streak to 25 straight games as Tommy Henrich, Joe Gordon and Charley Keller connected for the circuit during the twin bill.

Leonard Is Victim

DiMaggio's double in the first game came off Dutch Leonard, veteran Washington knuckle-baller. His precedent-setting smash in the nightcap was at the expense of Arnold Anderson, who had relieved starting pitcher Sid Hudson.

Joe was as happy as a 10-year-old with a new bicycle as he came back to the bench after setting his record Surrounded by teammates and photographers, he grinned and said:

"Sure I feel great. Why shouldn't I? That's one record I've wanted to crack ever since I came up to the major leagues."

Joe vowed he would try to stretch his string "so far that it'll last more that Sisler's record, which was good for 19 years." He will attempt to hit safely in his forty-third straight contest when the team takes on Boston Tuesday.

Keeler Hit in 44 Straight

DiMaggio's hit brought him to within two games of an 1897 performance by Willie Keeler, who hit in 44 straight games as a member of the old Baltimore Orioles. Although Sisler's 41-game record is regarded as official because modern records are computed from the season of 1901, Keeler's record is the all-time major league mark.

Joe revealed that two of his favorite bats suddenly turned up missing at the ball park, adding nothing to his peace of mind. DiMaggio's single was his fifty-ninth hit since he opened his terrific hitting pace May 15 against the Chicago White Sox.

Here's How DiMaggio Did It

FIRST GAME

Fourth Inning—DiMaggio lifted a fowl pop to Third Baseman Archie.

Eighth Inning (Carrasquel pitching)—DiMaggio popped up to First Baseman Mickey Vernon.

SECOND GAME

Third Inning—With the count one ball and no strikes, DiMaggio smashed a low liner directly at Shortstop Cecil Travis for an out.

DiMag Gains One of His Pet Ambitions

In the Yankees' dressing room, Joe DiMaggio's teammates were still shaking the hand and slapping the back of the big outfielder a half hour after he had set a new record of hitting in 42 consecutive games.

DiMaggio didn't conceal his own joy. He sat nude on a trunk, ducking towels that were thrown and grinning happily.

"I wanted that record," said Joe.

"I really didn't think much about a record until I hit in my 33rd or 34th game but when I got so cloose to Sisler's mark, I didn't want to stop."

He admitted that he was tense before getting the important hits during the doubleheader.

"I never felt so much on the spot before," he said.

"It is the most excitement I guess I've known since I came into the majors."

DiMaggio expressed his appreciation to Joe McCarthy. "Joe let me take a swing at a 3-0 pitch in that first game before I made my hit," he pointed out. "We had a man on first with one out and I might have gotten a walk, but McCarthy gave me the hit sign and that was decent of him. He's played ball with me all the way. I popped out on the pitch, but McCarthy was giving me my chance."

Staunton Hits Hard to Win, 9-4

Petersburg, Va., June 29 (AP).—Staunton's cellar-dwelling Presidents jumped on Red Paterra for nine runs on nine hits in the first four innings to register a 9-4 victory over the Petersburg Rebels in a Virginia League game here today.

Highlights of the early attack of the Presidents was a home run by Steve Sloboda in the first inning with Stefan on base. Manager Jimmy Bair collected two doubles in four appearances at the plate to tie Sloboda for the honor of driving in the most runs.

Bob Montgomery, Jones Fight Tonight

By Al Hailey

Washington fans will get a chance to see the coming lightweight champion of the world in action tonight at Griffith Stadium when Bob Montgomery, Philadelphia colored boy, and Wishy Jones, of Atlanta and Louisville, take over for a ten-round battle.

Tonight's business is supposedly Promoter Joe Turner's last stand. If the gate receipts don't add up in sufficiently large sums, Joe is going to throw in the towel, the story goes. He has uttered such statements that he is tired of "beating my head against a stone wall"—meaning Mike Jacobs' "super promotions" and the District Boxing Commission's willingness to sanction them here.

Montgomery, who can best be described as a dusky buzz-saw, will be a top-heavy choice over the veteran lightweight handled by Eddie Walker, but Jones, with calm assurance, has issued notices that he is going to knock out the Philadelphian.

A fast-growing youngster of 22, Montgomery has had 37 professional fights and lost only three decisions which he has since reversed with exception of a loss to Sammy Angott, N. B. A. lightweight king.

In New York, where Montgomery recently defeated the New York-California champion, Lew Jenkins, the colored boy already has been conceded the title when, and if, he gets Jenkins in the ring again. Bob is boomed as a second edition of Henry Armstrong and Manager Frankie Thomas insists he is going to duplicate Hanks triple-crown feat.

With Montgomery advertised as a sure thing to take Jones in stride, the semifinal 10-rounder featuring Phil Furr against Al Franklin, local colored boy, is likely to steal the spotlight tonight.

Furr, the aging District welter-

Zuppke Replies To Daily Illini About Dismissal

By the Associated Press

Muskegon, Mich., June 29.—Bob Zuppke, University of Illinois football coach, declared today an editorial which appeared in the Daily Illini yesterday suggesting his "resignation or dismissal" was "inspired from above."

"I know the Daily Illini's talk too well," Zuppke said, referring to the university's student newspaper.

"I've heard the same thing again and again. But that isn't the sentiment expressed at student mass meetings.

"There are no regular students down there now," he added. "There's only a summer session going on."

Zuppke was reached at his Lake Harbor summer cottage near here. He recently commented on a move seeking his ouster, "I won't resign, that's certain. They'll have to fire me."

Mangrum Captures Midwest Open Golf

Kankakee, Ill., June 29 (AP).—Lloyd Mangrum, of Oak Park, Ill., finishing with a final round of 68, eight under par, today won the fourth annual $1,500 midwest open golf tournament at the Helland Country Club with a 72-hole total of 270 strokes. Dick Metz, also of Oak Park, was second with 272.

Other low scorers included E. J. Harris, Little Rock, Ark., 276, and Ky Laffoon, Miami, Okla., 277.

Joe's Average Up 43 Points During Streak

By the Associated Press

New York, June 29.—By hitting in 42 consecutive games, record-breaker Joe DiMaggio, of the Yankees has boosted his batting average from a puny .306 to an impressive .349 through today's games.

Since he started his phenomenal streak on May 15, Jolting Joe has been at bat 167 times and has made 63 hits for 117 total bases. By coincidence he averaged exactly one run per game for the period. His batting average for the big streak was .377.

Included in his bag of hits were 12 home runs, 12 doubles and three triples. He knocked across 39 runs to play a big part in the Yankee's climb into the leadership of the American League.

Twice during his rampage the Yankee star bumped into Bobby Feller of Cleveland, the game's greatest pitcher. The first time Joe rapped Bobby for two hits; the second time he got the minimum of one.

Twice in the 42 games DiMaggio ran into some pitching he really liked and slammed four hits, and on three occasions he banged three, but for the most part he had to struggle. No fewer than 27 times he managed to keep the string going with a single blow, and too often for comfort that one came in his last time at bat.

387-Foot Home Run Wins for Asheville

Durham, N. C., June 29 (AP).—Erwin Prasse's 387-foot home run, over the left field fence gave the Asheville tourists a 6-to-5 victory over the Durham Bulls this afternoon in an 11-inning contest. Prasse had just replaced Manager Nick Cullop in the Asheville line-up.

Herb Fash, Durham first baseman, suffered a fractured ankle when he slid across home plate in the seventh inning, and Duke Hospital doctors tonight said that he would be out of action for the year.

Cards Split With Reds, Hold Lead as Dodgers Break Even

Birds Hold Game Edge In N. L. Race

14-4 Victory in 2d Clash Evens Matters After 6-2 Loss; 8-Run Spree Settles Nightcap

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, June 29.—The rip-roaring Cardinals smothered the world champion Cincinnati Reds, 14 to 4, in the second game of a twin bill today after the Reds won the first, 6 to 2.

The split enabled the Cards to maintain their National League lead of one game over Brooklyn, which also took one and lost one today.

The crowd, 13,755 cash customers, saw the Redbirds put together their biggest inning of the season when they gathered in eight runs in the seventh round of the night-cap—after the Reds had crept up to within one run of a tie.

While the Cardinals made only 4 of their 12 hits in that chapter, they were helped along by the wildness of Cincinnati pitchers, a double steal and by two of four Cincy errors.

Walks Help Out

The Cards received a total of seven bases on balls off five Reds flingers. However, the first pitcher, Southpaw Johnny Vander Meer, was pitching good ball and had seven strikeouts to his credit when he was withdrawn for a pinch batter in the seventh.

It was a left-hander's duel for more than half the game, Rookie Ernie White turning in a good performance for the Cards until the sixth, when he was relieved by Bill Crouch, recently purchased from Philadelphia. White received credit for the win, his sixth straight against one defeat.

After Lon Warneke, the Cardinal ace, received an automobile and other gifts from St. Louis and Hot Springs, Ark., friends before the the first game, the Reds took him for a rough ride. Seventeen hits in all, including a two-run homer by Jimmy Gleeson, were rolled up by Cincinnati, 11 off Warneke, who was knocked out in the sixth. Howard Krist and Sam Nahem finished. Bucky Walters recorded his ninth victory against six losses.

weight champion, is on another spurt since his recent one-round knockout of Vinnie Vines. Franklin, who has beaten Furr's two-time conqueror, Bill McDowell, is a fast youngster who may give Phil trouble.

Furr, a potent hitter, packs too much experience for Franklin, however, and probably will be installed as the favorite. It's strictly a local welterweight feud, and Promoter Turner is staking his all on it to pull in the cash customers.

The preliminaries open at 8:30 p. m. with Ken Stribling meeting Lou Bass in a four-rounder. Phil Enzenga meets Tommy Hoover in a four, and Oscar Wright fights Eddie Allen in a six.

DiMaggio's Drawing Power Packs Them In—31,000 Strong

Bosox Swamp Athletics, 13-1; Then Bow, 3-2

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, June 29.—The Athletics split a double-header with the Boston and Red Sox today, winning the second game, 3 to 2, after losing the opener, 13 to 1. The second largest crowd of the season, 28,483, saw the bargain bill.

Jack Knott won his sixth game in the afterpiece, although lifted for a pinch hitter in the eighth. Tom Ferrick, who replaced him in the ninth, gave up two hits by Johnny Peacock and Pinch-hitter Jimmy Foxx after two were out, but then fanned Dominick DiMaggio on three pitches to end the game. Knott gave up only five hits in eight innings. Sam Chapman's single, following a base on balls to Bob Johnson and a one-baser by Dick Siebert, drove in the winning run in the third.

The Sox had an easy time in the opener behind Charley Wagner's five-pitching. Joe Cronin hit a homer with the bases loaded in the third and Ted Williams clouted his fifteenth roundtripper in the eighth. Frankie Pytlak also hit for the circuit in the fourth.

last 25 games. That record appeared to be ended at 23 games when the Yanks moved into the ninth inning of the first without a homer to show for these efforts, but with one out in the ninth Tommy Henrich lifted one of Alex Carrasquel's pitches over the right field wall. The Yanks increased their homer streak to 25 in the second game when Keller bashed homers into the center and left fields stands.

As for the two ball games, the Nats were out of the first one as early as the sixth inning when the Yanks had a 6-0 lead against Leonard. Sid Hudson was no shining success as the second game pitcher, although he left the battle in Anderson's hands with the score tied at 4-4 in the fourth inning.

Ruffing Knocked Out

Sort of bravely, the Nats attempted to tie up both ball games in the late innings. They knocked Charley Ruffing from the box with a four-run uprising in the opener, but Johnny Murphy held them hitless thereafter. In the second game a bit of tough luck accompanied the Nats' defeat.

The Nats rocked Relief Pitcher Steve Peek for three straight hits in the ninth inning of that second game and had the tying runs on third and first with one out, when Bonham relieved Peek. Mickey Vernon rifled a terrific drive toward right field, but First Baseman Johnny Sturm flung up his glove, came down with the ball, stepped on first and the Nats were a gone gang.

Leonard and Ruffing were locked in a scoreless duel in the opener until the fifth inning. Then the Yankees came up with three runs, and Ruffing helped to win his own ball game. Before anybody was out, Gordon singled through the box, and Rizzuto doubled down the leftfield line. Whereupon Ruffing scored them both with a double against the centerfield wall and scored, himself, a bit later on Rolfe's long fly.

Three Cheap Runs

The Yanks came up with three cheap runs in the sixth to improve their lead to 6-0. After DiMaggio scored from third and Keller moved up on a knuckle ball that got away from Jake Early, and a freak score developed on the next pitch also. Gordon swung at a third strike that eluded Early, and Keller scored with Gordon reaching first on the catcher's error. Gordon scored all the way from first when Rizzuto singled to left and became entangled with Bloodworth at second base when he tried to stretch the blow.

With two out in the sixth, the Nats tried to get back in the ball game and did come up with four runs after two were out. Archie singled, and with two out, the Nats banged Ruffing for four straight hits to knock him out of the box. Lewis and Travis singled, Vernon doubled high off the right-field wall and Early drove in the third and fourth runs of the inning by slicing a triple to left. But Murphy came into the ball game to dispose of Case, and the Nats didn't get to first base thereafter.

In that second game, the Yanks got to Hudson early. Strum opened the game with a triple to right center and scored when Travis muffed Rolfe's grounder. Rolfe moved to second on a passed ball and scored on two long flies. Gordon blasted one of Hudson's pitches into the left-field seats for another Yankee run in the second and in the fourth Keller led off with a tremendous drive over the 420-foot sign into the center-field seats.

Stanceu No Puzzle

Charley Stanceu, Yankee rookie from Newark, was no great puzzle to the Nats and by the end of the fourth they had tied the score at 4-4. They got a cheap run in the first inning after Archie singled. Gordon booted a pair of ground balls and Rizzuto muffed another. But with the bases full and none out, Stanceu held the damage to one run by fanning Early and getting Case on a ground ball.

Gordon's third error of the game figured in two more Washington runs in the third. Cramer singled and Lewis moved him to third with a double to left. On Travis' grounder, Gordon attempted to flag down Lewis at third base but threw wild into the Yankee dugout, and Lewis followed Cramer across the plate. DiMaggio's fancy catch of Vernon's long drive halted the rally.

Pinchhitter Buddy Myer set hte tying run in motion in the fourth when he batted for Hudson and singled to center. He scored on singles by Archie and Lewis.

Anderson relieved Hudson in the box and gave up the winning runs to the Yanks in the sixth inning. With one out, Gordon singled, and Rizzuto and Silvestri drew walks to fill the bases. Selkirk pinch hit for Stanceu and pushed a bat-handle double to left field to score two of his pals. The Yanks came up with another run off Anderson in the eighth when DiMaggio singled and Keller tripled to right center.

Young Steve Peek held the Nats scoreless from the fourth to the ninth when he suddenly ran into trouble, despite his 7-4 lead. Cramer singled with one out in the ninth and Lewis and Travis followed with singles.

With one run home and the tying runs on base, Vernon made a bold attempt to prolong the rally, but First Baseman Sturm stepped into the path of his line drive and stepped on first base for a game-ending double play.

It was very sad.

Chisox Score 8 in 6th, Beat Indians, 9 to 3

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, June 29.—The Chicago White Sox used 13 batters to score 8 runs in their half of the sixth inning today to give ol'e Ted Lyons the 340th victory of his major league career, and whip the Cleveland Indians 9 to 3 before 12,000 fans. Ken Keltner hit his thirteenth homer of the season in the Tribe's fourth inning.

Lyons held the Indians to five scattered hits while Jimmy Dykes' boys pounded four Cleveland throwers for 14 safeties, all singles. In fact, Keltner's homer was the only extra-base hit of the day. But six of the Chisox safeties came with some weak hurling by Indian pitchers in Chicago's big sixth inning.

Four Singles in Row

Don Kolloway and Joe Kuhel opened the sixth quietly by grounding out. Then the Windy City lads turned the fireworks on Jim Bagby, jr. Dario Lodigiani, Luke Appling, Taft Wright and Julius Solters smashed successive singles, two of which drove in runs.

Then Ben Chapman walked to fill the bases, and Mike Tresh came up with a single which scored Wright and Solters. Mel Harder took over Bagby's mound worries.

Harder Walks Two

Harder threw eight pitches. The first was wild, and both runners advanced. Lyons watched three more throws in his general direction, and strolled to first to fill the bases once again. Kolloway, up for his second time in the inning, walked on four pitches, forcing Chapman to score.

Harry Eisenstat climbed the mound, and sent Kuhel to first on four pitches. It was the twelfth consecutive ball by Tribe pitchers. Eisenstat found the plate for the next man up, Lodigiani. He cracked out his second single of the inning. It scored Lyons and Kolloway, and pushed Kuhel to third. Appling, who singled earlier in the inning, smacked a fly to Jeff Heath in deep right, and the merry-go-round halted.

Gipe Defeats Balestri for Beaver Dam Club Championship

Diffenbaugh Trophy Won By Hallock

East Potomac Team Beats Lancaster; Bannockburn Play Ends in Darkness

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Jim Gipe, who has moved among the District's first dozen amateurs since graduating from the public links two seasons ago, added the Beaver Dam Club championship to his titles yesterday with a 5 and 4 victory over Joe Balestri in the 36-hole finals.

Gipe, the Federal champion and last year's Hot Springs Invitation Tournament winner, pulled out of four-hole deficit at the end of the first nine to come within a hole of squaring the match at the halfway mark and in the afternoon his two-under-par golf was too much for Balestri.

Balestri played the first nine in 37 for his four-hole lead but Gipe played the back nine in 37 and was only one down at intermission. A par 36 on the third nine netted the new champion a two-hole lead and birdies on 10 and 11 and a par on 12 won three more holes. They halved 13 and 14 in pars and walked in with Gipe needing par for a 70. He was 78 in the morning.

Mrs. Jack Palmer, whose husband won the first flight consolation, won the playoff for the Ladies Golf Committee trophy with 103-20, 83 to Mrs. Jesse Strong's 111-27, 84.

All even at the end of 18 last week and even again yesterday after a regulation match, they decided to play it off in nine holes and Houghton and Durham won on the last green as the club members brought lanterns to the ninth green so they could putt out.

Francis Keene and Tony Martino, who have been 68 or better in every match, defeated L. Hillyer and W. C. Whittle, 4 and 2; Jim Hayes, club president, and O. D. Kephart won over E. R. Women's Team Play in Final Round Today

The second and third team series of the District Women's Golf Association will be concluded today at Kenwood and Manor, respectively, with Woodmont already in as the second team titlist and Manor heavily favored to retain its place at the head of the third teams.

The other competitive event on the golf card today is a pro-amateur at Washington Golf and Country Club. Pros will play with partners in three handicap classes.

Tomorrow the women golfers will conclude the inter-club team matches with a field day at the home club of each champion. Kenwood will play host to the first teams and Woodmont the second. Manor can be ousted from the third team lead today but it is improbable and the Norbeck linkswomen will more than likely be host to the third teams.

Escapes Dunking

LADISLAUS CIECHANOWSKI, son of the new Polish Ambassador, who escaped the traditional ducking yesterday at the Potomac Boat Club when his crew lost out

Old Dominion Wins Regatta At Potomac

It was Old Dominion day yesterday at the Potomac Boat Club's racing course above Key Bridge, and as a result the 17-year-old son of the new Polish Ambassador was saved from a ducking.

He was spared the honor of being tossed into the drink by his mates simply because the Old Dominion oarsmen from Alexandria chose to win four out of the six racing events and run away with the three-club regatta marking the opening of the Potomac Club's seventy-second year of activity.

Old Dominion won the finals in all three ends of a round-robin regatta, the first of a series involving the Alexandria club, the Potomac oarsmen, the Virginia Boat Club from Richmond and the Arundel Club from Baltimore. The Alexandrians got off to a flying start yesterday by scoring 22 points for an easy victory. Virginia was second with 11, Potomac was third with 9 and Arundel, which couldn't muster a crew, had to forfeit and came out with a scant three points.

Gig Races Feature

The feature of the program—which included four-oared gig, quadruple scull and eight-oared shell racing—turned out to be the gig races in which the Potomacs and the Alexandrians were fighting for the honor of dunking their coxswain in accordance with tried and true custom.

The lad saved from the splash was Ladislaus Ciechanowski, who arrived in America with his father and family only four months ago. Ladislaus, coxswain of the Potomac crew, was all set to take the dive but the Old Dominion crew easily won both the gig and shell events and the right to duck their own coxswain, Jack Franklin.

After a neck-and-neck race down the river over the half-mile course from Three Sisiters island to Key Bridge, however, the Potomac quartet had to suffer the ignominy of watching the Alexandrians give Franklin a lusty toss out into the Potomac.

Potomac, winner of the total points trophy in last year's round robin series, started out in the gig competition by beating Virginia in the first heat and then falling down to lose to Old Dominion in the finals. Potomac lost to the Alexandrians again in the scull race first heat and the jinx continued when Old Dominion pulled away to a one-length victory in the shell finale.

Start New Season

Potomac, just starting its regular season, will depend upon the work of Capt. Jack McSweeney, Allen Hazelton, Ernie Miller, Paul Lanigan, Bill Duffy, Grove Seelig, James Burch, jr., Mike Polouhoff, Hazletine and Ciechanowski.

Ciechanowski, who has been studying at Georgetown, may leave soon, however. The envoy's son was in London during the heavy German blitz air attacks of last September and December and says he wants to get back to join the R. A. F. for a crack at the Germans.

Chick, as he is conveniently called, was frankly disappointed about not getting the ducking honor. A fighter at heart, he also is a skilled flyweight boxer and fought for six years at Ampleforth College in England, where he never lost a battle. He was captain of the boxing team there in 1939.—HAILEY.

Virginians Divide Bill With Motors

Village Motors and the Arlington Dodgers split their Washington-Virginia League double-header at Ballston yesterday, the Motormen taking the opener, 7-5, and losing the nightcap, 4-3.

Wender and Silverman combined for a seven-hit mound effort for Motors in the first game, the outcome being settled in the fifth frame when the winners scored four runs. Silverman came right back and pitched the second game, but was touched for 11 safeties as Hymie Inscoe hurled eight-hit ball for the Dodgers.

Charles H. Tompkins yesterday announced that he will erect a large bowling alley in Alexandria, Va., which will be open for play before September 20. Tompkins, president of the construction company bearing his name, is no newcomer to bowling. He owns the Brookland Recreation Center.

The new plant, to be known as the Alexandria Recreation Center, will consist of 28 alleys, fourteen to the floor. Construction will start this week so that the $10,000 plant will be open for the league season in September.

No manager has ye been chosen for the Alexandria plant although Russ Diehl will aid in buying and installing the equipment.

The new bowling center will be located within the block bounded by St. Asath, Montgomery, Madison and Pitt Avenues. The two-story brick building will be air-conditioned and sound-proofed.

Californians Dominate East Net Tourney

By the Associated Press

New York, June 29.—The first six seeded men in the Eastern Clay Court Tennis Championships, all Californians, were idle again today, but three of the State's junior varsity won six matches to nail down berths in the third round.

Charley Mattman, of the University of Southern California, recent winner of the National Intercollegiate Doubles Championship, eliminated two local players. He defeated Ed Gilbert, 6—2, 6—1, and Stanley Brose, 6—1, 6—2. Bill Channing, of Alameda, defeated Baron Von Kohorn of New York, 6—4, 6—1, and John Gray of Brooklyn, 6—0, 6—1.

Bob Hippenstiel, of the University of California first accounted for Ed Ratbhun of Toledo, 6—0, 3—6, 6—3, and then ousted Irving Schlosser of New York, 6—0, 6—1. The only Californian to fall was Paul Bogart, of Los Angeles, a 6—4, 4—6, 6—3 loser to Dr. Irving Epstein, of New York.

The only seeded player in action today was J. Gilbert Hall, number 7, of East Orange, N. J., who defeated Jim McGuire, of New York, 6—4, 6—1. Gerard Podesta, of Montclair, N. J., Eastern Champion in 1938 and 1939, took care of John Klater and K. Akiyami, both New York, by 6—1, 6—0.

Kovacs Beats Kramer For Jersey Net Title

Orange, N. J., June 29 (AP).—Frank Kovacs 2d, of Oakland, Calif., won the New Jersey State men's tennis championship today by volleying his way to a 1—6, 6—1, 6—3, 6—1 victory over Jack Kramer, of East Los Angeles.

Kramer and Ted Schroeder, of Glendale, Calif., national doubles titlists, displayed the needed power in the pinches to down Bobby Riggs, of Clinton, S. C., and Wayne Sabin, of Portland, Oreg., 4—6, 6—3, 6—2, 6—4, for the doubles crown.

Kovacs succeeded Titlist Elwood Cooke, of Portland, who did not compete in this year's contest. Schroeder and Kramer replaced Cooke and Frank Bowden, of New York.

Lou Diamond, Meehan Study D. C. Boxing

With Promoter Joe Turner threatening to pull out of the boxing picture if tonight's Jones-Montgomery fight doesn't draw, two new sectors were heard from last night.

The first call came from Lou Diamond, the Honest Brakeman, who dropped into town with his fighter, Gus Lesnevich, who now claims the light heavyweight championship.

Diamond confided in foghorn tones that he wants to bring Lesnevich to Washington in a world's title fight with Jimmy Webb this summer—under Mike Jacobs' promotoin. He was en route to New York to see Jacobs, he said.

Second call came from Matt Twomey, manager of Steve Mamakos, who announced that Chick Meehan, president of the new Brooklyn boxing venture in Ebbets Field, will be in town this morning to talk over the local fight situation. Mamakos fights Tami Mauriello July 8 in the inauguration of Meehan's venture.

Carr Brothers Win

Carr Brothers softball team took its second victory of the season over Greenbelt in the Prince Georges League yesterday, 3 to 2, in 10 innings. Tom Dobyns doubled the winning run across the plate.

Kelly Two Ahead of Palumbo in Charles Town Jockey Race

Final Week Will Decide Saddle Battle

Score Is 36 to 34; Langdon Horses Top; Weekend Programs May Set Records

Special Dispatch to The Post

Charles Town, W. Va., June 29.—The opening of the Charles Town Jockey Club's final week of its 48-day spring-summer season will find patrons of the popular course as much interested in the contest between Willie Kelly and Sammy Palumbo for the riding championship as they will be in picking winners.

At the start of the eighth week of the West Virginia season, Kelly, 21-year-old native of Kingston, Pa., is in front in the jockey contest, with 36 winners, having turned in a double on Saturday as the seventh week of the meeting ended. Palumbo, 32-year-old Chicago-born veteran of the saddle, was in second place with 34 winners. Kelly piloted seven winners last week, and Palumbo seven.

Palumbo, now a resident of Quaker Town, Pa., where he owns and operates a small farm, is the general favorite to cop the riding crown at Charles Town, even though he entered the final week of racing two down to the jovial Kelly. These two boys, like the majority of the other riders here, will go to Hagerstown, Md., at the close of the West Virginia season, and will ride throughout the two-week session at that point.

643 Horses Started

A careful check of the records for the first seven weeks of racing at Charles Town shows that in the 336 races a total of 645 different horses were starters.

Leading all owners at the meeting in point of money won is Harry B. Langdon, Charles Town veterinarian. Horses running under the dark blue-red-light blue-and-green Langdon silks have given their owner a very comfortable edge over his nearest rivals for the winnings championship. Next in line is W. C. Waple. Others in the "first ten" are, in the order named: John Bosley, G. G. Waugh, jr., Shenandoah Stable, Capt. Ewart Johnston, James V. (Irish Jimmy) Stewart, Victor P. Noyes, Mrs. M. McNey and J. E. Simons.

For training honors, Dr. Langdon, who conditions his own horses, and Brining are tied, each with nine winners. Next in line with eight is Claude Feltner, trainer of the Shenandoah Stable.

Third of Choices Win

At the end of seven weeks of racing, favorites had scored in 114 of the 336 races, for an average of 33.90 per cent. Eighty-six choices wound up second—25.59 per cent; 43 ran third—12.79 per cent, while only 93 have finished out of the money. This means that only 27.68 per cent of the choices have run unplaced, while 72.32 per cent have finished either one, two or three.

In the seven weeks, there have been 27 even-money or odds-on choices, of which 11 have won; ten have placed, two have finished third, and only four have run unplaced—or out of the money.

The final week of the season is expected to produce the best racing of the meeting, with especially good cards on tap for Friday, July 4, and for Saturday, closing day. It is expected by association officials that, with good weather on tap, attendance records will be threatened next Friday and Saturday. However, with only normal crowds, the meeting is bound to wind up as the most successful in the history of the Charles Town Jockey Club, Inc.

night for Denver, Colo., where, as the District's only qualifier, he will complete in the National P. G. A. Championship.

ARGYLE

Four tied in the Kicker's Handicap Tournament at Argyle, according to Ray Lawrenson, new chairman of the golf committee. E. G. Livingston had 93—22, 71; D. G. Hess, 89—18, 71; Otto Herrmann, 98—17, 71, and Dick Mothershead, 78—7, 71.

WASHINGTON

Dr. W. R. McLister and Logan Manders, jr., tied with gross 74s in the 18-hole event at Washington Golf and Country Club while a tie figured in the low net between Frank Hackett, 83-18, 65, and C. T. Brown, 75-10, 65.

WOODMONT

CONGRESSIONAL

A handicap best-ball 60 by S. T. Crossland and G. H. Hill, jr., won the two-ball best ball tournament at Congressional with H. L. Cobb and G. K. Brobeck second with a 62.

Rock Creek

Eddie Frost helped himself to a hole-in-one at Rock Creek, hitting a four-iron shot into the cup on the third hole of A course, 167 yards. Frost's ace gave him a 34 for the round. He played with Bill Leapley and Al Gordon.

and he completed his day's work by successfully defending the second title he was risking, the 200 meter hurdles which he won in 22.8, only two-tenths of a second off Jesse Owens' world record.

Sets Last Mark

Responsible for the day's final mark was William Brown, the one-man team from Louisiana State University, who created a meet standard of 50 feet, 11½ inches in defense of his running, step and jump crown. The old mark of 50 feet 4¾ inches was set by Roland Romero, Loyola of New Orleans, in 1938. Brown also won the running broad jump with a best leap of 25 feet, 4½ inches, and all together scored 24 points to emerge as the highest individual scorer of the entire two-day junior and senior competition.

Joining Wolcott and Brown in the exclusive double winner class was Irving H. Folwartshny, of N. Y. A. C., who took the final two events of the day, the hammer throw with a heave of 175 feet, 6¾ inches, and the 56-pound-weight affair with a toss of 35 feet, 4¾ inches.

The District of Columbia's entries were completely shut out, with the exception of the ever-reliable Bloxis as they ran themselves ragged against overwhelmingly superior opposition. Gene Ochsenreiter, University of Maryland, who finished third in yesterday's 400-meter grind, entered the senior 800 but after keeping close to Beetham's heels for the first lap, dropped back to last in the final 440 yards and finally dropped out.

Gene's pal, Tommy Fields, also found the twin handicaps of hot heat and hot opposition too much for him, dropped out of the 1,500 meter run on the last lap as he trailed hopelessly.

The 1,500-meter or 1,640-yard race, was one of the day's most closely contested, even though Les MacMitchell's time of 3:53 was disappointing. Philip Leibowitz, of Ohrbach A. A., set all the early pace as MacMitchell and Defending Champion Walter Mehl lay well back in the field.

Going into the last turn a new leader sprang forward in the person of Edward Culp, the 135-pound Xavier College Negro, who won yesterday's junior 1,500, but Culp's lead was shortlived. For it was just about then that MacMitchell let out the throttle, passed runners as if they were standing still and began to open up daylight between him and Culp. But MacMitchell wasn't destined to win in a walk, for, with a tremendous spurt, the bespectacled Mehl also let go with his do-or-die drive.

And down the homestretch they battled it out as Mehl gritted his teeth and dug out after the youthful New York University sophomore. But MacMitchell nally broke Mehl's heart as he has cracked about everyone else's who has ever challenged him in the stretch, and at the tape it was Leslie by several yards.

Brewers Win In 14th Over Small Motors

After 13 innings of tight ball, the Heurich Brewers came up with five runs in the 14th yesterday to take a 9-4 victory over Frank Small Motors in the feature of Capital City "A" League play on the Ellipse.

Heurich's starting pitcher, Downs, gave up all of the Motormen's 13 hits in the first 10 innings. He was removed then in favor of Johnny Murnane, who held the opposition hitless until his mates came up with their winning spree. Flynn went the distance for the losers, issuing 17 safeties.

The Brewers' big inning was started by a walk handed Hershberger. A double by Al Kidwell was sandwiched between singles by Colliere, Murnane, Kaufman and Barry, settling the issue.

The victory retained second place for Heurich, just above the Jacobsen Florist club which downed Orange Disc yesterday, 8-3. Miller Furniture leads the circuit.

Nat Mostow, of Florida University, held the Disc nine to six hits as Jacobsen won easily. The winners registered 14 hits off Randolph.

In Section B the first half wound up with three clubs—Perry's Restaurant, Ninth Street Lunch and Pepsi-Cola—in a deadlock for first place. Perry's shut out Arrow Cab yesterday, as Bellman tossed a seven-inning no-hitter, 8-0, and the Lunch nine beat Solomon's Market, 18-5.

Experts Urge U. S. to Seek Soviet Bases

By Ansel E. Talbert

Copyright by New York Times

A deal with Russia giving American fighting planes use of the strong Soviet air bases on the Siberian Tundra opposite Alaska under an arrangement similar to the bargain on Atlantic bases with Britain is being advocated strongly by a number of influential defense strategists here, it was learned last night.

The project, still in the discussion stage, would dovetail perfectly with the already-begun reinforcement with warplanes, artillery and submarines of the half-completed naval and air base network in Alaska, which the late Gen. William Mitchell called "the key point to the whole Pacific Ocean." Its advocates assert that it would lessen danger of any sudden attack on Alaskan territory and the vital northwest of the United States while the Nation was occupied elsewhere, by giving outposts fully as valuable as the new Atlantic chain stretching from Newfoundland 2,700 miles south to Trinidad.

Japan has been acting with unusual discretion during the last three or four months, but many Far Eastern experts here are of the opinion that the nation is waiting only for a crushing defeat of the Russian armies in the west to seize the long-coveted maritime provinces of Siberia. After the overthrow of the Romanoffs during the World war, Japanese military leaders attempted to take over this territory and were thwarted only by the stiff and continued protests of the United States Government.

Intelligence reports received in Washington from the Far East during the last few days report increasing indications there that Japan is preparing to dust off Gen. Gregory Semenoff, one time hetman of the Siberian Cossacks, who for a time in 1919 and 1920 managed to set up a puppet state in the maritime provinces with Japanese aid under the guise of fighting communism. Gen. Semenoff, according to American officers here who served in the small American Expeditionary Force to Siberia at that time and knew him well, is a fearless adventurer controlling thousands of White Russian exiles in the Far East and has been in Japanese pay for years.

The setting up of a Japanese-controlled state in Siberia under Gen. Semenoff, a half Buriat (a tribe of Siberian nomads) and the only survivor except for Gen. Anton Denikin, of the major White Russian generals, who almost toppled the Soviet regime in the Russian civil war, would in effect put swarms of bombers of an active Axis partner within a few minutes flight of North America, defense leaders here point out. They are of the opinion, further, that although the air base facilities built by the Red Army in Siberia during the past 20 years are "excellent," less than 1,000 warplanes remain in the region.

A great many Soviet planes are being sent westward to meet the threat of the German Luftwaffe, the observers believe, and they fear that the situation, if aggravated by Russian defeats, might prove too great a temptation to the Japanese clique of militarists. These would see a chance to end once and for all the menace off Russian bombers to the flimsy Japanese cities and also a golden opportunity to end Russian aid to Gen. Chiang, still holding out after years of fighting in China.

Democracy Made Mockery, Says Taft

Boston, June 29 (AP).—Declaring dictator nations had been embraced as democratic in the "battle for democracy against the aggressor nations," United States Senator Robert A. Taft (Republican), Ohio, said today the term democracy "threatens to become a fetish without real meaning.

"It has almost come to mean any nation on our side," he declared in a prepared address at the opening of the National Education Association's seventy-ninth convention.

"From including China, where no man was ever elected to office, and Greece and Brazil, ruled unquestionably by dictators," he said, "it has almost been brought to include Russia, under the most ruthless dictator of them all."

Make Crime Pay

By Roger W. Babson

How to Meet Cost of Defense

This week I am writing on probably the most important subject I have ever covered in my column during its 21 years of continuous publication. After a thorough statistical study of the cost of crime, carefully checked with the Federal Bureau of Investigation and other Government authorities, I make this statement. If crime committed in this country could be eliminated and Government peace-time appropriations cut to what they were ten years ago, we could pay for our entire defense program with no increase in taxes and without the issuance of any additional Government bonds.

Naturally, this terrific annual crime expense of over $15,000,000,000 could not be cut immediately; but enough of it could now be eliminated to go a long way in accomplishing the desired purpose.

Crime places a tremendous economic burden upon every community in which it strikes. There are both direct and indirect losses incurred from crime committed which must be considered in estimating any cost of crime.

The most tangible cost is the private losses in income due to annual premiums paid for insurance against criminal acts. This would include burglary, robbery, forgeries, auto thefts, and all other types of theft insurance. There would also be fidelity insurance which would include premiums paid on fidelity policies insuring banks, commercial firms, and private individuals against embezzlements, forgeries, and other defalcations by employes. Riot insurance would also come under this heading.

In the case of losses not covered by insurance, we must consider the direct losses suffered by private citizens from crimes against property which would include arson, malicious mischief, theft and robberies from railroads, express, and similar companies, which carry their own insurance.

Losses due to crimes against the person, such as homicides and wounding and sex offenses, form a large item in any tabulated cost of crime. In homicides, there is a direct loss to the community of the victim's services as a human asset and to the victim's family there is a loss of income. In wounding and mayhem, there is a resultant economic loss to the victim and cost of hospitalization, together with the loss of earning power to his family and to the community at large.

Under sex offenses would come prostitutes. Although it is quite possible to estimate the actual loss that might be incurred, still there is bound to be an economic loss to the family of the prostitute as the earning power of the family is decreased thereby. Commercialized fraud, organized extortion, and racketeering losses due to the use of mails to defraud cover a tremendous amount of the tribute paid by society annually in these phases of criminal activity.

The cost of administration of criminal justice is a large item in the cost of crime. This, of course, would include Federal, State, county, and city courts. The salaries of officials, guards, and other employes of penal institutions, plus the upkeep of the prisons, correctional institutions, reformatories, and asylums must also be taken into consideration and this, of course

Bill Shirer is in the news again!

It was only last week that Bill's new book, "Berlin Diary," telling of his experiences as CBS's correspondent in warring Germany, made its appearance and instantly zoomed into the best seller class.

Now he's been selected by the National Headliners Club as the recipient of a special citation for the "general excellence" of his radio reporting during the last several years. It was one of the annual awards made by the club, composed of leaders in the journalistic world, at its annual banquet at Atlantic City Saturday.

This makes Shirer the first man ever to win two awards from the Headliners Club since it started making them in 1935. In 1938 both Shirer and Ed Murrow, chief of CBS's European staff, won awards for their work in reporting the Austrian anschluss.

The presentation of the silver plaque, with a bas relief of the globe on one side and a torch representing truth on the other, was made at Atlantic City by Angus Parker, an editor of the Atlanta Journal, and chairman of the Headliners Club award board.

Bill's trip to Atlantic City to receive it was something of a busman's holiday. He also did the CBS broadcast from the affair Saturday night.

Berlin Says Planes, Subs Sank 15 Ships

86,500-Ton Bag Claimed; U-Boats Credited With 1 Tanker, 8 Freighters

By the Associated Press

Berlin, June 29.—Destruction of 15 ships totaling 86,500 tons by German U-boats and bomber planes was claimed officially tonight by the German high command.

Submarines raiding convoys and single ships in the Atlantic sank 1 tanker and 7 freighters aggregating 48,700 tons, the command's regular communique said, and torpedoed 1 tanker and 2 freighters of 25,000 tons.

"Destruction of these (latter) ships can be regarded as certain," the communique added, "so that U-boats with this blow accounted for 71,700 tons of enemy merchant shipping."

The high command declared bombers sent to the bottom of waters around England 3 freighters and 1 fishing ship totaling 14,800 tons in attacks Saturday night.

The time of the U-boat attacks was not indicated.

German planes raided harbor facilities on the British southeast coast and attacked the important harbor of Hull on the east coast, the communique said.

"On both sides of the Hull River and on the Humber, several extended fires were observed," the war report said.

Egypt acknowledged the attack on Alexandria caused some property damage, but declared no casualties were reported.)

Nazis Offer No Resistance To R.A.F. Daylight Raiders

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

London, June 29.—Although the R. A. F. continued its daylight offensive over northern France today, when a strong force of British fighters swept over the invasion coast this afternoon for the ninth day in succession, not a single enemy plane rose to meet them.

The British planes all returned safely, the air ministry said.

After 17 consecutive night raids on Germany's vital industrial areas, the R. A. F. relented in the fury of its biggest bombing attack last night when no British bombers operated over Germany, presumably because of bad weather.

The bomber command was at work, however, the air ministry reporting that British bombers last night attacked a German convoy off the island of Ameland. A Nazi antiaircraft vessel and two supply ships of about 3,000 tons each were bombed and one of the supply ships was set on fire. All British night bombers returned safely, the air ministry said.

The communique added that yesterday afternoon the bomber command encountered enemy fighters over the North Sea off the Dutch coast. In the ensuing engagement one British bomber was lost and some of the hostile planes were damaged and one probably destroyed.

The air ministry also revealed today that two more German fighter planes were destroyed during the R. A. F.'s offensive over the Channel and northern France yesterday, making a total of five.

Both planes were shot down by a Polish fighter pilot, who was rescued from the Channel waters after being shot down himself.

Up to a late hour tonight there were no reports of any enemy air activity over any part of Britain today. Bombs were dropped in a few places in England last night, in one case causing some damage and a small number of casualties, the ministry of home security reported.

British Rout Invading Enemy In Big War Game in Ireland

By James McDonald

Copyright by New York Times

Somewhere in Northern Ireland, June 29.—Valuable lessons in military strategy have been learned by British army staff officers, junior officers and men in the ranks as a result of big exercises embracing more than 100 square miles in northern Ireland.

A high army commander, whose name cannot be divulged, said at the conclusion of the war games, the faster the army can get mechanical equipment such as planes and tanks, from British and United States factories, the quicker will the training of the defense forces in northern Ireland reach perfection.

The exercises were designed to demonstrate how to repel a theoretical German invading force that supposedly entered Ulster from the north and also from southern Ireland. The goal of the "invaders"—represented by many thousand British troops—was Belfast where an important objective was a mythical factory in which a secret weapon was being made. The defending forces, equalling the "invaders" in numbers, won the game which lasted nearly a week, by smashing the "enemy" Friday.

The exercises which took place all around a large inland lake, known as Lough Neagh, almost came to an abrupt end at mid-week when the "enemy" divisional headquarters was captured and many of the "enemy" general staff made prisoner.

To allow the exercises to continue, the umpires released some of the captured "enemy" generals but ruled that others were in British hands and therefore out of action.

It transpired that the "enemy" general in command of the "invading" forces, who were termed Hessians, planned to capture Belfast by circling his army to the north around Lough Neagh. The defending general, thinking the foe would try to break through via the southern route, concentrated the bulk of his army in that region when the games began.

Later when reports from planes and scouting parties indicated that the main thrust would be made from the north, he transferred most of his troops northward.

One of the most important lessons learned from the maneuvers was that armies of these days are in danger from all points; the front, the rear and the flanks as well as from the air being vulnerable to attacks by parachute troops, Fifth Columnists and aerial bombs.

One of the most encouraging features of the war games so far as the high commanders were concerned was the excellent cooperation between the ground and the air defense. A new system of bomber control enabled British ground commanders, in a tight corner, to get support from the air in a surprisingly short time.

After 35 Years Man Complains About Noise

By the Associated Press

New York, June 29.—The fabled one-armed paper hanger with the hives was beaten out by several lengths for the patience prize this week.

The winnah and new champeen is Mr. A. J. Honold, of Syracuse, N. Y.

Mr. Honold lives near the railroad tracks, and has lived there for 35 years, and this week, for the first time, he went around to the police station and complained that the train whistles and bells had been bothering him.

They had been bothering him, he said, for exactly 35 years!

Who knows, maybe come June, 1976, the cops will call Mr. Honold back and tell him they'll do something about that noise—right away!

Uruguay Riot Links Fascists

By the Associated Press

Durazno, Uruguay, June 29.—A mob stormed into the streets of this central Uruguayan city tonight to stone the houses of reputed Axis sympathizers after one person was killed and nine were wounded during an earlier street clash.

A regiment of artillery was called out to join the cavalry troop attempting to maintain quiet after the rioting began with shooting at an Italian Red Cross benefit dinner.

The body of the victim, a 70-year-old drawing teacher who was among the crowd of students and other civilians, was placed in a coffin and put in a position of honor in the foyer of the local theater.

Among those injured a 17-year-old student was reported gravely wounded.

Police said the shots which killed or wounded the demonstrators came from automobiles in which a number of men drove up for the dinner. Guests detailed included Italian Vice Consul Andrew S. Musciani, Italian Army Captain Mario Longino and Italian Commander Erasmo Antonio Sealesse.

The demonstrators were standing in front of the home where the benefit was set for midday when the guests drove up. Police quoted witnesses as saying that when the men in the leading automobile heard what the group was shouting they smashed the car windows, poked pistols through the openings, and fired.

Flier, 19, Helps Canada Recruit

Sergt. Pilot John Magee, 19, opened up his own private recruiting station yesterday at his home, 2118 Bancroft Place Northwest.

The young flier, to leave for England some time this week, directed broadcasts over Washington stations, asking for recruits to the Canadian Royal Air Force. He turned his home into a recruiting station for the day, and requested listeners to inquire there for information.

Late last night, more than 20 young men had called at his home, seeking information about enlistment in the R. C. A. F.

The youthful aviator told the potential recruits that their citizenship would not be endangered and he gave them requirements for enlistment.

Young Magee is son of the Rev. John G. Magee, of St. John's Church. He was born in Shanghai and lived there until 1931, when he moved to England. He has been in the United States since 1939 and is an American citizen.

LaGuardia To Speak Here

A rally celebrating the President's executive order banning job discrimination in defense industries will be held at 8 p. m. tomorrow at the Watergate.

Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia, of New York, civilian chief, will be principal speaker, according to an announcement by the March of Washington Committee, which is sponsoring the celebration. The committee called off its July 1 march on the Capital to protest job discrimination immediately after the President issued the proclamation last week.

The order forbids discrimination on defense jobs on account of race, color or national origin. It was issued after the President's attention had been called to barring of Negroes from certain defense industries.

Other speakers at the rally will be A. Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, who had organized the planned march; Walter White, secretary of the National Association for Advancement of Colored People; Jeanetta Welch, organizer of colored women for defense, and Milton Webster, of Chicago. A musical program also will be presented.

Boys to Make Tour

Thirty members of the Boys Department of the Central Young Men's Christian Association will visit the Bureau of Engraving and Printing today. The trip will be one of a series of educational tours made by the boys during the summer.

Guard Ideals, Methodist Parley Told

By Robert Tate Allan
Post Church Editor

Westminster, Md., June 29.—Christian idealism must be safeguarded now to save the postwar world from "moral and spiritual bankruptcy," the Rev. M. L. Rippy warned today at the Baltimore Conference Young Adult Assembly at Western Maryland College here.

Christians must work now to set up a postwar civilization on the basis of realizing that "I am my brother's keeper," in personal, community, national and international relations, he said.

Mr. Rippy is director of adult work for the Methodist Board of Education, and in the 1920's was religious education director at Mount Vernon Place Methodist (then Southern) Church, Washington.

Pioneer in Program

The speaker, whose book on "The Church Working With Young Adults" was reissued this week in revised form, is a pioneer in young adult work, having initiated such a program when at Mount Vernon Church.

This final assembly began at 6 a. m., as delegates participated in Holy Communion in an amphitheater at Harvey Stone Memorial Park on the college golf course. Dr. John Millian, Mr. Rippy and the Rev. Ernest K. Emurian conducted the rites from an improvised communion table in the hedge-bordered rustic sanctuary.

A few minutes later, the throng sang "When I Survey the Wondrous Cross," under the direction of Mr. Emurian, a hymn composer and chaplain of Ferrum (Va.) Junior College.

Prominent Ushers

Many occupations were represented among ushers who passed through the crowd with the communion bread and wine.

G. Allison Long is a lighting engineer for the Baltimore Gas & Electric Co.; John Stoy is a C. P. A. in Washington; Lowell Hetzell is an engineer with the Standard Lime & Stone Co., of Millville, W. Va., and Hammond Odor clerks at the Benning Pepco station, and also serves as president of young adults at Mount Vernon Place Church, Washington.

George Reeves is a District lawyer; the Rev. Wilber H. Wilson is associate pastor at Mount Vernon Church; Grover Hartman teaches at Sidwell Friends School.

Later in the day, it was announced that Walter A. Graham, of Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, Washington, was reappointed for the third term as Baltimore Conference young adult director.

Officers Elected

Elected at business sessions in Baker Chapel were the following conference officials:

Miss Sadie Rice, South Baltimore district, secretary; Miss Elizabeth Powell, East Washington, treasurer; Miss Margaret Wallace, South Baltimore, curriculum secretary; Mrs. Pearl Long, East Baltimore, recreation secretary; William Bown, East Washington, social action chairman, and Mrs. Eleanor Wurts, East Washington, publicity chairman.

Complete reports on the findings of the discussion groups on social action, young adult and the home, fellowship and recreation will be published later.

Church Honors Dr. Ball, 38 Years in Pulpit

When Dr. John Compton Ball came here in 1903 to become minister of Metropolitan Baptist Church, he found a small congregation of 361 parishioners with an annual church income of $5,000.

Although the church was located in a tent, Dr. Ball thought he'd like it and decided to stay for a while. He told his wife that Washington was the cleanest city in the world, "that it was so clean you could eat a meal on the street."

Times have changed, the church now has 2,638 members and an annual income of $40,000, "the streets aren't so clean any more," but Dr. Ball, who yesterday celebrated his thirty-eighth year as pastor of Metropolitan Baptist, still likes it and plans to stay around.

The dean of Baptist pastors in Washington, Dr. Ball was greeted by a large congregation yesterday morning. The Masons were on hand to pay tribute to a member of Washington Centennial Lodge. Marx Kahn, a leading Mason, presented him with a bouquet of flowers, while a poetic tribute, written by William Knowles Fowler, of Bethany Baptist Church, appeared to crystallize the feelings of Dr. Ball's parishioners.

"Hitler," said Dr. Ball, "is hell's instrument to liberty's everlasting ruin. Our God is a God of love, compassion and mercy. Hitler's god is a god of hate.

"Therefore, we need to stand fast in the liberty wherewith' God has made us free. Wherever Hitler triumphs terror reigns. Wherever this spawn of hell is a conqueror it's slavery for the coming generations.

"The devil knows no democracy," he said. "So we can thank God we're in a land where we have an open Bible and an open church and we can hear choirs singing Christian anthems."

40 Men Riding Horse Car Only 45 Minutes Late on 65-Mile Trip

SUNDAY TROLLEY RIDE—Forty persons went for a 65-mile ride yesterday on this antiquated vehicle

Forty men on a horse car alighted at 6:40 p. m. after a 65-mile ride here yesterday, rubbed the seats of their trousers, calculated they were only 45 minutes late and back again in the Present with no fault to find with the Past.

The car they had ridden, dating back to 1894 and kept now as a relic by the Capital Transit Co., was due at the Georgetown carhouse at 5:55 p. m. Truth is, it was due at two dozen stops at varying times during the day but the 1898 motorized cable car which pulled it made many leisurely stops.

The riders, members of the D. C. Chapter, Electric Railroaders' Association, contended that, excepting speed, the horsecars rode like the cars of 1941. They admitted that the longitudial seats vibrated and "may have shaken a young lady's corset rods" at the track crossings but withal 65 miles on a horsecar isn't tiring. And the horsecar itself, turning into the carhouse tracks, refused to dignity those who had spent yesterday in the Present with even a squeak.

It had left the carhouse at 9:10 a. m. traveled all the well known tracks hereabout with an hour's stop in Rosslyn for the 40 passengers to eat. Automobiles frequently followed it, slowing down to the cable car's 10 miles an hour and causing brief slow-ups of 1941 traffic behind. People took photographs. That's all that happens when the 1894 drag is precipitated suddenly into the 1941 whizz.

Leading the excursion was G. F. Cunningham, 3901 Ingomar Street Northwest. Attending, with the other members, was Fay Johnson, Capital Transit employe, 4317 Iowa Avenue Northwest, who remembered riding on just such a car during Cleveland's Administration and who thinks that, after all, it's not such a bad ride when one is nostalgic on a Sunday.

Price-Control Battle Is Seen In Congress

By the Associated Press

A lengthy Congressional battle recalling tariff-making days appeared to be in the offing yesterday as reports spread that the Administration had decided to seek price-control legislation.

Although bi-partisan support seemed likely to develop for the principle of controlling prices to avoid inflation, disagreement over methods was forecast and some Senators predicted that before Congress was through with the question it might find itself writing a bill far more involved even than a tariff measure.

As evidence of Republican support, Senator Taft (Republican), of Ohio, said he was willing to go along on the enactment of statutory restraints against excessive price boosts in basic commodities.

Taft, who has been critical of the efforts of Leon Henderson, the price administrator, to fix a ceiling on prices of certain commodities, said he had drafted legislation to establish a price control board consisting of the Secretaries of Agriculture, Interior and Treasury, as well as representatives of the Federal Reserve System and the Office of Production Management.

Taft contended Henderson was without statutory authority to enforce any of the orders he has issued, adding that if statutory authority were delegated by Congress it ought to be to a tribunal and not to an individual.

In the Senate yesterday, Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, accused Henderson of causing a break in the market prices of wheat and cotton and introduced legislation for removal from office of any official who fixed prices of farm products below "parity" levels.

(Parity is the price an agricultural product must bring to give the producer a return in terms of purchasing power equal to that of the 1909-14 period.)

Chairman Smith (Democrat), of South Carolina, called a meeting tomorrow of Senators and House members from farm States to discuss "what limitation if any shall be placed on the markets of different farm products."

In addition to fixing prices, Henderson has followed the practice of issuing warnings against price increases and practices which he deemed unwarranted. He charged in a statement today that some "unscrupulous" dealers in scrap metals, particularly aluminum and zinc, were attempting to evade price ceilings.

This has been done, Henderson said, by such practices as adding in unwarranted freight charges and sale of dirty scrap at prices fixed for clean scrap.

While Taft said he favored delegating price-fixing powers, Thomas predicted Congress would be faced with so many demands from individual interests for exemptions from the general rule that it might be forced to take over itself the job of establishing ceilings beyond which the costs of commodities might not rise.

The question of putting a ceiling on wages also would be involved, some Senators predicted, but Taft said he did not think it would be practical to attempt this.

Neither, he added, did it appear plausible for the Government to attempt to dictate retail selling levels.

Machinists End Ship Strike On West Coast

By the Associated Press

Oakland, Calif., June 29.—C. I. O. machinists voted unanimously today to end their strike against Oakland and Alameda shipyards, which began May 10.

The vote confirmed a tentative decision reached by the union last Thursday—a decision which subsequently appeared in danger of being rescinded.

A. F. of L. machinists already had decided to go back to their jobs in San Francisco shipyards tomorrow. The C. I. O. action will mean full resumption of work on $500,000,000 in defense contracts which was interrupted by the strike.

Details of the plan under which the C. I. O. will return to work were not immediately available.

The C. I. O. voted Thursday night to end the strike, involving 600 men, provided a separate closed shop agreement could be obtained before tomorrow. Shipyard operators, however, declined to sign, asserting that their coastwide master contract with the A. F. of L. would not allow recognition of the C. I. O.

A. F. of L. machinists agreed to return to work under the master contract after the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Co. agreed to sign the pact which provided a closed shop. The union, however, stipulated for a separate agreement for its 1,200 men within 60 days.

Both C. I. O. and A. F. of L. machinists struck May 10 when yards enforced provisions of the master contract. Wages were fixed at $1.12 an hour with time and a half for overtime. The machinists demanded $1.15 an hour—the former scale was $1—and retention of double time for overtime.

The strike affected 11 Bay area shipyards and drydocks and delayed work on 60 ships, at least 29 of which are for the U. S. Navy.

Incinerator Flare Fatally Burns Takoma Park Girl

An 8-year-old Takoma Park child was fatally burned yesterday when her dress caught on fire as she went to empty trash in an incinerator.

DORIS WINGO

The youngster, Doris M. Wingo, of 637 Carroll Avenue, died a few hours after flames had enveloped her clothes and hair.

The girl's mother, Mrs. Henry W. Wingo, told police that she had sent the child to the incinerator with some trash, and a moment later heard her scream. The mother rushed out and extinguished the flames with her hands, seriously burning herself. The child's father rushed her to Washington Sanitarium, a block away.

Doris, who had celebrated her eighth birthday a week ago Sunday, was a pupil at Takoma Park Elementary School. She also leaves a brother, Harry, jr., 5, and Gloria Jean, 17 months.

Dr. C. E. Hawkes, Montgomery County medical examiner, issued a certificate of accidental death.

Bishop Urges Faith Renewal To Aid Peace

Renewal in the fundamentals of faith was urged yesterday by the Most Rev. Joseph M. Corrigan, Bishop of Bilta and rector of Catholic University, "so that evil men will not stand out against our prayers for peace and understanding."

In welcoming 2,500 religious and lay students to the thirty-first annual summer session of the university at low mass in the Shrine of the Immaculate Conception, the bishop-rector declared that "faith is a habit which comes more readily by realizing the blessings which God bestows on us all."

"In asking you to be mindful of the purposes of your own lives, and to turn your thoughts to the troubles which beset the world, I urge you to think of the Holy Father and to offer your prayers for him."

The bishop urged daily adoration of the Most Blessed Sacrament which will be on exposition in the crypt of the Shrine during the summer session, scheduled to close August 9.

U. S. Must Not Help Russia, Institute Told

Charlottesville, Va., June 29.—Opposition to America giving aid to Soviet Russia—"that which, above all others, has come closest to the reign of Satan on earth"—was voiced tonight by the Rev. John Tracy Ellis, professor of history in the Catholic University of America.

Speaking in a vesper service before the Institute of Public Affairs at the University of Virginia, Dr. Ellis said, "America need not sacrifice or withhold one jot or tittle of aid which it is committed to give Great Britain by a policy of no aid to the Godless regime in Moscow, which now appears to be nearing the day of its merited doom.

"Neither may any expression of opposition to Russian help give warrant for an indirect blessing upon the evils of which the Nazi rulers are notoriously guilty," he continued. "It would ill become a Catholic priest to offer any comfort to the men whose government have suffocated and chloroformed the freedom of the Catholic Church in Germany."

Disclaiming that he expressed the official attitude of the Catholic Church, Dr. Ellis said he voiced his own conviction in opposing American aid in any form being sent "to the support and defense of a government which has out-tyrannized even the sinister and brutal regime of Berlin.

"The church will be perfectly right if it should denounce such assistance," he asserted, "for it is with singularly bad grace that the American Nation should publicly go before the world in defense of the four freedoms—especially the freedom to worship God—and then turn to give aid to Russia.

"I repeat I advocate no withdrawal of aid to Britain. If the men who are the responsible agents of British policy see fit to pass American aid on to Moscow, then let it rest upon their consciences, but at any cost let us not have it on ours."

The speaker said it should surprise no one if the voices of authoritative spokesmen of the Catholic Church were raised in this opposition.

The Rev. F. W. Burnham, pastor of the Seventh Street Christian Church of Richmond, and Dr. Julian B. Feibelman, rabbi of Temple Sinai, New Orleans, also spoke at tonight's vesper services conducted under the sponsorship of the National Conference of Christians and Jews.

Pan American problems will be discussed tomorrow as the second week of the institute gets under way. Rotary Clubs of Virginia are sponsoring the inter-American relations discussions and the Farmington Club before the evening session when talks will be made by Augustin Turner, founder of the first Rotary Club in Chile, and by Professor Hardy C. Dillard, director of the institute.

In his vesper sermon tonight Burnham said that if America wants democracy to survive, the Nation must give attention to the foundation on which democracy rests, for democracy is "not a system but a way of life."

Without religion, he continued, "our civilization and our American way of life would never have existed, and unless it is under-girded by religious faith the liberties for which our fathers shed their blood and pledged their fortunes and their sacred honor will be lost and disappear. To prevent that catastrophe let Jew and Catholic and Protestant stand united.

"At this moment our democracy is threatened not alone from without, beyond the seas, but from within as well. The forces of communism, of fascism, and of naziism have pledged themselves to wipe it out. The destruction of freedom in religion is their first objective."

Rabbi Feibelman said western civilization was poised upon the climax of the industrial revolution and was about to admit that it has failed, "at least, if we persist in retaining our standards of judgment as we inherited them.

"One test—we can improve everything except man. Before our eyes, in a perfectly marvelous civilization, man reverts to barbarism and childishly tears down the house he built."

He listed four inescapable duties we must pursue in these critical days:

"1. The church and religious groups must set the example, must teach, and defend the principle that the responsibility for the protection and enjoyment of rights on the part of minor groups is a responsibility of major groups. . . .

"2. That the religious groups shall seek to inculcate, especially into the youth, a resounding and a positive faith in democracy. . . .

"3. We should certainly be able to do as much for our youth in time of peace as we are able to do for them in time of war. In war we give them ideals, patriotism, God, freedom. In peace we leave them alone.

"4. Our manifest duty, in spite of war, defense, is to keep sacredly evident in preachment and in conviction that peace is the fruit of righteousness; that war is horror, barbarous, and that man can and must pass from this depth to a conceivable height of peace."

Finds 2 Stolen Cars and Thief

Private Harvell Regan, of the traffic division, was halted yesterday in the 1000 block of Maine Avenue Southwest by Miles W. Olson, of Beltsville, who reported that his car had been stolen from the block while he was dining.

On a hunch, Regan rolled around the block on his motorcycle, and sure enough, at Ninth and I Streets Southwest he found the missing vehicle. Immediately behind it he recognized another auto belonging to Edward E. Reid, of 1760 Willard Street Northwest, reported stolen earlier in the day. A white man was taking a wheel off the second car when Private Regan stepped up.

According to Regan, the wheel remover admitted stealing both cars and was undertaking to strip one. Police said that the stripper had been sought by them for the past two months and that they were happy to have him in custody.
